Post Commander Charles R. Richards will preside and a medley of patriotic songs will be sung by Wayne Rohl. A social hour will precede the dinner. All Legion and Auxiliary members are invited to attend.

Nov. 10-14 is Winter Hazard Awareness Week

Governor Arne Carlson has proclaimed the week of November 10-14 as Winter Hazard Awareness Week for the State of Minnesota. The winter season offers several holidays, vacations to either cold or warm climates, varied outdoor sporting activities, cozy evenings by the fireplace or woodburning stove, and the great Minnesota challenge, winter driving. In recognition of the many pleasures winter offers, the chosen theme of the week is "Winter Is Fun . . . Make It Safe."

In his proclamation, Governor Carlson notes that the winter season offers many recreational opportunities, yet a multitude of "winter hazards" injure and kill many Minnesotans each year. However, "winter hazards" are highly preventable and awareness of the hazards can help Minnesotans lower their risk.

During the 1996-97 winter season there were 11 separate blizzards across Minnesota. Between December and March, approximately 70 percent of all house fires occurred. Home heating devices were the leading causes of structural fires.

Winter storms and weather conditions also create hazardous driving conditions. Minnesotans need to be conscious of proper winter driving techniques, safe driving near snowplows and winter survival methods if stranded in a vehicle.

Minnesotans are also encouraged to obtain adequate insurance to protect them from the financial catastrophe that may result from death, personal injury, or property damaged caused by "winter hazards."

Governor Carlson also took note of another winter hazard. His proclamation notes that numerous Minnesotans become ill each year from pollutants and microbes carried through the confined air of heated buildings.

Volunteers provide important services at NWMC

Recognition banquet to be held tomorrow at Zion Lutheran Church

by Kathi Carlson
The Times Reporter

Quilts provide comfort and warmth. They are created from pieces of fabric in different sizes, shapes and colors. Northwest Medical Center chose a quilt as an expression of its commitment to the community in 1997.

A beautiful quilted wallhanging complements the decor in the main lobby of the hospital. It bears the signatures of the staff, volunteers and members of the board of directors. The quilt is a symbol of the unique talents and skills held by strong threads which together are committed to providing comfort, warmth and care to the community.

Volunteers are very important pieces of the quilt, and the quilt theme will continue at a luncheon honoring Northwest Medical Center's volunteers tomorrow at 11:30 a.m. at Zion Lutheran Church.

According to Volunteer Services Director Bev Rupprecht 75 invitations have been sent for the event.

Volunteers services are used in many different areas throughout Northwest Medical Center.

The gift shop and coffee shop are operated solely by volunteers.

Rupprecht referred to the coffee shop as the "best kept secret in town." Currently adorned for fall, the room's decorations change with the seasons and complement the rich hunter green wallpaper and upholstery of the chairs and stools. Coffee is only 40 cents a cup, and the sweet treats baked daily right at the hospital are as reasonably priced. Visitors who visit the C&NC Unit on a daily basis are often coffee shop regulars.

Hospital Gift Shop volunteer Thelma Smith bags a customer's purchases. The well-stocked gift shop includes gifts and collectibles for every season and every reason. The shop is manned entirely by volunteers with many working regular shifts on the same day of each week.

The gift shop offers much more than a place to buy a get well card and gift for a hospital patient. Ordell Hegstahl is the shop's buyer, and the well stocked shop offers something for every occasion. Currently, interesting new Christmas collectibles line the organized glass shelves. Hospital employees, often too busy to shop elsewhere, use the shop for many of their gift buying needs.

Rupprecht is excited that many of the coffee shop and gift shop volunteers have come to feel ownership in the shops and work regular shifts on the same day of each week.

The soft drink and candy machines throughout the hospital are also maintained by volunteers and provide a large source of revenue.

Money earned by the gift shop, coffee shop and pop and candy machines goes to the Hospital Auxiliary which in turn uses the funds for hospital improvements. Most volunteers are auxiliary members. One of its biggest projects is the purchase of new car seats which are given to the parents of each baby born at Northwest Medical Center. Members are also awaiting the arrival of new furniture purchased for the outpatient surgical waiting area.

Volunteers provide a wide variety of services within the C&NC Unit. They transport residents to and from the activity area and assist the activity director with projects as needed. Afternoon volunteers assist staff serving coffee and treats to residents and their guests. In the early evening residents gather for a reading group where a volunteer reads newspapers, books and other materials to the residents to stimulate their minds. Volunteers also assist staff with a limited number of residents for outdoor trips as they go shopping, to the county fair or on field trips.

Volunteers act as patient escorts assisting with direct patient transportation to physical or occupational therapy or other areas of the hospital as needed.

Magazines are distributed to the various lounges throughout the hospital by volunteers, and a book cart volunteer circulates a cart among the patients offering reading material.

Family members are assisted by a volunteer in the outpatient waiting area with directions, coffee and other things that make their wait more comfortable.

Finally, volunteers are used for a variety of special projects that take place throughout the year at Northwest Medical Center.

Every effort is made to match the volunteer with her or his area of interest. Volunteers range from 12 to nearly 90 years of age. Rupprecht is especially pleased that a number of younger women have become involved in the facility's volunteer program and serve on the auxiliary's board of directors.

Bev Rupprecht has a big soft spot for the junior volunteers. About 25 juniors participated this past summer. She described them as "so fun" and told of how they added "spark" to the entire establishment. Junior volunteers as young as 12 are put to work doing a variety of tasks which include working on scrapbooks, helping in the coffee shop or with newsletters. Many duties give youth the opportunity to explore a career in the medical field.

Volunteers are expected to sign in and out as she or he arrives and leaves. The record is used to provide information for the recognition program, for certification of time the volunteer worked in the hospital and for periodic reports. The information is kept in a file for each individual volunteer along with their application and certification of annual health requirements. Junior volunteer files include a parental permission form.

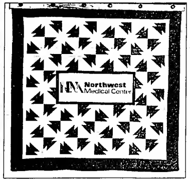
Between May of 1996 and April of 1997 volunteers logged 6,450 hours at Northwest Medical Center. The value of the services they provide is estimated at over $8 per hour.

Bev Rupprecht describes hers as the "greatest volunteers." She describes herself as "excited" about the recognition banquet tomorrow. Volunteers receive a pin for 50 hours of service. For every 100 additional hours logged, a bar is given to be added to the pin.

Twelve volunteers have accumulated over 1,000 career volunteer hours with the highest volunteer at 12,600 hours. That computes into 315 40-hour weeks or over six years of full-time work. Until tomorrow, Rupprecht is tight-lipped about who these people are. Photographs in next week's Times will reveal the identities of these dedicated volunteers.

The warm and comforting quilt is a fitting symbol for the hospital. Providing unique talents and skills in many areas, there is no doubt that volunteers are important pieces of the quilt and help make the patchwork of Northwest Medical Center fit together as a whole.

Muriel Marcil is a regular volunteer at the coffee shop at Northwest Medical Center. In addition to coffee and the freshly baked offerings of the day, Muriel delivers service with a smile. She is one of many NWMC volunteers who will be honored at a recognition banquet on Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at Zion Lutheran Church.



This lovely quilt hangs in the main lobby of Northwest Medical Center and bears the signatures of the staff, volunteers and members of its board of directors symbolizing the unique talents and skills that work together to form a whole. The quilt theme will be continued at a recognition banquet honoring NWMC's volunteers on Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at Zion Lutheran Church.

Reflections

On Principles Of Truth

David Bray
Our Saviour's Christian Academy

RFRA — how many of you know what that stands for? How about the Supreme Court cases Engel vs. Vitale and Abington vs. Schempp? OK, last one: Planned Parenthood vs. Casey? Ever heard of these before? If not, don't feel bad, because you're part of the majority of people who have no clue what's going on in our government.

The Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) is legislation that had originally flown through the U.S. House of Representatives in 1993 by a unanimous vote and then was approved in the Senate 97 to 3. Out of 535 legislators, only three opposed it and those three exceptions were based on mere technicalities.

What's so special about this act? Well, this act is considered one of the most vital to protect historic liberties guaranteed to us by God and declared in the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. This act was put together to protect our religious freedom and yet, on June 25, 1997 our U.S. Supreme Court struck down this legislation.

But guess what? The U.S. Constitution, in Article Three, Section Two, Clause Two reads: "... in all the other cases before-mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make."

This says the Supreme Court has no business telling Congress what to do in this matter but, instead of Congress taking the power that was given to it and using it appropriately, it has reneged on its responsibility and authority. This is just one of many things that are causing our country to deteriorate in so many ways.

Another point worth considering is the case of Planned Parenthood vs. Casey. Did you know that this decision was not only significant but perhaps the most dangerous decision made by the Supreme Court ever? In this case a mere nine people decided that "At the heart of liberty is the right to define one's own concept of existence, of meaning, of the universe and the mystery of life."

This "mystery passage," as it is called, could justify anything from suicide clinics to inter-species marriages. Personally, I think Chuck Colson put it best by saying, "the mystery passage could mean absolutely anything to a future court — including the right to marry your sister if you wish." Whatever happened to "the law of Nature and of Nature's God" which has been the basis of our basic liberties for over 210 years?

How about the recent episode of a school teacher who sexually molested a 13 year old student, and then took her to a clinic to get a shot of Depo-Provera (a contraceptive) so he could keep on having sex with her? And get this — according to the current law, her parents are not permitted to be told of the medical visit. What kind of law is that? Is this a law you want in our country? Is this logical law-making?

Both the Supreme Court and Congress should know better than to do what they are doing (and not doing). What is our country coming to when the Supreme Court usurps power from Congress which the Constitution gives to Congress? Don't forget it's still OUR country, and each one of us has a voice which needs to be heard by writing our representatives and senators about this RFRA and many other issues where the Constitution is either ignored or perverted. But more importantly, we must return our country to its original foundation—God. Our founding fathers based this country on God and His principles of equity and justice. Read the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution if you question this.

Sherri Kuznia and Steven Olson wed September 27

Sherri Lynn Kuznia and Steven Rae Olson were wed Saturday, September 27 at a 4 p.m. ceremony at the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls.

Parents of the bride are John Sr. and Marion Dague of Halma and Paul and Peggy Atkinson of Marion, OR. The groom is the son of Eugene and Gertrude Olson of Alvarado.

The bride wore a gown of off white satin. The bodice featured beaded lace appliques that also complimented the high neckline, mutton sleeves and medium length train. A full petticoat lined the floor length skirt which was accented by a large beaded bow at the waist in back. Her veil was held by a beaded crown that featured beads which hung to her shoulder on the right side. Her bouquet was a cascading combination of white roses, peach tiger lilies, small orange and white flowers, ivy and fern backed by a white fan trimmed with peach ribbons.

Shirley Dague of Erskine, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honor. The groom's sister Wendy Olson of Crookston was the bridesmaid. The bride's attendants wore long peach gowns which featured long puffed sleeves with bows on the sleeves and back. Lace complimented the necklines. They carried single long-stemmed white roses accented by fern and white and peach ribbons.

Amber McAnnany of Alvarado, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore an off-white brocade gown. Bows complimented the back and long puffed sleeves. She carried a basket decorated with flowers, and the flowers in the basket were presented to the parents and grandparents of the couple.

The groom was attired in an off white tuxedo with tails. A grey and silver ascot tie completed his ensemble. His white rose boutonniere was accented by small white and peach flowers, baby's breath and white ribbon.

The groom was attended by Mike Olson of Grafton, his friend and bestman, and his brother and groomsman Brian Olson of Alvarado. Ushering the guests were Nick Kuznia of Angus, son of the bride, and Paul Olson of Underwood, cousin of the groom. They wore grey tuxedos with tails and grey and silver ascot ties. Their white rose boutonnieres were accented with small white and peach flowers.

The mother of the bride wore a peach suit, and the groom's mother wore a light gray suit. Their corsages were made up of three white roses, peach tiger lilies, baby's breath and fern accented by white and peach ribbons.

The fathers of the couple were attired in grey tuxedos. Their ties and boutonnieres were the same as the other men of the wedding party.

The groom's grandmother Elizabeth Herrmann of Germany was an honored guest.

The bride's brother and sister-in-law Larry and Sue McAnnany of Alvarado hosted the reception. Betty Dornady of St. Hilaire, friend of the bride, attended the guest book.

A two-tiered cake was arranged over a gazebo which housed a miniature bride and groom and was centered between two side cakes. The cakes and gazebo were decorated with white roses, peach tiger lilies and greenery.

The cake was cut by Mitch, Connie and Jessie Hemmich, friends of the couple. The bride's niece Crystal Dague served punch.

The gift table was attended by Daniel and Amy McAnnany, nephew and niece of the bride. The groom's uncle Alvin Olson videotaped the event.

A white Alpine carriage drawn by two white horses and driven by Bob Hilgemann of Dilworth provided transportation for the newlyweds.

Sherri is a 1978 graduate of Strandquist High School. From 1982 to 1985 she studied to be a veterinarian's assistant through a home study course.

Steven is a 1988 graduate of Alvarado High School.

Sherri and Steven are both employed by Arctic Cat, Inc. and are at home in rural Angus.

Can you winterize your body?

Just like winterizing your car, you can take steps to prepare your body for cold weather. For instance, did you know that every time you exhale, your body loses water? In cold temperatures, you can see the water vapor in your breath when you talk and breathe. And just because the weather turns cold doesn't mean you stop perspiring.

That's why it's as important in winter, as in summer, to maintain a high level of fluid intake. Indulge in hot soups and drinks which not only provide liquid, but warm you up as well. Don't forget that alcoholic and caffeinated beverages actually contribute to both dehydration and your body's heat loss, so avoid them whenever you can.

Another way to get ready for cooler temperatures is to lower the thermostat in your home. Setting it a little cooler will not only save on heating bills, but will also help your body adjust to cooler temperatures outside. Setting the heat at 65°F should provide adequate warmth as well as help set your body's thermostat for winter weather.

Care Beyond Cure

When all the therapies have been attempted to treat a disease, a common saying is, "There is nothing more we can do." With Hospice of the Red River Valley, much more can be done.

During November, which is National Hospice Month, Hospice of the Red River Valley is trying to make people more aware of the benefits of hospice services, says Marinell Waterworth, program manager in Thief River Falls.

Research has shown that, if given a chance, most patients facing a life-limiting illness would choose to spend their final days surrounded by loved ones in an atmosphere filled with love, comfort and care. Many people are not aware that such an option is available. That option is hospice.

"Hospice is a comprehensive, medically-directed, team-oriented program of care that seeks to treat and comfort patients and their families at home or in a home-like setting. It's a philosophy of care that accepts dying as a natural part of life and doesn't hasten or postpone death," Marinell says.

Hospice of the Red River Valley – a non-profit organization – provides physical, emotional, spiritual and grief support for the terminally ill and their families in a setting of their choice.

In Thief River Falls, it started as Northland Community Hospice in 1983. "Two years ago we merged with Hospice of the Red River Valley, became Medicare certified and subsequently changed our name," she says. The Thief River Falls office serves Pennington, Red Lake and Marshall counties. Other Hospice of the Red River Valley offices are located in Fargo, Mayville and Lisbon, ND and Detroit Lakes.

What makes Hospice special? Hospice provides: Comfort (palliative) care – managing pain and symptoms; care for the whole person and the family; and home care, team care and grief care.

Hospice is for all people diagnosed with six months or less left to live. "That's not to say that six months is a limit, we've had people in the program for up to two years," Marinell says. "Unfortunately, though, many people utilize hospice services for their last few precious days and are unable to take advantage of all the services we offer."

When someone enters the program, she says the goal of the care shifts from curing the disease to making the person comfortable. Freedom from pain and its symptoms allows persons to live their remaining days more fully.

Hospice uses a combination of medications, counseling and therapies to control pain and its symptoms. When physical symptoms are managed, then important emotional and spiritual issues can be addressed.

The care is given using a team approach with the team members being: physician, nurse, social worker, chaplain, volunteers, personal care nurses and a family support specialist.

The physician oversees the plan of care and collaborates on the comfort (palliative care).

Nurses, who have an expertise in pain and symptom management, keep the patient as comfortable as possible. The nurse teaches the family and person what to expect as the disease progresses, teaches the family to give medications, and teaches other necessary skills. The nurse "empowers" the family to take care of their loved ones at home. Nurses are available by telephone 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The social worker is best described as an advocate for the family. This team member facilitates access to community resources like Meals on Wheels and offers guidance in getting financial and legal affairs in order and can also help the family problem-solve.

The chaplain helps the person and the family to explore the spiritual issues they may be experiencing. The chaplain also acts as a liaison with the person's faith community.

"Our hospice was built by volunteers and today they still remain an important part of our program," Marinell says. Volunteers provide support and companionship, give respite to the care-giver, provide transportation to doctors' appointments or grocery shopping, and can be a support during the grief process. In Thief River Falls, Marinell says 30 volunteers provided more than 800 hours of service during 1996.

Personal care nurses can be in the home up to seven hours each week. They assist with personal cares like bathing, light housekeeping, linen changes and meal preparation.

The family support specialist provides support for the family during the grief process. Grief support is available to families for up to a year after the person's death through self-help mailings, one-on-one visits and grief support groups.

But perhaps Hospice's greatest goal is to enable a patient and family to live fully. "We try to help people make the best of the time they have – to spend their time with the people who are important in their lives," Marinell says.

"When we enter this world, we're surrounded by love, comfort and care. Don't we deserve the same when we leave?" she asks. "That's what we do at Hospice."

ACTIVITIES

Thanksgiving Songs To Sing

The following Thanksgiving songs are fun to sing at turkey time.

I'm A Little Turkey
(Sung to the tune of "I'm A Little Teapot")

I'm a little turkey, short and fat.
I like to gobble, how about that!
My daily corn, I would not miss
And when I talk, I go like this:
Gobble, Gobble!

Gobble, Gobble
(Sung to the tune of "If You're Happy and You Know It")

Mr. Turkey struts around, struts around.
Mr. Turkey struts around, struts around.
Mr. Turkey struts around,
Eating grain off the ground.
Mr. Turkey struts around, struts around.

Mr. Turkey's big and round, big and round.
Mr. Turkey's big and round, big and round.
Mr. Turkey's big and round,
He's the biggest that we've found.
Mr. Turkey's big and round, big and round.

"Gobble, gobble!" says the turkey, that's his sound.
"Gobble, gobble!" says the turkey, that's his sound.
"Gobble, gobble!" is his sound,
He gobble-gobbles 'til he's found.
"Gobble, gobble!" says the turkey, that's his sound.

Now Thanksgiving Day is here, day is here.
Now Thanksgiving Day is here, day is here.
Now Thanksgiving Day is here,
Mr. Turkey needs to fear.
Now Thanksgiving Day is here, day is here.

SCAVENGER HUNT

For next week's Activities feature, you will need a wooden ice cream spoon, various colors of construction paper, glue and wiggle eyes.

BOOK OF THE WEEK

The Thief River Falls public library invites you to browse through its new selection of children's books including the following:

Wallace Karen, Imagine You Are a Crocodile. Vivid illustrations capture the world of the crocodile as the jaw-snapping, scaly creatures lie in the murky water waiting patiently for a catfish dinner.

Getz, David, Floating Home. When eight-year-old Maxine becomes the world's youngest astronaut, she is amazed at all of the preparation it will take before she is ready for lift off.

VIDEO VARIETY

Rock with Barney. Enjoy singing and dancing with Barney and his friends as they explore a movie studio. Using props and sets, the children dress up, perform a puppet show, and sing while Baby Bop dances.

MAGAZINE MENTION

In the October issue of New Moon you'll learn all about Ethiopia's customs. Examples include putting a piece of iron near a pillow during childbirth because of the belief that Satan fears metal, or at weddings when girlfriends of the bride sing insulting words to the groom and play tricks on him to make him prove his worth.

Remember that the Thief River Falls public library has preschool storytime every Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. Also remember to check out the parenting corner by the children's room for new information and helpful hints for busy parents on books, reading and much more.

PARENTING TIPS

What To Do In The Grocery Store To Help Children Behave (Without Spanking, Hitting or Yelling)

Shopping in a grocery store can be a frustrating experience when you have to shop with small children. On the other hand, it can also be a fun educational experience. Think ahead and try to prevent problems before they occur. The following suggestions may help you. Remember that no one thing works for every child or every time. Be creative as you try to discover what will work with your child.

- Give your child a responsibility (help look for certain items, match coupons to the labels, etc.)
- Praise your child for appropriate behavior.
- Bring a favorite blanket, toy or book for your child.
- Don't let your child out of sight. If your child is out of the cart, hold hands, let your child hold onto the cart or help steer the grocery cart.
- For a small child, tie a favorite soft toy to the handles of the shopping cart.

Good luck as you try some of these ideas.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Discuss the rules for shopping before you enter the store.

SPEAKING OF

Sherry LaCoursiere

. . . The Election

Writing a column for a paper that is dated the day after election day, but is published on election day is very difficult. It is especially difficult because I am writing this column Monday night, the day before election day.

Anyway, for me, sitting here the day before election day, what will happen tomorrow is a toss up. For you, reading this on the day of the election, you may already have some idea of how the election will go, or at least you know how you voted and hoped the rest of the people did too. For those of you who have received your paper on Wednesday, there is no doubt about how the election turned out.

However, I would like to take a stab at a little predicting this year. The only election results I am really certain about are those of the aldermen. (Dare we call it a race?) I am absolutely certain that all of the aldermen running will be reelected, since there are no other contenders for the positions. As to all of the other races, I don't have a clue - but I'm willing to give it a shot. My predictions are based on a good voter turnout - all bets are off if few people make it to the polls.

As for the single slot for the five-year school board term, I'm afraid I have to agree with the editor of The Times. I believe that Barb Jauquet-Kalinoski will be the winner, with Twistol second, followed by Spears and Lindgren. As to the three-year school board term, I think that Dr. Wigum will edge out Olson. Even though Olson was a favorite at the last election, I feel the six-way race will make a difference. Olson will follow Wigum closely, then Davis, Juhl, Teigland and Kappes.

The three way mayoral race will be interesting. I feel that the other two contenders will give Mayor Reece a run for his money, but they will not prevail. The voters are looking for another candidate, but I'm afraid the challengers are just not strong enough and this year is not the year for a change. I think Mayor Reece will withstand the onslaught, but not by any large margin. The voters will be using their votes to finally give Mayor Bob an edge in this election.

The special school levy vote is the one that will pique the most interest in this election and is the most difficult to predict. If enough voters turn out, I believe that the levy will pass by a small margin. The untiring efforts of Superintendent Robidoux to inform the people and answer questions will overrule the nay-sayers.

And that is how I think the election will go. Remember, these are just the opinions of one person, and they are not meant to influence you in your voting (provided you are reading this on election day).

Another thing to remember, it is against the rules for anyone who does not vote to say anything for or against the election results. That privilege is reserved only for voters, so I don't want to hear any grumbling and griping from non-voters after the election is over.

May the best man or woman win and good things come for the city in the future.

Safety committee considers anhydrous ammonia storage problem

Just what to do about the storage of anhydrous ammonia within the city limits has been a question considered by the Thief River Falls City Council for many years. Over the years, they have discovered that finding the answer is much more complex than simply passing an ordinance banning the storage of the fertilizer chemical within city limits.

Monday afternoon, the Public Safety Committee, a committee of the city council, revisited the issue with Howard Person, Pennington County's Solid Waste officer. Currently, Thief River Falls has a moratorium in place preventing the expansion of anhydrous ammonia plants within the city limits, and a limit on repairs that can be made to the facilities.

Cenex and Farmers Co-op are the only two private fertilizer dealers within the city limits that store anhydrous ammonia within its limits. Person said that without financial incentives, those two operations can not afford to move their operations. Person said they also don't appear too interested or enthused about changing our facility. If they are forced to quit, Person said he expects they would consider some kind of legal action. Person added that because of the early fall and poor crops, there is more anhydrous ammonia in storage than ever before.

Members of the committee were not sure what tax breaks the city could offer, but are reluctant to let the issue remain idle until someone is injured or killed. Another issue that would certainly be discussed would be where to locate a facility outside city limits. Prevailing winds, rail access, and zoning are just a few things they would have to take into consideration.

Upon occasion, there have been accidental leaks of anhydrous ammonia, which can cause illness and death. To address the issue, Police Chief Ken [illegible] said there have been safety classes on handling of anhydrous ammonia. In his opinion, the greatest chance for an accident would occur because someone was in a hurry and left a valve open.

In May of last year police and firefighters were called to [illegible] Bond Home because of a strong odor of anhydrous ammonia. During its investigation, police were unable to determine where the anhydrous ammonia was coming from.

During the fire at the elevator on Eighth Street last year, there was considerable concern initially because there were some chemicals in one of the buildings that caught on fire. Local officials did not know what chemicals were in the building or how to handle the situation. The situation brought to light the whole issue of chemicals in the community, which would encompass more than just anhydrous ammonia.

Dale Weinberg, chairman, noted that their (local fertilizer dealers) comeback would be that the city has a lot more dangerous stuff coming through town on rail than what's stored at their facilities.

Dave Carlson, another member of the committee and city council representative, said removing anhydrous ammonia from the city limits would be like "taking the slingshots, but leaving the guns behind."

What kind of chemicals and how much is being stored at facilities in the community are, by law, supposed to be reported to the fire department, said Chief [illegible]. He said in his experience everyone prepares the list but does not get it to the fire department. In his opinion, the reason it isn't getting done is because no one is overseeing the matter.

At the conclusion of the discussion on the matter, the committee asked that someone from the police department and fire department talk with the fertilizer dealers and determine how much anhydrous ammonia is being stored at the facilities.

In other business, the committee approved a revision of a job description and memo of understanding regarding the fire chief's duties, approved a measure to advertise for a full time firefighter, approved an application for two FEMA mobile home trailers for public safety use, reviewed temporary storm and evacuation plans for Challenger manufactured home park, discussed a potential city ordinance limiting train whistles, reviewed a printed card detailing city ordinances for skateboarders, bikers and in-line skaters, and a number of personnel items.

Enrollment up at MnSCU schools

An increase in the number of full-time students at the 36 member institutions of the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities indicate that economic and demographic factors working against increased enrollments may be changing.

According to MnSCU analysts, increased full-time student head counts typically portend a rise in enrollments. The number of full-time students at Minnesota community colleges and comprehensive community and technical colleges rose 3 percent and part-time students decreased by 4.5 percent. These colleges are the only MnSCU institutions that automatically report computerized full- and part-time figures. Independently reported information from the state universities and technical colleges also support a rise in full-time students.

Two factors are evident:

The smaller high school classes of the 1980s are giving way to gradual increases in high school class size over the next seven years. Those increases in college-age young people, approximately 17 percent by 2003, often called the baby boomlet, should be seen in higher enrollments at the public colleges and universities.

Minnesota's low unemployment and strong job market over the last two years have attracted potential students away from two-year institutions, in particular. A slowing of enrollment declines at the colleges may indicate the trade-off of a good job for career education is less attractive today, and employers are looking at gaining longer term career enhancement.

The number of students registered for fall quarter at Minnesota's state universities and two-year public colleges is stable after several years of declining enrollments. A total of 144,880 students were enrolled at MnSCU institutions on the 10th day of fall quarter 1997, down 0.1 percent or 184 students from fall 1996 enrollment of 145,064.

Enrollment at the seven state universities is up slightly, with a 0.8 percent increase over 1996. A total of 52,888 students were enrolled at the universities on the 10th day of classes. Enrollment at the 29 two-year public colleges was down slightly, with a 0.7 percent decrease over 1996. A total of 91,992 students were enrolled on the 10th day of the fall term at the state colleges.

These preliminary head count figures provide a snapshot of the number of students attending on a specific day. Final fall-term enrollment at many of the colleges and universities is likely to be higher because some courses start later in the term and not all student registrations have been recorded at some campuses.

"We are very encouraged by these numbers because there is an apparent reversal of trends," Morris Anderson, chancellor of the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities. "With more full-time students in the system, it is clear that our institutions overall are beginning to see an upswing in enrollments."

Percentage changes in fall head counts vary by institution. A number of colleges and universities reported specific stories.

Northwest Technical College reported only a slight drop in mostly part-time students, good news for the college that faced significant problems with the spring 1997 flooding of the Red River. Carol Buck, Northwest vice president for student services, was overjoyed that the college rebounded from the flood. "The Minnesota State Colleges and Universities implemented a strong flood response to help students finish spring quarter and continue their programs. "Our neighbors across the Red River have seen enrollments drop precipitously," said Buck. "We did a good job in helping and retaining students."

Bemidji State University, which serves students primarily from Northern Minnesota, saw a decrease of just 12 students from year to year but reported a significant increase in off-campus students who take classes through ITV extension and other distance learning programs. Bemidji State provides distance learning classes in industrial technology and elementary education, for example, to George Brown College in Toronto, Canada, and Metropolitan State University in the Twin Cities.

North Hennepin Community College reported enrollments down 1.4 percent but showed an improvement of 8 percent in full-time students.

Southwest State University showed the greatest gains in enrollment, 15.3 percent over last year. Metropolitan State University in the Twin Cities reported a 5.5 percent gain.

Another bright spot was Minneapolis Community and Technical College, which reported an 8 percent increase in students in the first year of consolidation. Typically, the merged technical colleges and community colleges show some enrollment declines as the consolidation of systems is ironed out.

The Minnesota State Colleges and Universities system is the largest single provider of higher education in the state of Minnesota. The system serves approximately 145,000 students during fall quarter and a total non-duplicated head count for a full academic year of about 238,000 students. MnSCU has 54 campuses and includes community colleges, technical colleges, comprehensive community and technical colleges and state universities.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I heard that there will be a 2.1 percent cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) this year. When will it arrive?

A. Social Security beneficiaries will see the increase effective with payments received in January, 1998. Supplemental Security Income (SSI) recipients will see the increase in payments received December 31, 1997. The automatic COLA adjustment is made annually.

Q. What is the COLA based on?

A. The automatic adjustment became effective in 1975. It is based on the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W).

Q. I am nearing retirement age, divorced, and have a minor child living with my ex-spouse. Will my child get benefits when I retire? If yes, will this lower what I receive?

A. Assuming your child is still of eligible age and meets other requirements when you start Social Security, he or she should be able to receive Social Security benefits. A child receiving on your record will not lower what you receive. In general, unmarried children under age 18, full-time high school students to age 19, and adult children who become disabled before age 22 are all potential beneficiaries on a parent's Social Security record.

Tigershark owner saves two boaters

Stewart Smart credits the speed of his Tigershark Monte Carlo 600 with his ability to respond to cries for help on Lake Karapiro in New Zealand.

When he heard the cries for help he raced across the lake to Jarrod Williams and Shaun Fuller who were struggling without life jackets in deep water after their boat had sunk. Smart brought them to land, then ferried them across the lake on the Tigershark to an ambulance.

The rescue was reported in the New Zealand Herald, according to Heather Hauschild of the Arctic Cat public relations staff.

Pain may be eliminated for millions

(SPECIAL)—A drug that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur Itis®" and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur Itis® relieves pain by first selectively attracting and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur Itis® is available immediately without a prescription in an odorless, greaseless, non-staining cream or new roll-on liquid form. Arthur Itis® is guaranteed to work or your money back.

Red Lake County Central wins nine-man grid championship

Red Lake County Central gained more satisfaction Friday by beating another team in the playoffs that had defeated the Mustangs during the regular season. This time it was the Number 1 seeded Norman County East team and the prize was the Section 7 Nine-Man football championship.

The previous Saturday Coach Gary Hanel's Mustangs avenged an earlier 27-20 regular season loss to Fisher/Climax by administering a 30-14 thumping in the Section 7 Nine-Man semi-finals to advance to the championship round.

Again during the regular season the Norman County East Eagles had taken the measure of RLCC 21-8. Friday at the Fargodome Red Lake County Central scored in each of the first three quarters and held mistakes to a minimum for a hard-fought 20-14 win and the title.

After a game in the comfortable confines of the Fargodome, it will be back outdoors for the first round of the state play-offs when Section 7 Champion RLCC travels to Argyle for a 1:30 p.m. Thursday, November 6, game against the Section 8 Champion Stephen-Argyle Storm. The Storm also won Friday at the Fargodome, keeping an undefeated season intact with a 31-13 win over Kittson Central.

Friday's RLCC win wasn't an overpowering offensive show, but the Mustangs played tough defense, forced five NCE turnovers and put together a sustained drive to kill most of the clock while sustaining a lead late in the game.

Linebacker Tyler Nelson put RLCC on the scoreboard in the first quarter when he found a short pass from a harried John Gullingsrud in his hands and 50 yards of unoccupied stadium turf ahead of him. He took the interception the distance for the score. A pass for the conversion failed and RLCC led 6-0 at the end of the quarter.

Nelson's defense helped the offense in the second quarter as well when he got a hand on an Eagles punt that netted only four yards and gave the Mustangs the ball on the NCE 26 yard line. Andy Gustafson capped that drive with a five-yard touchdown run. Quarterback Mark Lorenson had a big part in the drive with an 11-yard scramble. The conversion pass attempt failed.

Norman County East rallied before the half ended with John Gullingsrud tossing a three-yard pass to Mike Swenson for the TD and Randy Kraft kicking the extra point to close the deficit to 12-7 at the half.

Red Lake County Central padded its lead in the third quarter when Lorenson found Nick Wahlal open and hit him with a 21 yard scoring strike to cap a 70 yard drive. Andy Gustafson added the two point conversion on a running play for a 20-7 RLCC lead.

After a scoreless third quarter, Norman County East came knocking on the door again. Nathan Anderson scored on a one yard run and Kraft kicked the conversion to pull the Eagles within a touchdown at 20-14 with about six minutes left on the clock.

The Mustangs offense then took over and held the ball on a sustained drive down field, picking up four of their nine total first downs on the drive which ended on the Norman County East six-yard line with about a minute left to play.

Any hope of a miracle comeback by the Eagles was snuffed out, however, when Lorenson picked off a Gullingsrud pass for his second interception of the day and the Mustangs killed the clock for the victory.

Red Lake County Central rushed the ball 44 times for 135 yards with Andy Gustafson carrying 22 times for 72 yards. Kyle Lefebvre had 12 carries for 44 yards. Lorenson had the other 19 yards—including the key 11-yard scramble to set up the second touchdown—and completed four of eight passes for 46 yards and a touchdown. David Foss had two catches for 25 yards and Nick Wahlal the 21-yard TD reception.

In addition to his TD run with an interception and his blocked kick, Tyler Nelson was in on 12 tackles. Linebackers Kyle Jensen and Matt Hruby had 13 and 10 tackles, respectively, and Lorenson was in on nine tackles from his defensive back spot in addition to picking off two NCE passes.

Kyle Sanden to get first Gopher test

Thief River Falls native Kyle Sanden, son of Dale and Sandy Sanden and a 1996 graduate of Lincoln high school, will get his first test with the University of Minnesota Golden Gophers basketball team Thursday, November 6.

Coach Clem Haskins' team will open the season with an exhibition game at Williams Arena on the U of M campus Thursday evening which will be televised on Minnesota Sports Channel (Cable Channel 26 in Thief River Falls).

Pictured at right is a reproduction of Kyle's page in the Gophers' basketball yearbook which contains information about this year's players and coaches and past performances of U of M basketball teams.

A red-shirt freshman, the 6-11 Sanden has built himself up to 260 pounds and is expected to be one of the first substitutes off the bench in the opener.

Mooney finishes 31st in state cross-country

Becky Mooney of the Lincoln High School Prowler girls' cross-country team placed 31st among a field of more than 170 runners at the Minnesota State Class AA Girls cross-country meet Saturday at St. Olaf College in Northfield. It was her second appearance at the state meet.

Becky did a great job on a challenging course and ran an excellent race, complimented Jerry Ocland, Lincoln cross-country coach. Her time of 15:48.5 was very good. She can be proud of her performance and she represented her team, school and community extremely well.

Ocland said that the girls Class AA race was the first of the day with all 170+ runners on the course at one time. Weather was cool but nice and the race was completed before the cold rain which fell on runners in later events.

Becky said that there was some pushing and bumping where the course narrowed a mile or more from the start, but nothing serious, Ocland added.

With the season now officially ended we are looking ahead to next year. We will be losing Becky and 10 other seniors. While we have good numbers and skills in the underclassmen on the boys team, we need to recruit more girls for the program.

MnDOT's study shows nearly 2,000 deer killed

Northwest District of the Minnesota Department of Transportation (MnDOT) has asked motorists to be extremely alert for deer crossing highways. A study conducted by MnDOT shows 1,998 deer killed on highways in the 14 counties of the Northwest District in 1991-94.

Every year hundreds of deer are killed or injured, vehicles are damaged and travelers are killed or injured throughout the state as a result of deer and vehicle collisions.

Many of the accidents take place in the late night and early morning hours and driving at speeds too fast for conditions contribute to many deer kills.

One deer control method that MnDOT is using with positive results is the installation of reflectors along the edge of the road to create an optical fence when the headlights of a vehicle reflect from them. This illusion causes more deer to stay in the ditch or return to the woods when vehicles approach or pass.

Because it is financially impractical to install such fences along all highways, awareness by motorists is still needed to reduce accidents.

Of the 14 counties in the Northwest District, Polk county had the highest number of deer kills in the 1991-1994 study with 521—more than a fourth of the total. A summary of deer kills by county is as follows with annual totals from 1991 through 1994 and the four-year total listed respectively:

Beltrami, 113, 58, 69, 61—301; Cass, 18, 4, 2, 3—27; Clearwater, 11, 18, 61, 19—109; Hubbard, 59, 14, 38, 4—115; Itasca, 33, 25, 38, 15—111; Kittson, 14, 6, 2, 4—26; Koochiching, 36, 25, 15, 4—80; Lake of the Woods, 37, 25, 0, 7—69; Marshall, 49, 67, 57, 45—218; Norman, 29, 56, 57, 54—196; Pennington, 14, 20, 12, 17—63; Polk, 135, 145, 142, 99—521; Red Lake, 10, 2, 4, 5—21; and Roseau, 34, 36, 24, 47—141.

Positive approach works at Franklin Middle School

Administrators in School District 564 and at Franklin Middle School hope to change attitudes about Franklin Middle School through a more positive approach to education.

Glenn Chodo, coordinator of educational services, and Chris Mills, dean of students at Franklin Middle School, presented an update to the school board Monday on activities taking place at Franklin. Mills began his first year at the school by approving strategies that affect school climate. One of the programs implemented is called P.O.P.S. or Power of Positive Students. Under the program, behavior that is above average is rewarded with a P.O.P.S. slip. From slips collected each week, six names are drawn from a hat. At the end of the month, six names are drawn, and at the end of the trimester, six more names will be drawn. Students whose names have been drawn from the P.O.P.S. slip recipients receive various rewards and recognition.

Mills has implemented a number of other programs such as a weekly newsletter sent to parents and distributed to grocery stores, Team Time for Core Teachers, physical uniforms, and a new after school program. The purpose of the programs seems to be to improve educational opportunities, and affect student, general public attitudes about the school.

Mills said response to the programs has been overwhelmingly supportive.

Chodo reported on two programs, a "School Within A School", and "Building Leadership Team Development." The School Within A School program started this year to accommodate students struggling academically. The program classrooms are situated in the middle of the school and allow students to move in and out of the class as they improve or meet goals. Chodo said there isn't a stigma following students participating in the program or the program itself because of the way it has been set up. Currently, there are 11 students in the program but he expects 15 to 20 to eventually participate in the program. He added that he doesn't want it to become a dumping ground for students with behavior problems.

Development of the Leadership Team has brought back more life to Franklin, Chodo said. Staff participation has created another positive aspect to the school.

Chodo and Mills outlined a number of goals for the future at the school, including a parent center, intramural program, Middle School advisor program, additional art work, continuation of activities that foster a positive perception of Franklin Middle School with the community, development of the After School program and search for a grant to support the program and providing increased opportunities for gifted and talented students.

The school board praised Mills, Chodo and staff at Franklin Middle School for making the positive changes at the school.

The board approved a recommendation to renew the lease with Thief River Union for space at the District Service Center for the period from November 1, 1997, through October 31, 1998, at a monthly rate of $1,100.

The school board recognized the following sponsors of the "tailgate" parties at the Prowler football games held during the regular season: KTRF radio staff, Hartz Foods, Pepsi, Ed's Market, Bridgeman's and SuperValu during the football game last Tuesday night.

The following items from the consent agenda were approved by the board: the resignation of Lisa M. Anderson as cleaner in the district, the resignation of Judy Rahier as cleaner in the district, the resignation of Shon Thompson as head boys swimming coach, a medical leave of absence for Sharon Philion, a leave of absence without pay for Gerald Odegaard, regular route bus driver, the employment of Elizabeth Quick as part-time ESL teacher at Challenger, the employment of Nancy Inderum as FMS long-term substitute teacher, the following extracurricular assignments for the 1997-98 school year — Stacy Hinen as FMS fall weight room supervisor, Stacy Hinen as FMS winter weight room supervisor, Mike Peterson as eighth grade boys basketball coach, and Brian Olson, head boys swimming coach, salary adjustments for licensed ECFE staff, the transfer of Ruth Pederson from three-hour building educational assistant at Challenger to 6.25-hour peer tutor/study hall educational assistant at Lincoln, Glenn Chodo as Section 504 coordinator for School District 564, and the Assurance of Compliance with State and Federal Laws prohibiting discrimination.

The next regular meeting of the school board is 7 p.m. Monday, November 10, in the School District Service Center.

Brooks woman accepts plea on Kmart fire investigation charge

Following a plea agreement, Darlene Ruth Thomas, 28, Brooks, has pled guilty to a charge of gross misdemeanor second degree arson.

The charge against Thomas stems from fires set at Kmart on September 21. At 12:17 p.m. on September 21, the police department received a report of a fire in the women's restroom at Kmart. Shortly after that a rack of men's clothing burst into flames. Thomas was questioned at the time and on October 7 charged with second degree arson.

Upon reaching a plea agreement on October 29, Thomas entered a plea of guilty to gross misdemeanor second degree arson. Ninth District Court Judge Dennis Murphy handed down a sentence following the acceptance of a plea of guilty.

The crosswalk will be signed and marked warning motorists of its presence.

Don Barron, city council representative, was concerned that students will take the shortest route and continue to cross in the middle of the block.

The city's new leaf vacuum is almost twice as fast as the old leaf vacuum. Ron Lindberg, public works director, said with the new leaf vacuum city crews are able to cover more than one ward a day. Residents should not be concerned, however, because the leaf vacuum will pick up leaves in the ward it has been assigned to on its assigned day.

Council representatives will meet at the Red Lake Watershed District on November 5 at 9 a.m. to discuss reservoir drawdowns, hydrogen sulfide odors and flood control with county and wildlife refuge officials.

The city has awarded bid on $630,000 in general obligation improvement bonds. The city received two bids, and it was awarded to Dain and Co. Inc. which proposed a true interest rate of 5.0608 percent.

Assessment rolls for the 1996 and 1997 projects were approved by the council. The council proposes to recover $110,699.95 in assessments for Phase II of the 1996 Assessment roll. It proposes to recover $409,174.72 for the 1997 project.

From its consent agenda, the council approved a progression raise for Sandy Brink, accounts payable/data processor, certified unpaid grass mowing charges to 1998 property tax, authorized payment of Airport Rescue and Firefighting consultant services of $650 to the city of Bemidji, and granted authorization for an exemption from lawful gambling license from the Knights of Columbus for a raffle to be held on February 1, 1998.

It was noted during discussion that Calendar Parking goes into effect on Saturday, November 15.

At the conclusion of the meeting Tuesday night Jim Burkhuhler asked the council whether the city was purchasing property north of the depot, which is currently the site of the feed mill.

Don Stewart, community development director, said the city is negotiating with CP for the purchase of the property. He also mentioned that the feed mill buildings are in the process of being torn down.

Kara Super wears crown of Miss Middle River

Kara will now prepare for Miss Marshall Co. pageant

By Marvin Lundin
Northern Watch Editor

After spending most of her young lifetime attending and being involved in local and county scholarship pageants, Kara Super has now experienced one from the participant's viewpoint and has a crown, banner and trophies to show for it.

Having received the title of Miss Middle River Sunday, September 21, Kara will have ample time to prepare for the Miss Marshall County Pageant where she will represent Middle River. Under a plan adopted several years ago, because many of the local pageant winners are high school seniors, there is a year's delay before they enter county competition. Kara will compete in the summer of 1999 while last year's Miss Middle River, Amber Dagy, will enter next summer's pageant.

Most of Kara's official activities to date have involved the annual Middle River Goose Festival which took place October 3, 4 and 5. She rode in the parade Saturday, made an appearance at the roping contest, played saxophone for the polka mass at St. Joseph's Catholic Church Sunday morning and sang her pageant talent number at the entertainment program Sunday afternoon at the American Legion club rooms.

She also sang at the Greenbush Middle River high school homecoming and plans to talk to students at the Middle River elementary school sometime during the school year. Her pageant platform deals with a responsible viewpoint toward premarital sexual activity.

A senior at Greenbush-Middle River high school, Kara is a member of the yearbook and school newspaper staffs, a class officer and co-president of the student council, member of Target and Future Leaders of America, sings soprano in the concert and pop choir and plays alto saxophone in the concert, jazz and pep bands.

She has competed in both solos and ensembles in district vocal and instrumental contests. A lover of drama, she expects to participate in the high school musical "A Country Opera" and the school's one-act play.

Within the community Kara has been a member of the Middle River Community Theatre from work in children's theater in second grade to roles in current productions. She enjoys acting but also production aspects of theater.

Kara participated in cross country as a junior and as a student manager this year. She has played varsity basketball since a freshman but had her seasons interrupted by bouts of mononucleosis in three successive years.

At St. Joseph's church she plays with the Cathy Erickson band for polka masses, is a song leader, youth group member and teaches in the congregation's pre-school education program which is conducted for three and one half hours on a monthly basis.

The daughter of Tom and KayDell Super, Kara has an older sister, Kristi—a student at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks, and a brother Thomas John (T.J.), a freshman at Greenbush-Middle River high school. Her hobbies include running, lifting weights, gourmet cooking and spending time with family. This fall she is also looking forward to deer hunting.

Next fall Kara plans to enroll at the University of Minnesota at Crookston to gain a broad education in cooking, catering and hotel and restaurant management.

Kara says pageants have been a part of her life for as long as she can remember. Her mother directed the Miss Middle River pageant and served as chaperone for the winners for many years and Kara and Kristi accompanied them on appearances and even helped choreograph the pageant production numbers for about 10 years. KayDell [illegible], the pageant director, [illegible] years ago when Kristi was a contestant.

Plaques are awarded in four phases of pageant competition—evening gown, swimsuit, talent and personal interview—and Kara won them all at the September 21 pageant. Her talent number was a vocal rendition of "Cabaret." The 18-year-old is five feet eight inches tall, has blond hair and hazel eyes.

Kara looks forward to her role as an active community representative and enjoying the Miss Middle River title from beneath the crown instead of just being around it.

Kara Super, 18, daughter of Tom and KayDell Super of Middle River, won the title of Miss Middle River September 21 at the scholarship pageant in the Middle River school gymnasium. She also won trophies in the evening gown, swimsuit, talent and personal interview categories which are on prominent display in the Super home.

TRF Salvation Army prepares for its annual Kettle Drive

Salvation Army service unit of Thief River Falls is approaching local residents and organizations for assistance in the upcoming Kettle Campaign.

The Kettle Campaign is the only organized fund-raising campaign conducted by the Salvation Army service unit in Thief River Falls. The event is conducted between Thanksgiving and Christmas. The familiar red kettles will be located at numerous businesses in the community, but the manned station is at the Kmart store in Thief River Falls.

"After the blizzard and flood of this last spring, we were witness to a tremendous outpouring of community support. I was very impressed to see people from all walks of life involved," said Shannon Olson, Kettle Campaign chairperson.

"What this says to me, is that we live in a town filled with many compassionate people who are willing to get out and help others that are in need. The Salvation Army was out in force during this time with feeding, clothing, finding housing and caring for people who were unfortunate victims of circumstances. It has been an extremely busy year for us, but as shelters closed and people returned to their lives, others continue to be in need of assistance.

"The devastation of the fire in the Drecker (Dabusi Meehan) building and the loss of home and property for its tenants, and the businesses involved was a blow to many. Again the Salvation Army was there and ready to help. Once again there was an outpouring of offers of assistance from the community in regards to the needs of the less fortunate," said Olson.

Olson said she is sending letters to local businesses and organizations asking for the support to show a visual response by manning the kettle at the Kmart store.

Olson said anyone interested in volunteering to man the kettle can reach her at 681-5937 at home or 681-2793 at work at the [illegible] Community Center.

Gully Community News

Sanna Brovold

Last week we saw a notice in the paper that said "Surprise, Surprise Leonard and Ione Schmitz are celebrating their Golden Wedding, etc." In Leonard and Ione's paper that section was blocked out, but the surprise went sour! The children of Leonard and Ione had planned a 50th Wedding Anniversary surprise party for October 25th. Low and behold, the parents figured it out on Tuesday when the local papers appeared. (The children almost pulled one over on Dad.) Leonard thought there must be something "juicy" under that block and managed to find out what it was. Saturday afternoon, the gathering started with reunions, hugs, smiles and conversation at the Gully Community Center. The family presented their parents with a family tree, video of past pictures and a poem written by granddaughter, Amanda. The Community Center was beautifully and appropriately decorated with a bunch of balloons weighted down to each table, in the middle were hidden treats for visitors, and a golden candle lit to make everything sparkle. Perhaps the most touching was a little family tree seeming to grow out of a mound of tiny electric lights with dark red porcelain hearts hung from the tiny branches. Each heart had the name of Ione and Leonard's eight children, but two of the hearts had golden wings. These hearts had the names of the two sons that passed away early in life to receive their angel wings. We all had a taste of the anniversary cake and coffee. Leonard and Ione thanked everyone that had a part in planning the anniversary party and all that came to enjoy the afternoon with them.

The Gully Community Club met on Tuesday evening at the Gully Community Center. The main topic of business was discussion about a Halloween party. Most towns have their own parties and we all agreed to have one on Halloween night. Oct. 31 is not the safest evening to be out on the highways, and we hope we can have a safe Halloween. We are asking if each family will bring one cake as their admission for the evening, then the cakes will be used for prizes for the cake walk. Members of the Club volunteered to help with the various games, but if we are to keep the visitors busy, if you are a club member or not, won't you set aside that night to help give the youngsters a safe and spooky time? If you will help please let Linda Godfried or Doreen Brovold know. We hope to have door prizes, cake walk, spook house, apple ducking contest.

Ed and Lyn Tronnes and Ella Handy spent last week in Bridgeport, West Virginia, visiting at the Dr. and Mrs. Frank DeMoreno home. Dr. and Mrs. Daniel DeMoreno, Hannah and Luke and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wysor, Cally and Tom from Fairfax, Virginia were also there for the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Corey Hanson from St. Cloud, Mr. and Mrs. Marty Levine from Fosston, and Amber Peeples from Moorhead were Sunday afternoon visitors at Ella Handy's home.

It was a "Red Letter Day" at the Gully Mall on Monday morning when we had a chance to visit a 101 year old lady, alert and smiling. She was Helen Jorgenson from Clearbrook. Others there from Clearbrook here to visit friends were Karen and Charles Jorgenson and also Orlean and Debbie Agnes and Reuben and Clarice Kolling from Gully.

Quite a few of us showed up at the Ernie and Millie Brovold home on Thursday to wish Millie a happy birthday. Some considered it would be "potluck," but Brenda Odegaard was home and had prepared a good lunch for her mother's birthday party. We enjoyed a good visit and a hearty lunch before returning home. Present for the party were Mervin and Doris Rindahl, Esther Rindahl, Lloyd Brovold, Arnold and Sanna Brovold.

We heard from Winnaska that Joanne and Kent Olson have a baby son born October 25th. They named him Wyatt. The parents, Joanne and Kent, grandparents, Howard and Linda Hanson and great-grandparents, Harry and Nora Hanson are all happy.

Did you see musical notes floating around the Gully Mall on Sunday afternoon? And if we listened carefully we heard beautiful music. It was time for a Country Music Day. Many musicians with musical talent were there to share their talents with those of us with very little musical ability. We enjoyed what they were willing to share with us. Edna E. was really out early to prepare for the day, and among other things, had baked 24 pies to share with coffee for the visitors. Vernon Wold was emcee and kept us all in a good spirit. Among those taking part were Elmer Erickson of Clearbrook, Juan Burgeson and Art Omanri of Fosston, Jim Thun and Mavis Wangen of Deer, Adrian Benedict of Erskine, Sig Schindler of Blackduck, Aaron Powers of Bemidji, Alvin Anderson and Edwin Moe of Thief River Falls, Ed Nephew of Fertile, "Kruger" from Fargo and, of course, we enjoyed Lee Cox of Blackduck as he entertained us with the "Bones" in his hands. Many of us didn't know that "Art" had grown from the "early days" and the ability of making music from the bones of the ribs of a steer, some of us call them incorrectly "castanets." Carol Thoreson was busy waiting tables for us but took time to sing with Vernon Wold. Then after some threats and persuasion, Gene McIntosh was coaxed into singing about his favorite horse and sang "Strawberry Roan." It was an interesting afternoon and we got home in time for the "World Series."

Shirley Carvin McIntosh and Evelyn Hanson of Clearbrook visited at the Robert and Noreen Carlson home on Sunday afternoon.

On Friday we visited at the Orville and Gertrude Christensen home to help Gertrude celebrate her 93rd birthday. Corella Thorbeck had spent a few days with her folks and had prepared a tasty lunch including two kinds of birthday cake for the special day. Corella had also helped her dad with some fall work. Corella's twin sister Corinne Haugen from Moorhead had been home a few days early to celebrate the birthday. Gertrude thought it had been a good year for a 93rd birthday. Harry and Nora Hanson were there, also Lucille and Clifford Arveson, Evelyn Hanson and Arnold and Sanna Brovold.

Visitors at the Wendt and Cathy Sengen home last Tuesday and Wednesday were Bert and Bernice Schiele of Olympia, Washington and Philip Schiele of Devil's Lake, North Dakota. Other visitors were Jeanie Sorenson, Larry Sengen, Doreen Gay and Sarah Brovold.

Strandquist

F. Myrtle Vagle

Donnie and Marlys Lofroth returned from Davenport, Iowa where they had attended the funeral for Rebecca Madsen Knolinchinski. While there, they were guests of Merlin and Pat Madsen.

Gayhard and Irene Nelson enjoyed supper with birthday cake and ice cream at the Brian Nelson home on Sunday evening for Marcus' 2nd birthday and Brittany's 12th birthday.

Friday forenoon Isaac Thompson and Harris and Avis Endreson went to view the sugar beet harvest where Robert Thompson was driving truck for Merle Nelson of west Kennedy. They found it very interesting. In the afternoon Avis and Betsy had coffee with Elsie Lofroth while Harris accompanied Isaac on a business trip.

Lowell Lofroth, Claudia Berggren, Jessie and Kali, Vance and Kelly Lofroth, Amanda and Jessica, Betty Piotruszewski, June Kasprowicz and Dawn and Nichole Beloau from the Cities visited with Judy and Lois Klainvachlor.

Friday evening Avis and Harris Endreson and Isaac and Betsy Thompson were guests at Peter and Pearl Thompson's for a delicious supper. Saturday LaRoy and Pearl Lundell from Minnetonka joined Avis and Harris at Isaac's for dinner before Avis and Harris left for their winter home in Yuma, Arizona.

LaRoy and Pearl Lundell visited Elsie Lofroth and Walter Thompson on Sunday afternoon and also Roy and Myrtle Vagle and Geneva Nordin. These folks bring a ray of sunshine any time you see them. I hope they make another trip before winter sets in. There are a few flakes already coming down.

The weather in northwest Minnesota is sunny, cool and windy today. The nice weather helps most of us old timers to cope with the juggling of the clocks, a thing that takes us a month at least to get settled back in our old grooves. It was O.K. on Sunday when besides company dinner we had three different church lunches to attend and food included at all three of them. In fact, one was a complete dinner with even "rumа grot." Once you have tasted that delicious, smooth, rich pudding made from pure whipping cream and flour, cooked until the butter forms around the edges, sugar and cinnamon added, you could justifiably crash any party that was serving it, in a fifty mile radius.

Monday was a different story. I awakened at 5:00 a.m. and thought coffee. Roy said, "Wait 'till 6:00." I waited but it seemed to just be a waste of time. By 10:30 I was hungry but no dinner was served until 11:30. They had set the clocks back at the Center also. I hope my hungry time and sleep time and the clocks will be cooperative and I will regain my sunny disposition.

The Strandquist seniors sure were busy on Thursday, when they got together and had their fall sale together with the folks from the Bethesda Church, who had a bake sale and also a rummage sale at the Center on Saturday. I hurried down there but all but a couple of woven rugs were left for me in that section so I missed the boat by an hour. I did get some baked goods too, which were great. The six members present on Thursday were Helen Jacobson, Elphie Adlis, Elsie Kimbrough, Alyce Anderson and Evelyn Kline. The eighteen visitors were Lenora Elroth, Muriel Nelson, Viola Moen, Lucille Skadsen, Gladys Stromberg, Sybil Peterson, Minnie Haugen, Ellen Flaten, Ed and Delores Stromlund, Evelyn Albaugh, Elmer Helmstrom, Clara Nelson, Mary Borowicz, Joanne Ginter, Mary Gajeski, Toni Kasprowicz and Josephine Yutizenka. They played bingo where Elmer Holmstrom won the blackout game and Muriel Nelson won the door prize. With a group like that, even small towns will still live on and count in the long haul.

Elphie Adlis and Pearl Thompson visited Elsie Lofroth on Saturday.

Kittson commissioner gives views on "Tallgrass Prairie"

by Bev Hewitt, Lancaster
Kittson County Commissioner

What is the "Tallgrass Prairie" all about and how will it affect those of us who live within the preservation area? The final plans and details are in the hands of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, and exactly where it will go from here is uncertain. There are many aspects of it that are very troubling.

The Northern Tallgrass Prairie Habitat Preservation Area is a proposed preservation area that runs the full length of Minnesota and into Iowa. There are 48 Minnesota counties and 37 Iowa counties in the preservation area. The area is broken down into ecosystems. Northern Minnesota counties of Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake and Polk are in the Tallgrass Aspen Parkland (TAP) ecosystems.

Within the preservation area in addition to the government lands, parks, wildlife areas, Conservancy lands, conservation lands and CRP lands, the government wants to add 77,000 acres in permanent preserves. The TAP ecosystem will have 37,000 acres, the Agassiz ecosystem will have 25,000 acres, the Minnesota Prairie Coteau will have 10,000 acres and the IA Prairie Coteau will have 5,000 acres.

The TAP will have 3,700 acres of cropland, 11,100 acres of pasture land, 11,100 acres of hayland and 11,100 acres of idle land going to the permanent preserve. The primary purpose is to preserve, enhance and protect the remaining prairie and aspen parklands for wildlife habitat.

The secondary purpose is to link existing prairie tracts together (federal, state, tribal, private organization and private landowner ownerships) into larger blocks plus buffer remnant prairie, to establish larger more viable units of managed prairie and allow travel corridors for wildlife. Prairie restoration used to link existing prairies together would utilize the same techniques used in managing existing prairies.

Many waterfowl production areas within the two states contain native prairie and could be utilized for linking purposes. Native plant species will be used to reconstruct areas of tallgrass prairie to connect remnant native prairie tracts and for buffer zones. This is all contained in the Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) which will be used by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service when determining how much and to what extent the government will be involved in the permanent preserves and the preservation area itself.

Certainly no one argues the need to protect our biodiversity, but let us do it based on scientific facts and not mystic philosophies and unproven theories. This project is based on the Wildlands Project, which is based on Article 8 of the Biodiversity Treaty and Section 10.4 of the UN Global Biodiversity Assessment (GBA). This is of great concern that the treaty hasn't been ratified and still the current administration has integrated the principles into the Department of Interior, EPA, Department of Agriculture and others. The frightening part of all this is the direction this is leading. It is a lot more than just preserving the prairie in our region.

Vice President Al Gore is leading the administration's environmental policy and his extremist positions and solutions are cited in his book, "Earth in the Balance." He asserts that we must reestablish our spiritual connection to the natural world, if we have any hope of saving it. He states that the environment must be the central organizing principle of civilization and it can only be accomplished by increasing the power and involvement of environmental leadership.

If our society must be transformed to save the earth, then we should give environmental leaders our support, but an ever-growing majority of well-known scientists and leaders say that environmental leaders are wrong. Why are their voices being ignored? The UN agenda is being forced on America by a powerful minority using the politics of fear and guilt. Rather than protecting the environment and the earth, they will ultimately destroy it!

An example of the system of protected areas and buffer zones called for in the Biodiversity Treaty has already been implemented in Florida. There are many reserves with no use, buffer zones with extremely limited use and maybe half of it is open to all uses. This strategy of protected areas and buffer zones is for the protection of the Florida panther, or cougar, and the black bear. There is no scientific evidence that it will work.

"The technology is not developed for complete restoration of native prairies," is a quote from the impact study recently completed on the Tallgrass Prairie Initiative. When asked why they couldn't use existing public land, CRP land, other conservation land, the response was, "This option was rejected because it would not ensure meeting the Service's trustee responsibility for threatened and endangered species."

Doesn't it make you wonder if they can't do it on the millions of acres of public lands the CRP and other conservation lands, how can these 77,000 acres make the difference of success to failure?

What harmful effects will we be subject to just because we are in the preservation area? What new rules, regulations, restrictions and laws will come from this effort? Ultimately how much more land will come under government control? When all the parcels are linked, the buffer zones inflicted, cores and corridors completed, what will we have left? How is this going to affect our economy and the food supplies in the next few decades?

The draft states that based on the analysis presented, and on what is known about project specifics at this time, it would not have a substantial economic impact, either positive or negative. The information given to the newspapers tells about the millions of dollars to be generated which is contrary to the economic impact study. There may be (which is also questionable) more tourism, but if restrict farm and ranch country is restricted, where do they propose to eventually get the food?

Land in and around the permanent preserves, in buffer zones and corridors and in varying degrees throughout the preservation area triggers some other concerns. Cultivated cropland uses could mostly cease. Grazing and haying agricultural uses would be restricted. Gravel mining would not be allowed or restricted. Acquired lands would no longer be available to others for purchase. Right-of-way permits will be required for transportation, drainage and utility systems. Service fee title lands would be removed from county tax rolls, resulting in tax revenue losses. Prairie tax credit or exemption could place added burden upon local governments (both Minnesota and Iowa have programs that exempt qualifying native prairie from property taxes). To date there are about 12,000 acres of native prairie exempt from property taxes in Minnesota. This will most likely drastically increase.

Acquisition relative to use of condemnation is a concern if land is not acquired by voluntary methods in the allotted time frame, and that landowners would not receive just compensation is also a concern. The Endangered Species Act is another threat connected with this initiative. Widespread fee purchase and government ownership could be perceived as a loss of local control. Project size and cost to the taxpayer in relation to other priorities is a big, big concern.

This project comes under Executive Order 12996 (dated March 25, 1996) rather than through the legislative process. An internal EPA working document (dated August 5, 1993) revealed that the EPA intended to bypass Congress and implement the Biodiversity Treaty provisions through Ecosystem Management stipulations.

The EPA working document states that, "the Executive Branch should direct federal agencies to evaluate national policies on environmental protection and resource management to fulfill existing international obligations and amend national policies to more effectively achieve international objectives."

The EPA document continues by stating that federal agencies must "present recommendations to Congress for legislative changes necessary to ensure national laws are for protecting ecosystems, and to convene summits for negotiating change in regional economics as an essential means for managing sustainable ecosystems." In other words, global policy must dictate national policy, which in turn must dictate legislative action. Think about how this all could affect final decision making!

In summary, the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service will be making the determination, citing EPA regulations as well as other regulations, policies, procedures, etc. This also concerns me because Carol Browner, head of EPA, was environmental advisor for Senator Gore and did background work on Gore's book. She was head of the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation. George Frampton, who heads the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, was past president of the Wilderness Society, and publicly stated his desire to take 26 million acres of northern forestland in the northeast from landowners and turn it into a vast wilderness for the benefit of nature.

Bruce Babbitt heads the Department of Interior. He was the former chairman of the League of Conservation Voters (LCV). The LCV is the political umbrella group for national environmental organizations. Babbitt proclaimed in his introduction to the LCV's 1991 Environmental Scorecard (of Congressional votes): "We must identify our enemies and drive them into oblivion." He also said: "But ... bold vision of what it might take to maintain all the biodiversity in a region and then work out the details later. A vision will provide direction and motivation for all subsequent work."

A very big concern of mine is that the Devil may be in the details.

"Encourage your children to read a newspaper every day. They may grow up to make this a more peaceful world."

When I was growing up, my parents wanted each of their children to learn about the world outside of Plains, Georgia. And that meant reading to us. Later they encouraged us to read [illegible] and newspapers on our own. Rosalynn and I carried on this tradition with our children and now enjoy reading to our grandchildren.

Read to your children. Start with story books and when they can read for themselves, encourage them to read a newspaper every day. With that kind of start, they may grow up to make this a more peaceful world.

Area Young People Make Communities Proud

This is another time of year when playoffs are underway in athletic competition and young people are working their hardest and performing at the peak of their abilities, bringing honors to themselves and pride to their communities.

Sunday afternoon at the Eagles Hall in Thief River Falls the Pennington county 4-H club program had its annual awards dinner. Deserved recognition was given to many of the county's young people for their achievements in projects during the past year and, in some cases, over a period of years. We congratulate all of the award winners, a number of whom are pictured in today's issue of The Times.

Congratulations also to area athletic teams and individuals who have recently successfully competed and advanced in their various areas of football, volleyball, tennis and cross country. We have long maintained that participation in sports and other co-curricular activities provides a mechanism for young people to excel as individuals and to learn from group activity.

Extra-curriculars should not be a substitute for academics, but they can be and usually are a valuable supplement to the classroom. In a number of cases they provide the motivation for stronger academic effort than would otherwise be given. Certainly they provide a focus for development of talents and abilities.

Beyond the benefits for the students, however, is the value successful teams have for their entire communities. Parents, relatives, friends, neighbors and others identify with the teams and draw support as well as give support. In a proper atmosphere of sportsmanship and respect, these activities are character builders beyond what the classroom alone can provide.

As the students gain from their success and their experiences, often without realizing it at the time, they build community strength and unity. And that is a positive for schools and cities and areas of any size.

Tax Reform Or Revolt?

"If the public ever knew the number of abuses covered up by the IRS, there could be a tax revolt," stated the leadoff witness in the recent hearings conducted by Congress on abuses in the Internal Revenue Service. The statement earned the attention of federal elected officials.

"The public is beginning to understand the depth of the IRS problems," says U.S. Senator Rod Grams of Minnesota. "The time for real tax reforms is now."

Sen. Grams is only partially right. It is indeed the time for reforms, but the public has had a good idea of the depth of IRS problems for a long time. It is Congress that is just beginning to understand that the complaints its members have received from time to time about IRS abuses are neither imagined nor isolated. They are real, they are numerous and they are symptoms of an agency allowed by Congress to operate within itself for too long.

"For decades, IRS agents have routinely snooped through the supposedly confidential tax files of their neighbors, public figures and even prospective dates. IRS agents are evaluated and promoted based on their total tax collections, a practice outlawed a decade ago. IRS managers often cover up abusive behavior by collection agents. In stark contrast to our legal system, all alleged tax debtors are assumed guilty and treated as criminals," Sen. Grams writes in his Minnesota Report.

"Hundreds of working Minnesotans have contacted my office with similar grievances. Though the individual details of their stories vary, the message is the same: the IRS devastated their lives. Many lost their homes, cars, businesses and professional licenses," the senator adds.

Well, now, maybe there is a little exaggeration here. Losses such as the Senator mentions could well have happened, but it is doubtful they happened without at least some cause. Offensive and vindictive as some IRS agents may be, their actions don't usually bring those kinds of results unless some wrong doing can be substantiated.

But what took so long for the hearings to be held? Unless those hundreds of complaints which Sen. Grams mentions were somehow crammed into the last couple of months, and unless other Representatives and Senators haven't had any complaints, shouldn't there have been an investigation and attempt to take corrective action before now?

For that matter, did the three days of hearings create anything other than additional public revulsion for one of the government's most detested agencies? Probably not. For one thing, the IRS has made its work so complicated that no one in the agency can understand it, much less anyone in Congress. For another, Congress needs an aggressive IRS to provide the revenue it is so fond of spending.

So Sen. Grams is 100 percent right when he points out that "The tax system under which the IRS operates today has become a redistributor of private incomes, a mechanism to enforce social re-engineering, and a launch pad for class-warfare. It is anti-family. It destroys economic opportunity, hinders our job creation, impedes productivity and retards competitiveness. It has deepened the despair and disaffection among the poor and disadvantaged. It encourages abuse, waste and corruption."

And he is right when he says Congress deserves much of the blame because it writes the tax code in the first place. There are now nearly 10,000 pages of tax code, 20 volumes of tax regulations and thousands and thousands of pages of instructions.

This first ever formal oversight of the agency ever conducted by Congress confirmed what most people in the nation already knew: that the IRS is a bully and an overt one at that. But let's see if Congress has either a will or a way to prevent the tail from wagging the dog. We don't expect much positive action.

Looking Back

It was a Sunday, October 20th, 1947 when I and my family moved to Plummer from a farm 11 miles northwest of Grand Forks. Fifty years have passed and have seen many changes and many events in our lives. Because of a cool damp fall the harvest had been delayed and hence the late move. The day after we'd finished combining, my husband Nels Vigstol drove a tractor and a load of equipment through Grand Forks at 4 a.m. with a lantern for a headlight. A cousin, Harold Torkelson of Karlstad, who was a trucker, hauled the cattle, 4 horses and a pony. Brother Andrew of Grand Forks loaded his car and left with my two older boys and I brought up the rear with the other five children and the cats. We had bought the Matt Gerardy farm north of Plummer. How wonderful it was to move into a sparkling clean house with electricity, plentiful running water, built-in cupboards and a bathroom, none of which I'd had before. Then we had three weeks of delightful fall weather and were able to get all settled in and the fall plowing done before winter hit. I think of this every fall and hope we'll see a repeat, but it has seldom happened. Of course, I had taken many trips before the 20th to get everything moved, but that day will always live in my memory.

Hazel Olie visited with Amelia Eskeli and visited with Ruth Oen at Dakota Hospital in Fargo on Tuesday.

Milt Peterson and Kathy Juneau attended the Red Lake County Economic Development Corporation meeting in Red Lake Falls at Joe DiMaggio's Sports Bar on Tuesday evening. This group is working to interest tourists and others in our county and to promote local businesses.

Eleanor Hodson entertained at dinner on Tuesday and the afternoon for special cousin Laurel Colensurree of Nooksack, Washington. Joining them were Eleanor's brothers Sidney and Arlene Clementson, Earl and Harriet Clementson, Charles Clementsen and friend Gladys Running of Hallock, and Florence Miller, all of them from Grand Forks except Gladys, Dorothy Myhre and Edna Hyde. After an afternoon of visiting, pie and coffee was served.

A number of people from Plummer attended the funeral for Floyd Frederickson on Wednesday at Zion Lutheran Church of Thief River Falls. Floyd had grown up in Plummer and was a P.H.S. graduate. Our sympathies go out to his family.

Wavell Sorenson was a Wednesday dinner guest of her sister, Belaine and John Hammer of Thief River Falls, a belated birthday celebration for both John and Belaine. Later she attended the funeral for Nellie Tveit, formerly of Goodridge.

Wavell Sorenson was a guest of her parents, Willia and Gene Prestegaard of Thief River Falls on Wednesday night at a supper of the Sons of Norway held at the Eagles Club in Thief River Falls.

"To Subscribers:

"With this issue of The News it is reduced to a six column folio, all printed at home. The change is made for the reason that there will be considerable difficulty in getting the 'ready-prints' up here this winter, and the news contained in them gets very old before the subscribers receive their papers. We have devised a plan which we think will give better satisfaction and more reading matter to our subscribers. To all who pay $1.50 for The News in advance, we will send free the Minneapolis Farmers' Tribune, a 7-column eight-page paper which is issued two times a week, making in all sixteen pages. It is the best twice-a-week paper published, and contains the news of the world, excellent market pages, stories by the ablest writers in America and an unexcelled page of interest to farmers. This will be giving more reading matter for $1.50 than is offered by any other paper in this section of state. The columns of The News will be devoted entirely to local doings."

From The Editorial Page

"Stockholders in the corporation called Thief River Falls met Tuesday and elected a group of officers and directors for the coming two years. One of the biggest businesses in town is the business of the city itself. During the next two years the newly elected managers of this city business will direct the spending of well over a million dollars. It is quite likely that a large number of municipal improvements will be considered and acted upon during this two-year period. The newly elected city officials will take over a lot of unfinished business on January first, much of which is an accumulation of the war years that is unfinished because of war and post-war conditions. They are going to be busy."

And Another From The Editorial Page

"One nice thing about elections is that majorities prevail and most voters must necessarily be satisfied with the results."

Pennington Farmers Union honors four farm couples

At its annual convention Saturday, October 25, in the Evergreen Eating Emporium in Thief River Falls, Pennington County Farmers Union recognized four couples for their long-standing commitment to the organization and elected officers for the coming year.

Recognized for service were Juell and Annabelle Chervestad, Olaf and Clara Stolaas and Lester and Beulah Vad, all of rural Oklee, and Orlin and Marcella Hanson of rural Goodridge. Last year the organization honored Ernest and Lois Swanson of rural Goodridge.

Korydon Chervestad of rural Oklee was reelected president and will represent Pennington county on the Minnesota Farmers Union state board. Tom Schulin of rural Thief River Falls was reelected county vice president and will serve as an alternate to the state board. Glenn Hofstad of rural Trail was reelected secretary treasurer.

A number of young people received Farmers Union Youth Awards and gift certificates for completing their annual education activities. The curriculum can be completed by attending a summer camp program or completing lessons locally.

Angie Chervestad, who will receive the state Torchbearer Award in a special ceremony prior to the state convention banquet Saturday, November 22, spoke to the county convention on her trip to All-States Camp in Bailey, CO. She qualified for the expense-paid trip by completing four years of senior youth work.

At the camp she participated in courses on Farmers Union history and philosophy, community activism, cooperatives, agricultural concentration and proposed deregulation of the electric industry. Other activities includes a karaoke contest, talent show, hiking in the mountains and shopping and sightseeing in Bailey and Denver.

The Torchbearer Award is the highest achievement award in the Farmers Union youth education program.

The Farmers Union Educational and Cooperative Union of America was founded in Point, TX, in 1902 and functioned as a secret society of farmers. By 1954, when Clarence Peterson, Ernest Swanson and Clifford Vad helped to organize the Pennington County Farmers Union, the organization was no longer a secret society.

At the county convention, Ernest Swanson—who was elected as the first secretary-treasurer of the county organization—shared memories of "standing room only" meetings which included such guests as Congresswoman Coya Knutson.

The county convention is held annually during October which is observed nationally as Co-op Month. Guest speaker was Dan Hanstad, Minnesota Farmers Union field representative, who updated members on state legislative and federal congressional issues. Resolutions adopted at the county convention will be forwarded to the state convention for consideration to become state Farmers Union policy and sent on to the national convention.

We attended the funeral service on Friday for Gordon Loland at the Sand Valley Lutheran Church in Trail at eleven o'clock. Gordon was born in Trail on March 17, 1937, son of Ole and Lillian Sordahl Loland and passed away Monday, October 20, 1997 at North Country Regional Hospital in Bemidji. Gordie came back home to Trail on Friday for his last trip, and according to the size of the gathering, there were many that came to say farewell to a father-grandfather, brother, relative, friend or neighbor. As they remembered Gordie for a kind deed, a helping hand when needed, or maybe for the mathematical mind that could quickly answer any question in regard to carpentry work or measurements concerning lumber. While most of us needed a large sheet of paper, a pen and several hours, Gordie could look at a blue print and give the answer needed. He was responsible for the design and then building many of the buildings in the area, near and far. LuWayne, a son from Bagley, talked about his dad and the many favors he bestowed on his sons. Perhaps one of the first things LuWayne remembered was Gordie's willingness to teach them about a "past time" they enjoyed, that of hunting and fishing. Tom and his wife Eunsook sat down to the piano and the notes seemed to send a kind, parting message to Gordie. Then, Tom and Eunsook's voices blended into a duo singing "Green, Green Grass of Home" and "Softly and Tenderly." Vernon Wold sang "The Old Rugged Cross" and "Sheltered In The Arms Of God." Gordie is survived by his wife and sons, Steven, Tom and LuWayne and daughter Edith, sisters Carla Johnson and Joanne Voltz.

Nancy Pedersen of Viking insists that she "wouldn't be here today if it wasn't for them." Nancy has severe asthma and a lung condition that requires her to use an oxygen breathing apparatus continuously. She also had knee replacement surgery in the past year. The "them" that she refers to are home health caregivers from the Newfolden office of North Valley Home Health. With Nancy in the photo above are Vi Melvie of Viking (left), home health aide, and Betty Knell, RN. Because of the severity of her physical limitations, Nancy receives a variety of services and has been in the program for nearly three years. Betty Knell visits often for a nursing assessment, checking lungs, heart, blood pressure, medications and other health areas. North Valley Home Health, formerly Marshall County Nursing Service, is observing 50 years of service in Marshall county and celebrating National Home Care Month during November.

North Valley Home Health observes 50 years of service

North Valley Home Health, which was previously known as Marshall County Nursing Service, has a special reason to observe November as National Home Care Month. The agency has been meeting the health care needs of Marshall county residents since 1947.

In honor of its 50th anniversary and in recognition of National Home Care Month, North Valley Home Health will sponsor free blood pressure clinics in each Marshall county city during the month of November. Nurses will be available to visit with the public and answer questions about home health care.

Schedule for the clinics includes the following:

Tuesday, November 11, 11 a.m. at the Middle River senior center;

Thursday, November 13, 10:30 a.m. at the Argyle LAH-BNP office in the Argyle mall;

Friday, November 14, 11 a.m. at the Alvarado community center and the Stephen community center;

Monday, November 17, 11 a.m. at the Newfolden senior citizens center;

Wednesday, November 19, at 11 a.m. at the Oslo community center;

Thursday, November 20, at 11 a.m. at the Viking community center;

Friday, November 21, 9:30 a.m. at the Grygla community center and 11 a.m. at the Warren senior meals site.

"The need for home care continues to increase," notes Barbara Coeterier, the director of North Valley Home Health. "People are living longer and often have more than one chronic illness with which to cope. Costs of living in a nursing home continue to increase."

Along with the increased need,

Complaints about smell from river not likely to go away

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Complaints about the smell of rotten eggs emanating from the river last winter at the reservoir dam in Thief River Falls could result in officials addressing numerous other issues that may affect the entire Red Lake Watershed basin.

Wednesday, officials from Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Marshall County and Red Lake Watershed District met at watershed headquarters in Thief River Falls to discuss water control matters in the basin. Watershed District Administrator Lowell Enerson explained that last spring officials met to discuss the odor problem at the dam. It seems the whole problem is tied to other issues, and resulted in discussion about draw downs, flood control and other issues.

It could be said the whole matter arose from a foul odor. The odor was identified as hydrogen sulfide, a by-product of decomposition occurring without the benefit of oxygen. Last winter the smell was so intense it led to complaints from citizens, and an official complaint from nearby Northwest Medical Center, which said the smell created an "unpleasant environment".

The purpose of the meeting Wednesday, Enerson said, was to identify where water was being impounded, its impact, the smell in town, what to do to reduce the smell, and a petition to do some cleaning to Ditch 83.

Former Engineer for the Watershed, Brent Johnson, who now works as a consultant for Houston Engineering in Fargo, ND, was on hand to provide background information about the basin.

Johnson explained that the smell, hydrogen sulfide, is a dangerous gas and is detectable by humans in relatively low amounts. To diminish the smell, oxygen needs to be introduced to the water.

According to information from the U.S. department of Environment, Safety and Health, hydrogen sulfide is a colorless, poisonous gas with the characteristic odor of rotten eggs. OSHA has set the permissible exposure limit at 10 parts per million. Humans can detect it at 1 part per million. At 10 parts per million it can cause irritation of the eyes, mucous membranes, and upper respiratory system. The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health states that it is "immediately dangerous to life and health at 300 parts per million."

Content of hydrogen sulfide in the air at the dam has been measured periodically. In the 1970s it was between one and two parts per million. During the 80's, the last time it was measured it was about the same. Content of hydrogen sulfide in the air has not been measured at the dam recently.

Johnson explained that the hydrogen sulfide smell was produced by decomposition. Hydrogen sulfide can dissipate quickly, but because the water from pools of water upstream is carried underneath thick layers of ice it is not oxygenated until it reaches Thief

Funds sought for remaining elements of events center

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Parks and Recreation committee of the Thief River Falls City Council approved a request to proceed with fund-raising for a plan to continue Phase I of the Multi-Events Cultural Center and an aquatic center. The matter and several other issues discussed at the meeting Tuesday, will be brought before a full city council meeting.

Rick Nelson, project coordinator for the Multi-Events Cultural Center, explained to the committee that the Joint Powers Board would apply for a grant of $950,000 from the Minnesota Amateur Sports Commission. The grant would allow the completion of most of the Phase I elements of the project eliminated because of a lack of funding. Nelson said the matter had been brought before the Amateur Sports Commission and the project had been given a third position priority ranking out of eight requests. Nelson stressed that at this point, the funds would come without any strings attached. The request, if approved, would still have to make its way through a number of committees. He said that after his last experience, he has no intention of allowing the request to go forward if they demand matching funds. No one has the money, he said.

The purpose of the Amateur Sports commission is to "elevate the economic and social benefits of sport to enrich the lives of all Minnesotans." Nelson said that the grant money can be used for any project as long as it can be proven that it is promoting economic benefits through sport events and providing increased opportunities.

Nelson also asked the committee to consider allowing a professional

School District to begin search for ag instructor

Thief River Falls School District 564 has taken the first steps in hiring a teacher of agricultural education. Monday night, the board approved a recommendation to advertise the position.

The recommendation asks that prospective candidates be able to develop an integrated ag program for the district, provide instruction in all phases of secondary ag program, develop an FFA chapter program in collaboration with other ag programs, facilitate program articulation with post secondary programs, and facilitate educational partnerships with agri-business.

Barb Iverson, board member, asked whether students would be interested in taking an ag program class.

Several board members thought there is interest, and noted that it would not be production agriculture but a much broader integrated program.

Hank Hallstrom, board member, said agriculture is by far the largest business in this area and it's a shame the district doesn't have an ag program.

Superintendent Jerry Rohrbeck said there are districts in Minnesota which have integrated programs that can serve as models for the Thief River Falls program. He also noted that the individual selected for the position will probably cross more lines than any other teacher. The person who will occupy the position must be a licensed teacher.

■ The district has begun development of a profile for Franklin Middle School Principal. Rohrbeck said he would like to be able to offer the position to someone no later than April. In the meantime the district must develop a profile of what competencies, standards this person must meet and what the district would like to see in a candidate for this position.

■ Jean Larson, board member, presented information on "Your Community Schools". The project is designed to gradually rebuild and strengthen the public's confidence and trust in Minnesota's public schools. Larson explained that more will be learned about the program in future meetings. But they hope to implement the program, which she hopes will improve dialogue with the public.

If adopted by the district, teachers would be asked to give presentations about schools, kids, teaching and learning to the public. Larson said it would be nice to interact with the community without asking for money.

■ The board approved an extended sick leave policy Monday night. The policy allows employees who have exhausted all leave options to utilize up to 10 additional days of sick leave if other employees donate sick leave. The request to the board may be made only in situations where a spouse or child(ren) is critically ill. This procedure does not apply in cases where the employee is ill.

■ Monday night, the school board canvassed returns of the school district general election, which involved a three-year term on the board, a five-year term on the board and the levy referendum. Final vote tallies show that Lyle C. Olson won the three year term with a total of 1,353 votes. Randy Torstol was the top vote getter among candidates vying for the five-year term with 1,213 votes. The final vote for the levy referendum was 2,013 in favor and 1,693 opposed.

According to the Minnesota Department of Children, Families and Learning, School District 564 in Thief River Falls was one of 69 districts in the state holding levy referendums November 4. Four

Jean Larson named Hero by Academic Excellence Foundation of Minnesota

Jean Larson

Jean Larson of Thief River Falls is among 23 Minnesota individuals to be named MAEF Heroes by the Minnesota Academic Excellence Foundation for their contributions to K-12 education in Minnesota.

Presentation is to be made during the MAEF annual meeting and dinner Friday, November 14, at the Airport Marriott Hotel in Bloomington.

In addition to the 23 individuals, 12 organizations and two media entities are also to be recognized.

Larson is being recognized "for effectively promoting MAEF mission and programs as a school board member and community advocate" and "for organizing an Academic Booster Club." She is in her second term as a member of the School District 564 board of education and serves as president of the Thief River Falls Academic Boosters.

Heroes to be honored were nominated by individuals around the state and selected by MAEF, the primary advocate for promoting and recognizing the importance of academic excellence in Minnesota's students, schools and communities.

The organization focuses on increasing local accountability for student learning, creating values which demand and support high levels of student achievement and implementing innovative results-oriented partnerships that advance student learning and improve educator practice. MAEF also provides a voice for the education customer: students, business and communities.

Individuals selected as MAEF heroes must be active MAEF volunteers. MAEF staff and board members are not eligible. Nominees must satisfactorily fulfill the accountabilities of their MAEF volunteer roles plus make contributions that exceed the expectations of those roles. The nominee may be a community person whose work contributes to the ideals of MAEF.

Interaction with MAEF may be ongoing in nature or may be a one-time contribution of major impact. Nominees must model behaviors which are consistent with MAEF's mission. Candidates may be nominated by anyone for their accomplishments and contributions during the past two years or longer. MAEF Hero awards were first presented in 1995.

CRP sign-up deadline Friday

Pianist Kristen Langaas rehearses with the Lincoln high school jazz band for the "Remember When" concert to be conducted Saturday, November 15, in the Lincoln high school small gym. The concert and dance with feature the Lincoln jazz band and "Swingsations" jazz choir with big band music from the 1940s.

With the 16th general sign-up for the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) scheduled to end Friday, November 14, Pennington county landowners have submitted bids on about 23,000 additional acres, according to Glenn Schafer, executive director of the Pennington County Farm Service Agency.

Approximately 73,000 acres of previous CRP contracted land came out of the program in September in Pennington county. In the 15th sign-up period, bids on about 20,000 acres were accepted.

"We are hopeful that a large percentage of the bids being submitted in the 16th sign-up will be accepted as well," Schafer said. "The environmental index points have come back a lot higher than before and we expect that will help quite a bit.

"There are plantings of lots of native grasses included in the bids, along with restored wetlands and wildlife practices," he added. "The 23,000 acres involve about 180 separate bids and we are scheduled to work with landowners right up to the deadline Thursday."

While interest has been high, Schafer said it is only about half of what was experienced during the 15th sign-up. With a high acceptance rate during this sign-up, the county could have about half of its expiring CRP acreage back under contract for 1998 and beyond.

Wally Sparby, formerly of Thief River Falls and now state executive director of the FSA, said that enrollment numbers are down across the state in comparison to the 15th sign-up. The current sign-up period has run five weeks in length.

Sparby said the new environ-

Complaints about smell from river will not likely to go away

River Falls.

Apparently, the smell has been a problem in Thief River Falls for a number of years. Some of the individuals at the meeting Wednesday believe it has been more of a problem in the past two years. As explanation to their claim, they point to the winter draw downs requested of Agassiz and Thief Lake during the past two years.

The draw downs were requested in an effort to lessen very real flood concerns — not necessarily for the City of Thief River Falls, but rural residents. Despite the draw downs, the rural residents experienced extensive overland flooding last spring.

Rural residents petitioned the Red Lake Watershed to clean State Ditch 83 believing it could provide relief from the overland flooding.

Emerson said that the Watershed had decided to proceed with cleaning State Ditch 83. He said they had met with some opposition from environmental groups and Department of Natural Resources. One letter from the DNR, which Emerson and others called "alarmist", suggested that it could lead to "increased downstream flooding and sedimentation." More study and meetings will be held prior to proceeding with efforts to clear the ditch and slope the riverbank.

Some of the officials at the meeting Wednesday are looking at the project as a possible stepping stone to develop a solution to the foul odor problem in Thief River Falls.

Officials are also looking at a fall draw down instead of a winter draw down, a variety of techniques designed to aerate the water prior to it reaching Thief River Falls, and chemical treatment as a solution to the foul odor.

A solution involving a fall draw down would have to answer how much moisture would be needed from spring runoff to refill pools needed for wildlife, and whether it would be a solution or just delay the inevitable. Wildlife officials were unable to attend the Wednesday meeting due to scheduling conflicts. Officials hope to work with them in finding a solution.

In working on the solution, officials also believe a fall draw down could answer some of the overland flooding concerns as well.

It was apparent, however, that discussion of the issue would involve a balancing of human needs with needs of wildlife.

Not everyone believed a fall thaw down could answer the problem. Roland Klantar, area farmer, said they cannot find a solution without addressing the problem. He believes the problem involves pooling water on ground that is basically peat. He suggested rotating pools of water, allowing vegetation to take over drained pools and then burning it during the rotation. He believes the problem has been here for a long time and will remain a problem and Thief River Falls should just get used to it.

Bob Carlson, Pennington County Commissioner was of the opinion that others should share the smell. He suggested a system of falls to aerate the water.

Others proposed a fall draw down and various aeration structures somewhere along the Thief River or near one of the structures such as at Agassiz.

Don Barron, Thief River Falls City Council representative, is of the belief that if Agassiz monitored its release in the spring or winter, he suspects they would be in violation of MPCA rules pertaining to sewage lagoon discharge.

It was clear Wednesday that officials had many more questions about how to address the rotten egg smell, flooding and State Ditch 87, jurisdiction, permits, aeration techniques and cost.

At the conclusion of the meeting, it was the consensus that another meeting should be called sometime in January.

North Valley Home Health observes 50 years of service

provision of services has also increased for North Valley Home Health, which now maintains offices in Warren, Stephen and Newfolden and in 1996 made nearly 11,000 home health visits.

A variety of services is available to clients and families in their own homes. Some of these services include skilled nurse visits, teaching, rehabilitation and personal care services.

Often home care is needed for patients who are discharged from the hospital but need help at home during their convalescence. Home care is also utilized for chronically ill or disabled patients who, with a little help, can continue to live in their own homes rather than enter a nursing home. Home care also works with the Hospice program when patients are terminally ill and wish to remain at home.

Services are provided in a number of areas by people with a variety of skills and training, including registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, home health aides, physical therapists and occupational therapists.

Included in the services provided by RNs and LPNs are health teaching, monitoring of medication use and injections, catheter care, IV therapy, wound care, blood specimen draws and reporting health progress and changes to the clients' physicians.

Duties of home health aides include bathing, grooming, meal preparation, exercise programs and keeping the home environment safe and clean. All home health aides work under the direct supervision of the RN staff and are required to have at least 84 hours of specialized training.

Charges to clients for home care are made on a per visit or per hour basis, whichever is applicable. If a client qualifies, funding assistance is available through a variety of payment sources, including Medicare, Medical Assistance, Veterans Administration, private insurance, county waivered programs and private pay/sliding fee.

Anyone can make a referral to the home health program. A home evaluation will then be done by a registered nurse. The physician is contacted and a plan of care is developed. After these preliminary activities are completed, services may be provided.

"Home care offers an economical health care alternative to hospitalization or nursing home residency," director Coeterier said, "and allows the client to remain at home in familiar surroundings."

CRP sign-up period to end on Friday, Nov. 14

mentally-focused CRP provides immediate benefits to producers, ranchers, and taxpayers though reduced soil erosion, improved water quality and expanded wildlife habitat.

Under the voluntary program, landowners enter into contracts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to place erodible and other environmentally sensitive cropland in conservation practices for 10 to 15 years. In exchange, landowners receive annual rental payments for the land and cost-share assistance for establishing those practices.

"In Minnesota we're all working hard to tell producers about this important opportunity and to sign up every interested qualifying applicant," Sparby said.

"I want to encourage all landowners to consider enrolling their eligible environmentally-sensitive land in the new CRP," he added. "The sign-up deadline is coming up fast but producers still have time to place an offer at their local county Farm Service Agency office."

All land that is offered for enrollment in the program must compete for acceptance based on an environmental benefits index that ensures fair and equal consideration for all types of land. Producers will be notified no later than March of 1998 as to which acres have been accepted into the CRP.

Funds sought for events center

fund raiser to seek private donations for the Multi-Events Cultural Center.

The committee and council will consider a number of questions including whether the city can afford to operate an aquatic center if funds are raised for the project.

Another matter expected to be reviewed by the entire city council is the proposed expansion of the Huck Olson Arena. Private funds would fund the entire project, explained Dale Wennberg, council representative and committee member.

Wennberg said the private group supporting the project divided the project into three phases. The entire project would consist of additional locker rooms, ice plant, storage room for the Zamboni, and an Olympic ice arena. Wennberg said the local group would like to proceed with fundraising for Phases I and II, which include locker rooms and the Zamboni and ice plant rooms.

Roger Reierson

Roger Reierson heads Greater N.D. Association.

Roger Reierson, president and chief executive officer of Flint Communications in Fargo, ND, is the new chairman of the board of directors of the Greater North Dakota Association - the state chamber of commerce.

Roger is the son of Milt and Eileen Reierson of Thief River Falls and a 1969 graduate of Lincoln high school. An article in the November issue of Business Report, published by the Greater North Dakota Association, provides the following information on the Thief River Falls native.

Reierson's involvement with GNDA spans more than 18 years. He first served on the Public Relations Council and has since been active on that committee, chairing it for 10 years. He was named to the Governor's Committee of 100 and served on the public relations committee for Vision 2000. He has also been active in Business Challenge, serving as a resident business leader for four years and a speaker for six years.

Since 1983 Reierson has been president and CEO of Flint Communications in Fargo.

After working his way through college by managing a local golf course, Reierson set out to pursue a career in the golf field. Three months and one phone call later he found himself at an advertising agency writing ads and marketing plans.

"It was an easy choice," he says, "a career of going after a target (audience) or of missing one (the green)."

A native of Thief River Falls, MN, Reierson began his career in his hometown (with Quillen & Associates). In 1976 he joined Harold Flint at Flint Communications in Fargo as an account executive. Since then, he has built a reputation for creating successful marketing plans and multi-media campaigns that deliver results for Flint clients. During his tenure as president the agency has increased twofold in size and scope, but Reierson has never lost sight of the original vision of founder Harold Flint: full partnership advertising done with expertise, creativity and fun.

Reierson graduated from Bemidji State University with a degree in marketing and management, did graduate work at the University of North Dakota and has taught media buying at Moorhead State University.

Away from the office he's actively involved with several organizations, including the Fargo Chamber of Commerce (past chair) and the United Way of Cass-Clay board, the Downtown Business Association board (past chair), Northern States Power Company's North Dakota advisory board, ShareHouse Recovery Center board, North Dakota State University School of Business advisory board and the Advertising Agency Network International board (past president).

He has received the Fargo-Moorhead AdFed Silver Medal award for advertising person of the year.

Roger and his wife, Arlene, live in Moorhead and have two children: Andy, 19, a 1997 graduate of Moorhead high school, and Alyssa, 13. He still likes to get out on the golf course when he can and he's also a certified hockey devotee, which helps explain his other motto: "If you spend your life between the blue lines, you'll never score."

MECC joint powers board meeting Nov. 17

Multi-Events Cultural Center Joint Powers Board will meet 11:30 a.m. Monday, November 17, at the Evergreen Eating Emporium.

Items on the agenda include an opportunity for members of the public to comment, an update on the project, review of phase I components, fund development strategies, and an update on the Amateur Sports Commission.

Seminar sheds new light on women's role in farming

by Kathi Carlson
The Times Reporter

Last week a professional looking group of women listened intently to a speaker standing at the front of a large meeting room at the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls. An observer would not have guessed the occupation these women represented.

Agriculture is the profession of the women, and the speaker was Rosemary Hartter of H & H Marketing Skills of Eureka, IL. The topic was commodity marketing.

"Marketing 101 – For Women Only" was the name of the seminar sponsored by Minnesota Wheat Growers and the Penn-Mar-Red Chapter of Minnesota Agri-Women. The seminar was limited to 50 participants, and women came from as far away as Barrett, a three and one-half hour drive from Thief River Falls, to attend the one-day session.

Named by the editors of Successful Farming magazine as one of the top 10 women in the nation to positively affect agriculture, Rosemary Hartter is a sought-after teacher of marketing skills. She has spoken at the Chicago Board of Trade and has had many articles published about her marketing know-how and accomplishments.

The energetic 73-year-old will share her vast knowledge at 28 seminars across the country in the coming year. She could do more, but says, "There are limits!" Her sister accompanied her on the 780-mile trek to Thief River Falls in a new Chevrolet Blazer that Rosemary has deemed "too costly."

In addition to operating H & H Marketing Skills with her daughter Jan, Rosemary continues to be an active partner in the family farm operation that she operates with her husband, Calvin Coolidge Hartter.

Rosemary was born on a farm near Eureka, Illinois, a small community about 140 miles southwest of Chicago. One of four daughters, she began working in the fields at the age of 13. The physical part of farming was "natural" and in addition to driving a school bus, Rosemary worked side by side with her husband throughout their marriage. Her marketing skills, however, were born of necessity.

In 1980 the Hartters were deeply in debt. Because part of the land they farmed was estate land owned by Rosemary and her sister, Rosemary decided to become a more active participant in the marketing of the grain they grew, an aspect of farming that "Calvin hated."

She began to study marketing in 1980, reading everything that she could find and taking a nine-week course at a local community college. She repeated the course the following year. In 1982 she began teaching marketing. After applying Rosemary's skills, the Hartters paid off the last of their loans on Rosemary's 65th birthday.

She uses a variety of handouts, an overhead projector, audience participation activities and a lot of humor to teach a very complex subject.

Included in the seminar materials was a copy of the book Beginner's Guide to Commodity Marketing that Rosemary authored as a teaching tool. The first chapter of the book, "Learning the Jargon," was the first topic of seminar, and marketing terms that need to be understood were discussed.

The next chapter and seminar topic, "Following the Markets," was preceded by an interesting history about how the Chicago Board of Trade was founded.

At one time, resources from the earth such as salt, precious stones and minerals were used as bartering chips. But the supply of food was uncertain, and neither products nor prices were standardized. Only the shrewdest and wisest traders were able to make the best deals.

As settlers pushed west across this country, new markets were created and the demand for a steady and economical food supply increased. But the lack of organization and regulation created problems.

Farmers would promise to deliver grain to millers at an agreed on price, but these terms often changed by delivery time. Weights and grades were not established. Dramatic price fluctuations often resulted. Farmers and buyers ended up in bitter disputes.

As problems and conflicts continued to grow, one thing became clear – old trade practices were no longer adequate.

In 1848 about 80 Chicago businessmen organized the Chicago Board of Trade to supervise commodity transactions between buyers and sellers. Today, many other commodities exchanges have been founded to serve the sophisticated needs of the market.

Throughout the remainder of the day topics included "Basic Marketing Records," "What Influences the Market?" and "Marketing Alternatives."

Rosemary's ever-present sense of humor was a welcome respite while trying to digest the interesting but complex information she was teaching.

During the lunch break, fascinating conversations were exchanged that not only changed one's opinion about agriculture but opened one's eyes to the role that many women are taking in the operations of their family farms.

It is Rosemary's opinion that often women are better than men at commodities marketing. The men are "too emotional" and "unwilling to keep records long enough." Men typically hold onto grain, hoping for an opportunity to sell at a better price while women tend to be more interested in security and want to sell sooner.

While Rosemary usually teaches the intensive course in two consecutive days, the Penn-Mar-Red Agri-Women opted to have a one-day session this fall and bring her back in April for another session.

Penn-Mar-Red Agri-Women is a chapter of Minnesota Agri-Women. Arlene Nowak of St. Hilaire is the president of the local chapter and Norma Hanson of Goodridge is the current president of Minnesota Agri-Women, an affiliate of American Agri-Women.

Founded in 1974, American Agri-Women is a non-profit, non-partisan public interest group. Women from all walks of life – producers, educators and consumers – are encouraged to participate.

The local chapter currently has about 16 members. They meet monthly except during the busy summer months when the physical part of farming is in full swing. New members are always welcome.

Education is the primary focus of Penn-Mar-Red Agri-Women. Rosemary Hartter's informative and enjoyable seminar was evidence of its commitment to that objective.

Women from as far away as Barrett attended a recent seminar "Marketing 101 – For Women Only" at the Best Western Inn in Thief River Falls. The seminar was sponsored by the Penn-Mar-Red chapter of Minnesota Agri-Women and the Minnesota Wheat Growers Association.

Hailed by the editors of Successful Farming magazine as one of the top 10 women in the nation to positively affect agriculture, the knowledgable and humorous 73-year-old Rosemary Hartter's mission is to share marketing information in a very down-to-earth manner. Her seminar, "Marketing 101 – For Women Only," held recently in Thief River Falls was one of 28 seminars she will present across the country in the coming year.

Presenter Rosemary Hartter (left) used visual aids, audience participation and lots of humor to teach commodities marketing skills to a group of women at a recent seminar held in Thief River Falls recently. Connie Mahrkens of Thief River Falls (right) organized the seminar which was sponsored by the Penn-Mar-Red Chapter of Minnesota Agri-Women and the Minnesota Wheat Growers Association.

Currently more than 600,000 home care aides work to ensure a clean and healthy environment, shop for and prepare meals, and provide personal care services. Their services generally are appropriate for individuals who require care that cannot easily or effectively be provided solely by family and friends.

Through their dedicated home care aides and other staff, Pine to Prairie Home Health Care, a Medicare certified home care agency, has been providing services since 1984 and has regional offices in Fosston, Thief River Falls, Karlstad, Grygla, Roseau, International Falls, Kelliher and Bemidji. ON THE OTHER HAND

Beth Olson
Lincoln High School

This past summer I had the opportunity to experience something not many of my friends or family have. I traveled to Europe with a church youth group.

Why did we go? The main attraction was to see and take part in the World Youth Day celebration, which took place in Paris, France. World Youth Day is a celebration of the Catholic faith that takes place every two years in a different location. Catholics from all over the world come together for four to five days and celebrate their faith together with one of the most important people in the world – the Pope.

Our adventure began on the morning of August 14, 1997, when we took off from the Minneapolis/St. Paul airport. Actually, my adventure began the day before when my mom and I had driven to the Twin Cities to do a little last minute shopping at the Mall of America.

Around 5:30 a.m., my mom and I hurried to the airport to check into my flight. We got to the airport a little after 6 a.m. and ran down the airport terminal in desperate search of my group. We finally found them and got in line to check in for our flight to St. Louis, which would connect us to New York City, and then to our final destination: Rome, Italy. By the time we had checked in all of our bags and had exchanged our money for some Italian lire, it was only 6:45 a.m. We had over two hours to wait for our plane to begin boarding, and I (along with my mother, who would not be accompanying me) was a nervous wreck. We chattered like nervous hens, double checking everything.

Finally, we boarded the plane and the pilot began the last minute preparations before take-off. The flight attendant began her speech on safety rules, and I, a first-time flyer, grabbed the safety manual and began to study madly. After I had located all of the nearest exits and secured my [illegible] bag, I leaned back in the seat and closed my eyes.

Before I knew it, the wheels were skidding on the landing strip and we were slowing down. We were in St. Louis! I had slept through the entire plane ride. In no time at all we were soaring high above the Atlantic Ocean aboard Alitalia Airlines. I couldn't wait to get to Rome. The World Youth Day activities didn't start for another week, so our group had decided to make an extra trip to Italy.

After the eight-hour flight and some bad airplane food, the plane began to slowly descend. My stomach was tied in knots as I looked out the window to discover a world of sandy shoreline and palm trees just below me. I couldn't believe it, I was in Rome!

After we had safely landed, we grabbed our bags, coasted through customs, and boarded the bus that would bring us to our hotel. I waited impatiently for the trip to begin, and finally after what seemed like hours, the bus driver hit the gas pedal, and we were headed to our hotel.

When we arrived at the hotel, everyone unpacked and took a much needed shower. Then, after changing into our most tourist-looking clothing, we walked down the main streets of Rome, breathing in the deep scents of Italian leather and real pizza. We couldn't help but sample some of each.

We were in Rome for four days and saw so many wonderful sights: the Trevi fountain, the Colosseum, and The Spanish Steps to name a few. The ruins and general history of the city made it absolutely beautiful! It didn't rain once while we were there.

On August 18, we took a train from Rome to Paris where the World Youth Day activities were being held. We arrived late on the 19th and had a quick bus tour of the city before we checked into our hotel and went to bed.

The next day was the opening ceremony of World Youth Day at the Champ de Mars, a street under the famous Eiffel Tower. We walked about a mile from the Metro to our designated spot and waited anxiously for the Pope to arrive. After waiting about an hour, a microscopic white dot appeared in the distance and the crowd roared – all 500,000 of us. The Pope had finally arrived.

After an hour long Mass, we strolled around the site and met people from all over the world: England, Ghana, Ireland, and Palestine to name a few. We spent the next few days celebrating the morning Masses and sight seeing in the afternoon. We went to Disneyland Paris, Versailles, several large chateaus, and the Arc de Triomphe. Our final day in Paris was spent shopping and taking a picture with our group at the Paris Opera House.

On the 27th, our tired group entered the Parisian airport for the long trip back to Thief River Falls. After another eight-hour flight across the Atlantic and some more bad airplane food, we arrived back at the Minneapolis/St. Paul airport in one piece. We rushed to the open arms of our friends and family who had been anxiously awaiting our arrival. Even though our trip had been full of wonderful adventures and lasting memories, it was good to be back home in the U.S.A.

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

Put Me In The Penalty Box

Hockey parents are not born, they're made. I should know. My husband and I are under construction.

Because I've been only a hockey spectator and because the sport was introduced in my husband's community, we're what we call hockey "rookies." In other words, we're a stick or two short.

There are many tasks to consider, the biggest of which is clothing a youngster in the appropriate hockey attire. Naively we thought it was as easy as slapping on a pair of skates and sticking a stick in his hand. For this we should spend some time in the penalty box.

Now we realize that we require a comprehensive "how-to" manual complete with step-by-step instructions, detailed photographs and a list of do's and don'ts. A class for credit might also be a good idea.

After dressing our son in hockey attire we realized why most hockey players appear larger than normal: they're basically dressed in padding from head to toe. My little "baby" now looks the size of a full grown child.

The bottom layer was quite simple. At least I could figure it out. Long underwear and a sweatshirt go a long way in keeping a skater warm. But the second layer becomes a little tricky.

How, I wondered, are you supposed to attach the shin pads to the child and stay secure? There aren't any straps. Oh, that's why they sell "Velcro shin pad straps" at the sporting goods store. The elbow pads are much easier, they come with straps. The shoulder pads, after some practice, are also self-explanatory.

Next comes the hockey socks. They remind me of leg warmers. I always wondered what function these socks serve. Decoration, a fashion statement, perhaps? To confuse the mother, perhaps! To make dressing a hockey player an humbling procedure, perhaps! How, I wondered again, are you supposed to hold those hummers up? Oh, that's what garters are for. Silly me.

Then, most players wear what I call hockey pants. In real hockey terminology they're called "breezers." And I thought that was a yogurt treat at the Dairy Queen. Again, I pondered the significance of this piece of the clothing puzzle. How, I wondered, do you hold those beauties up? Oh, I see, that's what suspenders are for. And, really, what function do they perform - to make all hockey players look like they have bubble behinds? I think snowpants would work just as well and would be easier. It's one piece of clothing as opposed to two with their corresponding straps.

Top this concoction off with a jersey (and I thought a light weight coat would suffice), a helmet and he's ready to play hockey. It only took an hour to dress, and sweat was already being produced before we left the house, but that's the nature of the sport, I guess.

Oops, we're forgetting the stick. This also is not as easy as it seems. Sticks, for the most part, come in one-size-fits-all. You measure (somehow judging by the kid's nose), cut it off and tape it - during which the hockey youngster assures you that you're not doing it right. When purchasing the stick you also need to determine if the child "shoots" right-hand or left-handed and that's not always determined by the child's writing hand.

Why can't this be less complicated? I should write a book called "Hockey Dressing Made Easy" and change the hockey world forever.

PRAIRIE RAMBLING

Gretchen Beito

This is the last of my Prairie Ramblings adapted from Josie Bursagrud's 73 page memoir that she wrote at age 89. I met Josie thirty years ago at Valley Home and I was drawn to the white-haired woman with the contented, sunny disposition. We later had many pleasant talks when I interviewed her for my book, "Women of Thief River Falls at the Turn of the Century" (1977). One day she told me how she and her friends once picked arm-loads of lady slipper flowers in the railroad right-of-ways. And the next week Josie died suddenly.

With heartfelt thanks to her son Arthur for loaning me her handwritten papers.

Conclusion

After the new Trinity Church building was dedicated in 1926, the Ladies Aid wanted to to help raise money for expenses. At that time Trinity Aid was one of only two womens groups willing or able to take on banquets. So the women of Trinity had to help out many times when they would have liked to refuse such doings outside of their church.

The first banquet that Josie was in charge of after she became President of the Aid was a rather discouraging affair. The Aid prepared turkey dinner for 300 guests of Land O' Lakes Creamery. The committee went down to the church kitchen the day before and prepared turkey with dressing. They could only roast four turkeys in the ovens at church so they delivered many more turkeys to homes to be roasted.

During the night a bad blizzard blew in and continued until mid-afternoon the day of the banquet. When it came time to bring the turkeys back to church there was so much snow that cars could not get through. So the women called on the men of the church who were always willing to help. The men had to wade through snow and carry the roasters full of turkey and dressing to church.

The attendance that evening was down so the women had lots of food left. The morning after the banquet the women went down to the church kitchen and baked lefse from leftover mashed potatoes. They prepared a nice dinner of turkey and all the trimmings. They went into the stores and put up notices and they told people wherever they went that turkey dinner was to be served that night at Trinity Church. They had a larger crowd than they had food for, so in spite of the worry and work all went well and they were all happy. Josie felt she had so much to be thankful for as everybody was so willing to help, men as well as ladies, and everyone was cheerful about it.

The Aid served banquets in Trinity Church basement for many different organizations, including Northwestern Hospital on opening day, Land O'Lakes, 4-H, Soo Line Railroad, and others.

The banquet that Josie remembered best was the annual Men's Brotherhood lutefisk supper that the men asked her to be in charge of. She asked her faithful helpers on the serving committee if they would stand by her. They said, "Yes!" The day before the dinner she went down to the church kitchen early in the morning to prepare the lutefisk. When Josie arrived she found that there was only 300 pounds of lutefisk.

Josie told Pastor Thompson she would not continue as chairman of the dinner unless he brought her 500 pounds of lutefisk. He looked at her, shocked. "What are you going to do with what is left?" he asked.

"There will be nothing left," Josie replied. She sat all day preparing lutefisk as the pastor did have 200 more pounds of lutefisk delivered. The three helpers, Clara Erickson, Clara Lindberg, and Mrs. Dueckstad, worked in their own homes baking lefse.

At 7 p.m. Clara Lindberg came down to help Josie finish and they concluded, "The supper turned out just great." The women served 600 people and turned away 20 who came late. They ran short of lefse and the only lutefisk left over was one piece which Josie was happy to eat herself. They were all tired but happy as they had had a good time besides the work.

The hot water heater was small and dinner preparation took all the hot water for the egg coffee, as using cold water meant the coffee would not boil fast enough. So when it came time to wash dishes they had to carry or haul water from the Land O' Lakes Creamery. Josie's worries were over then as she and her grandniece went home and left the men to wash dishes and clean up.

The next morning she found a nice clean kitchen when she went down to see how things were.

That was the last time Josie chaired a dinner committee as she was needed to take care of her grandson while her daughter, Alice, worked at the hospital.

When at the age of 65 Josie broke her hip she took life more easy. The last time at Aid was the day Josie was 72 years old and she received her pin as an honorary member, just before she moved to Yakima, Washington, where her daughter had relocated.

Five years later when she returned to Thief River Falls, the new Valley Home was under construction and she moved into Valley Home in 1963 just as soon as it opened. She had been there more than ten years when she wrote, "I am happy here and enjoy life in spite of aches which one my age has to expect when one has arthritis. I still start my day at 6:30 a.m. and end it at 9 p.m. I have never been in the habit of napping during the day and still don't. The days pass by so quickly as I love to read, watch television and do fancy work of different kinds. Since I came to the home I have made 330 pair of pillow cases, hemstitched [illegible] in all colors. The work is a thread work and cross stitch."

The hand-worked pillowcases went to many places in the United States, and many right here in the city. One pair was sent to Peru. Besides, Josie made lunch cloths, aprons, crocheted pieces, and embroidered pillowcases.

It was hard for Josie to walk so she made good use of her wheelchair and rocking chair. Yet she repeated her [illegible] days: "The days pass by so rapidly that it seems the day has just begun when it is gone," she wrote.

Writing contest announced by TRF American Assn. of University Women

"Women in Sports: Stretching the Limits" is the topic of the state writing contest announced by the Thief River Falls branch of American Association of University Women.

The contest encourages students in grades 10, 11 and 12 to research and write about a woman sports hero who in the past 25 years has pushed through barriers to excel as an athlete and has made a difference as a role model for young women. The focus on sports this year celebrates the 25th anniversary of enactment of Title IX in recognition of progress women have recently made in sports and education.

The Thief River Falls AAUW wants to encourage good, clear writing. One winner will be selected for competition at the state level and another will be chosen as a second place winner. Prizes of $50 for first place and $25 for second place will be awarded at the local AAUW meeting on May 18, 1998. Judging criteria are available. Information for essays may come either from library or electronic research or from personal interviews with women in sports.

The local branch and state have previously sponsored writing contests which have focused on women in science, women in arts and women in government. In 1997 Heidi Johnson's essay on Sandra Day O'Connor placed second in state competition.

Format requirements are two to three double-spaced pages in length with the following information in the upper right corner of the first page: name and grade, home address and phone number, school name, address and phone number, and name of teacher.

Students whose essays are chosen to go the the state contest will compete for a $50 first prize and the opportunity to have their essay published in the nationally recognized [illegible].

February 14, 1998 is the deadline for entries. Entries should be submitted to Ruth Tweet, 2505 Nelson Drive, Thief River Falls.

PARENTING TIPS

More Ideas On What To Do In The Grocery Store To Help Children Behave. . .Without Spanking, Hitting or Yelling

Last week we discussed some ideas for what to do with children to help them act appropriately in the grocery store. Here are some more ideas to help make shopping a pleasant experience:

•Reward good behavior. Promise to play a game or read a story when you get home and then do it! In the meantime, praise, praise, praise! When you see your child is doing something right, let him/her know.

•Describe a food in the cart and have your child name the food.

•Bring a pad and pencil or crayons/markers for your child to use while you are shopping.

•Stop unacceptable behavior as soon as it occurs. Don't ignore behavior that is dangerous, destructive or embarrassing. Don't let your child think that you will allow him/her to misbehave in public.

•Develop some "sign language" at home with your child: signals that mean "Stop," "Come here," "Be careful" to use in public. Children are very responsive and strangers are impressed.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Have your child name all the vegetables, breads, etc. in the cart.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. Will Social Security tax rates change in '98 for employed people.

A. The tax rate will not change but the maximum earnings taxable will. As with 1997, the Social Security tax rate will remain at 6.20 percent and Medicare at 1.45 percent for a combined rate of 7.65 percent to be paid by both employees and employers. The self-employed combined tax rate will continue at 15.30 percent.

In 1997 the maximum earnings (gross wages or net self-employment) taxable is $65,400 for Social Security. In 1998 this will be $68,400. All earnings will continue to be taxable for Medicare purposes.

Q. In 1998 how much earnings will be needed to equal a quarter of coverage (QC)?

A. One quarter of coverage, up to a total of four in the year, will be earned for each $700 of earnings (gross wages/net self-employment). This can be from full or part-time work. A quarter of coverage is just the building block to earn coverage for Social Security on your own record.

In addition to their pins they were given miniature quilts – replicas of the large wall-hanging quilt which hangs in the main lobby of NWMC. Those with over 1,000 hours are (seated, left) Jim Cuppett, Clarice Gallither, Olga Engevik and Bertha Schlenker, and (standing, left) Mary Berry, Louise McLean, Pauline Aubol, Thelma Smith, Ruby Huseth and Naomi Peterson. Not pictured are Edythe Pearson and Leah Thompson. Mary Berry had the most accumulated volunteer hours with 12,600.

SPEAKING OF

Sherry LaCoursiere

...Some Oafs

What is an oaf? According to my well-used Roget's Thesaurus, it is a "lout, simpleton, dullard, dunce, blockhead, idiot. Slang, dope, jerk. See 'ignorance.'" According to my fairly new Webster's II New Riverside Dictionary, it means, "A clumsy or stupid person."

The word just appeared in my head while shopping this weekend. Even though the word is generally applied to some young men (I can't imagine why), the objects of my application were two women I happened across. In my head, I termed them "oafs."

Let me tell you about the circumstances of this encounter. My daughter and I took my new, five-week old grandson shopping with us, since Daddy went a'hunting and was not available to babysit. Anyway, it didn't matter because it was going to be a quick trip (if any trip with a little baby and all its necessary "trappings" can be termed "quick.").

The trip turned out to be longer and more things were purchased than planned, as is usually the case. By the time we finished, baby needed full-time push cart maintenance and my daughter, being more accustomed to the task, had taken over the pushing of the cart, which was piled with purchases and topped with a rather restless and unhappy baby in his portable car seat. I was official way-clearer and door opener and also toting a few extra packages.

When we left the double-doored store, I quickly opened the first set of doors for my daughter and the cart. When I started to turn to open the second set of doors for her, I noticed two women coming toward me. Being a kind and polite person, albeit somewhat burdened and busy, I stopped to hold the door for them, leaving my daughter and her cart waiting.

As I held the door for them the women sailed on through with their noses in the air, glanced at me as if I were a label, "Doorperson," and said not a word.

What? No "Thank you," no smile, no nod of appreciation, no acknowledgement of my presence by even a lifted eyebrow. Simply a blank stare at me as if I were a door post. The word that immediately came into my mind was "oafs."

To me, an oaf is someone who is impolite. Not only is he or she impolite, but he is so ignorant that he does not know he is being impolite. Now you see why some young men are called oafs. Sometimes they act stupid and don't want to remember the nice things their mothers taught them because they feel it is not "macho" to be polite. Of course we all know that macho has nothing to do with manners, but most people learn this rather quickly.

But isn't it odd to find women oafs? These women were oafs. It takes very little breath and a very small effort to say, "Thank you." For that matter, it is very easy to murmur the little mannerly words that are music to the ears of others, like "Please," and "Excuse me," and "Hello" and "Good-bye." These are the words our mothers taught us, because being polite was important in those days.

Isn't it important any more? Shouldn't people be kind and polite to one another any more? I wonder - have manners gone out of style?

When women of my age don't bother to say "Thank you," what is happening? When people of my age were young, manners were drilled into them, weren't they? I remember being taught the words "Please" and "Thank you" and all the other polite words over and over when I was very young. Women of my age are the teachers and if they don't have any manners, no wonder so many of our young people are oafs. What will happen to the world when we stop being mannerly?

In high school, back in the "olden days," we had a class called "Social," where we learned about mannerly things. We learned some really dumb stuff, like how to greet a king or a president, but we learned some very practical stuff, too, like how to be respectful to the elderly and to hold doors for others and that the guys should always walk on the street side of the sidewalk so if mud is splashed, it hits the guy rather than the girl, as well as learning about when to say "Please" and "Thank you."

Maybe it is time to have classes like that in school again. I guess that might be the only way some of our children will be learning their manners, if one can judge by those oafs I encountered this weekend.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Eeva Young
Lincoln High School

The Magnet Arts trip was just packed full of excitement. Guthrie Theater, the Minneapolis Institute of Art, Chanhassen Dinner Theater, Orchestra Hall, all smooshed into three days and two nights. I was going to write on the experiences that went on during the trip, but I can't. While the lucky Arts kids were out on the town, I was overloading my brain with the ACTs. The ACTs stands for American College Test. It is a national standardized test for juniors and seniors in high school that are entering into college.

Yes, I was all signed up and ready for the cultural rampage of my life when I found out the notorious test was on Saturday, the second day into the trip.

My parents were chaperones on the trip, so I was left home alone for the weekend. (With strict instructions to behave myself.) After school on Friday, while the Art kids were living it up in Minneapolis, I came home to an empty house and my ACT flash cards. I'm sure they couldn't possibly have had as much fun as I did that night cramming and munching potato chips on the couch.

That night I set multiple alarm clocks for 5:45 and prayed that I wouldn't do my usual morning routine. I automatically smash the alarm clock quiet and roll over and go back to sleep. I also set the alarms strategically around the room so that I had to actually get up and walk across the room before I could shut them off. I must have been nervous about missing the test because all it took in the morning was one obnoxious beep and I jumped right up. I grabbed a shower, an apple, car keys, my bag and headed out the door.

When I pulled up to the high school, I double checked my bag for the necessities, calculator, ACT identification sheet and at least five freshly sharpened pencils. I was set. I casually walked into the school and headed for the cafeteria. A bunch of kids from the other towns were there already, but besides me there was only one other native Lincoln Higher. We chatted anxiously and wandered to the counseling office to resharpen our already pointy pencils.

When we got back we were assigned to tables and had to show our identification sheets. Then we sat. At least five people had succumbed to sleep and were late for the test. We waited for about five minutes, and then the instructions started.

Bill Stock, our school counselor, meticulously went through every boring detail. I know rules have their place, but I seriously question the intelligence of someone taking the ACTs who has to be told there are no boom boxes, CD players, or beepers allowed during the test.

From there, we picked up our pencils and filled in all the vital stats such as name, address, age, etc. At that point a wild-eyed girl burst into the cafeteria. "I'm here! I'm here!" The devilish pony-tailed hair was explanation enough why she was late. She began filling in the tiny circles, her pencil flying as if it had a mind of its own.

"Please turn to the front page of your booklet. The first test is the English test, read through each section carefully. You have forty-five minutes starting now."

I flipped the page and quickly scanned the instructions. The forty-five minutes flew by in a nanosecond. When Mr. Stock called out "Five minutes left," I worked like a madwoman on my last remaining questions. I put my pencil down with a minute left. Whew! One down, three to go.

We whipped out our calculators for the next section – the dreaded math test. I was expecting the worst because, to tell the truth, I'm not particularly gifted in the math area of my brain. Our time was increased to an hour for forty-five questions. The flash cards must have done their job because the questions didn't look like they were written in hieroglyphics dating back to 500 B.C. Once again I finished in the nick of time.

"Please put your pencils down. We will now take a 10 minute break. This is your time to go to the bathroom, get a drink of water, stretch your legs, etc." We all silently filed out of the cafeteria like zombies. By the time I got out of the bathroom people were starting to come out of their trance. But too late? By the time we were functioning normally, it was time to head back to the grindstone. Bill Stock practically had to crack the whip to herd us back to our tables.

Science reasoning was the next portion of the test and for me, one of the hardest. As I think back to the test, I can't recall specific questions, but only catch brief snatches of concepts. Images of precipitates and solids still haunt my dreams.

The final monster was the reading test. I expected the reading test to be fairly simple because that's usually where I do the best in standardized tests. Well, the ACTs is a whole 'nother ball game! There would be a page and a half long story which would be followed by mind boggling, trick questions.

I remember one of the stories, it was about a young girl who had just started kindergarten. She came home from her first day at school and told her parents how much she loved it, and how she couldn't wait to go back. Then, every day while saying good-bye to her parents, she became less and less anxious to go to school. Finally, one day she just told her parents that there would be no more good-byes, that she wasn't going to school. Her parents were shocked because they thought she loved kindergarten. They tried everything they could to get her to go to school, but to no avail.

They finally gave in and said that she didn't have to go to school. At that, the girl promptly burst into tears. But she loved school, and she wanted to go, she told her parents. They were thoroughly confused. She explained that she wanted to go to school, but that she hated saying good-bye to her parents. It made her too sad. If only they would say something else, such as "See you later," she wouldn't be sad. The parents readily agreed to that and sent their happy daughter on her way to school.

I personally didn't enjoy the selection and found it hard to concentrate on answering the questions following it. After three more wacky stories, my experiences with the ACTs were over! As I stood up and stretched, I felt euphoric. "Yes, I'm done! I made it." I also felt intensely drained. I drove myself home and collapsed on my bed. I had three hours to get rid of the sucking sensation in my head before I had to go to work.

So as the Magnet Arts kids got to experience the creative world of Minneapolis, I had my own memorable adventure, and I'm just glad it's over.

Arctic Cat recently presented Arcticwear jackets to four foreign exchange students living in Thief River Falls this year. The students are part of an American government program called the Freedom Support Act, which brings talented students to the United States for a year of education. This is the second year Arctic Cat has welcomed the exchange students with Arcticwear. Pictured from left are: Roman Lysyuk, Nadezhda Shapeshnikova, Jamilya Ismailova, and Aleksandr Primakov.

Arctic Cat donates coats to exchange students

Arctic Cat has welcomed four foreign exchange students to Thief River Falls and presented them with Arcticwear jackets.

The students attending Lincoln High School in Thief River Falls are all from former republics of U.S.S.R. Aleksandr "Alex" Primakov, Russia; Roman Lysyuk, Ukraine; Jamilya Ismailova, Azerbaijan; and Nadezhda "Nadia" Shaposhnikova, Russia, are part of an American government program called the Freedom Support Act, which brings talented students to the United States for a year of education. Approximately one of every 100 students who apply are selected into the program.

This is the second year Arctic Cat has welcomed the exchange students with Arcticwear jackets, in a program that was the brainchild of Arctic Cat employee Scott Pream.

"I wanted those students to have warm, positive memories of Thief River Falls and Arctic Cat," Pream said.

The students were exceptionally appreciative of the jackets, saying that the climate in Thief River Falls is already colder than where their homes are located, with the exception of Primakov, who is from the Moscow region. This is the exchange students' first experience with Arctic Cat and snowmobiles. They said that snowmobiles are extremely rare in their countries, so they are looking forward to their first snowmobile rides with their host families this winter.

Arctic Cat CEO Christopher Twomey was proud that Arctic Cat left a positive impression with the exchange students. "Every day, in our personal and business lives, we repeatedly see how global the world is quickly becoming. Exposing our young people and our community to the diversity of the world will help us all grow and understand this exciting global community. This gift is our way of showing support for these international students and the program they are involved in," Twomey said.

Inter-County Nursing Service celebrates Home Health Care Month

November is Home Health Care Month, and Inter-County Nursing Service is celebrating by honoring its dedicated employees who provide quality heath care services in Pennington and Red Lake Counties.

A recent publication of Inter-County Nursing Service answered a number of commonly asked questions about home health care.

How does home care work?

When it comes to home care there are a few simple points to remember:

- Medicare requires that you be homebound–confined to your home. You must need the assistance of another person or an assistive device such as a wheelchair to travel to doctor appointments. Occasional outings once a month or so or birthday dinners are permitted.
- Your doctor must write an order stating the reason for your care.
- Medicare requires that you need the services of one or more of the following: registered nurse, physical therapist or speech therapist on an part-time or intermittent basis. Medicare does not pay for round the clock care or maintenance care.

Who else pays for care?

- Medical assistance also pays for home health care and sometimes the requirements are different than Medicare.
- Some private insurance policies provide for home health coverage, usually by a registered nurse.
- Minnesota has an Alternative Care program that provides certain home health services to people as an alternative to being in a nursing home. There is a financial requirement, but people can also pay privately for this service.
- Inter-County Nursing service uses a sliding fee schedule if there is no other pay source for home care.

What is a home health aide?

Home health aides provide personal care services such as bathing and work under the supervision of a registered nurse. Home health aide services are provided by the hour, usually one to two hours at a time.

If housekeeping services are needed they can be arranged but are not done by a home health aide.

Public Health Nurse Anita Cardinal describes the employees of Inter-County Nursing Service as "people of empathy, patience and heart. They are faces of compassion, hands of comfort and voices of caring–special people providing special cares in the home."

Libertie Traxler celebrates 4th birthday November 9

Doctors were unsure of how long Libertie Traxler would live when they made their initial diagnosis of the rare Tay-Sachs disease (TSD) when she was 16 months old.

On Sunday, November 9 Libertie celebrated her 4th birthday.

Libertie's parents are Bob and Kim Traxler of Roseau. Her grandparents are Ann and Bob Traxler of Plummer and Sandy and Obert Sunsdahl of Thief River Falls.

TSD is a fatal genetic disorder in children that causes the progressive destruction of a child's central nervous system. For a child to have TSD, both parents must be carriers of the recessive gene that causes the condition.

Libertie's physical condition has continued to deteriorate, and she spends most days in the hospital, making occasional return visits to her home. Her parents however are never far away. Her mother Kim gives her daughter a bath or holds her at the hospital before going to work and then returns to her at the end of the day. Kim and Bob take her for walks, fun trips to Grand Forks for photographs and celebrate festive occasions like everyone else.

Libertie is alert and responds to noises in the room. She knows familiar voices and likes television and music, typical of a 4 year old. She celebrated her birthday on Sunday with family and friends.

15 libraries damaged by flooding to receive help

As president of the Minnesota Library Association, Ruth Jauquet-Kalinoski of Thief River Falls will participate Thursday in a ceremony to award books and cash to 15 area libraries damaged by this spring's flood. The event will begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Grand Forks Public Library, 2110 Library Circle.

The libraries have been selected to receive cash and books valued in excess of $750,000 by the Minnesota Library Association Foundation's Disaster Relief Fund.

Representatives of each of the selected libraries as well as community leaders have been invited to the ceremony. Information regarding the distribution process for the extensive collection of new and used books accumulated as part of the effort will also be made available.

Jauquet-Kalinoski said $121,000 in cash and an estimated 32 pallets of books would be distributed to:

Ada Public, East Grand Forks Public, Grand Forks Public and Lake Agassiz Regional libraries, elementary school libraries at Crestwood and River Heights in East Grand Forks and Belmont, Lewis & Clark, Lincoln, Viking, West and Wilder in Grand Forks, and three private school libraries including Sacred Heart in East Grand Forks, Oak Grove Lutheran high school in Fargo and Grand Forks Christian school in Grand Forks.

Jauquet-Kalinoski said that some book donations have been received by the East Grand Forks public library following her appearance on its behalf on the Oprah Winfrey television show earlier this year.

The East Grand Forks library, which was destroyed with all its contents in the flood, is now located in a large skating rink warming house in East Grand Forks and has plans for a new building next year. It has shelving donated from another library moving into new quarters and has been busily operating this summer.

Cold weather rule can help with heating bills

Minnesota's Cold Weather Rule helps protect financially-strapped tenants and homeowners against disconnection of their heat during the winter months. Those who anticipate trouble paying heating bills or want to set up a payment plan that fits their budget should take steps to protect themselves.

The Rule is in effect from October 15 through the following April 15 and applies to utilities regulated by the state. The rule does not prohibit winter shutoffs, however, so people could face disconnection for nonpayment if they don't take the steps necessary to qualify.

First, contact your utility to discuss how you might qualify for protection under the Cold Weather Rule. There are three types of protection—Inability to Pay status, the Ten Percent Plan and the Payment Schedule.

To qualify for Inability to Pay status or the Ten Percent Plan, an individual's annual income must not be more than 185 percent of the federal poverty level (current poverty level is $7,740 for one person and $15,600 for a family of four.

In addition, the person must be willing to set up a payment plan. For Inability to Pay status, the person must also have a current account as of October 15 when the Cold Weather Rule season begins.

Any residential customer, regardless of income, qualifies for a payment schedule. For additional information, contact your local utility company or call the consumer affairs office of the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission at 612-296-0406.

Host Warroad won the team title in the Friday/Saturday Section 8A meet with 425 points, followed by Fergus Falls at 414, Park Rapids Area 367, Detroit Lakes 241, Crookston 202, Thief River Falls 194, Fosston/Bagley 167, Roseau 45, and Pelham 3.

In addition to her diving title, Haviland was a third place finisher in the 100 breaststroke.

Sophomore Andrea Olin was the Prowlers' only other swimmer among the top-8 qualifiers for Saturday's finals. She finished seventh in the 200 and eighth in the 500 freestyle.

"Getting the two divers to state was great," noted Thief River Falls assistant coach Brian Olson, who said the Prowlers' swimmers turned in some of their top performances of the year during the meet. "Everybody did more than what was expected. They went above and beyond what we anticipated. It would have been nice to get some swimmers to state, but with everybody swimming so well, that would have been icing on the cake."

Head coach Shon Thompson, who was named Section 8A Diving Coach of the Year at the conclusion of the meet, concurred with Olson. "It was a very good meet for our kids," he said. "They all did a great job. Almost every one of them set a personal-best."

Gators advance to semifinals

■ B/G-MR knocks off top-ranked Deer River 22-8

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River, after knocking off No. 1-ranked Deer River 22-8 in the opening round quarterfinals, will tackle Pelican Rapids Friday in the Class AA state high school football playoff semifinals at the Metrodome. Kickoff is scheduled for 1 p.m.

Pelican Rapids advanced with a high scoring 63-38 quarterfinal victory over Eden Valley-Watkins.

The 9-2 Gators were unranked in the final Class AA Associated Press poll published at the close of the 1997 regular season. But unbeaten Deer River ran into an upset minded underdog in the Friday night match-up at Middle River.

The Badger/Greenbush-Middle River defense kept the potent Deer River offense off the scoreboard for three quarters. The Gators' defense even opened the scoring when David Truscinski reached the end zone on a 17 yard first quarter interception return. Truscinski then hit Daryl Wockenfuss with the conversion pass.

Richard Wockenfuss scored from a yard out to make it 14-0 at halftime.

Deer River got back in the game when a Jake Olson-to-Quinn Hastie pass play went for 95 yards and a fourth quarter touchdown. Olson found Josh Tupper with a conversion pass for a 14-8 game.

But the Gators clinched it when Richard Wockenfuss scored on a 16 yard run and Andy Sebenkey added the conversion run.

Richard Wockenfuss finished with 114 yards on 23 carries and Truscinski was 10-for-17 passing for 98 yards. The 95-yard touchdown play represented most of the 214 total offensive yards for Deer River.

The Gators face another defensive challenge against Pelican Rapids. The Vikings racked up 482 yards on the ground in its quarterfinal shoot-out with Eden Valley-Watkins. Terry Mutz scored four touchdowns to lead the Pelican Rapids offense that had two 100-yard runners - Jake Wiese with 166 yards on 14 carries and Ray Sjostrom with 119 yards on 10 attempts. Wiese scored twice.

While the Vikings were moving the ball on the ground, Eden Valley-Watkins went to the air as quarterback Matt Hendricks completed 22 of 46 passes for five touchdowns and no interceptions.

Pelican Rapids, now 11-1, was ranked No. 5 in the final state poll. Eden Valley-Watkins was No. 10.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River, after a 1-2 start, has won eight straight. The Gators opened the season with a 44-7 win over Waubun before losing to highly-regarded Hawley 26-20. They stumbled in a 20-15 Week 3 loss to Fosston, but finished the regular season with wins over Warren-Alvarado-Oslo 28-0, Red Lake Falls 14-0, Lake Park-Audubon 30-6, Ada-Borup 46-26, and Fertile-Beltrami 22-14.

A No. 1 seed earned Badger/Greenbush-Middle River a first round bye in the Section 8AA playoffs, where the Gators beat Pine River-Backus 38-21 in the semifinals and shut out Mahnomen 28-0 in the finals.

It was the second straight post-season title for the Steve Willman-coached Gators, who won the Section 8C crown a year ago when they finished 9-3 following a 19-16 first round Class C state playoff loss on the road to Cook County.

This year's Minnesota State High School League expansion to six classes of post-season play put the Gators in Class AA.

In the other Class AA quarterfinals over the weekend, St. Agnes defeated Minnesota Valley Lutheran 27-22 and Waterville-Elysian-Morristown beat Pine Island 13-7. Those two will meet Thursday in a 1 p.m. semifinal game. Pelican Rapids and No. 9 St. Agnes are the only remaining Class AA teams who were ranked in the final regular season Associated Press Top Ten list.

State semifinals in all six classes will be played in the Metrodome Thursday and Friday. Winners return to the downtown Minneapolis dome for the Prep Bowl finals Saturday, Nov. 22.

Two Pioneers receive volleyball recognition

Two Northland Community and Technical College sophomores earned 1997 Minnesota Community College Conference All-Northern Division volleyball honors, it was announced by Pioneers head coach Shari Olson.

Naomi Wilebski, a Lancaster native who played high school volleyball for Kittson County North, was a First Team all-division selection. She led the Pioneers with an average of 2.69 kills and .98 blocks per game.

Paula Hovda, a Roseau product, was a Second Team all-division pick. She led Northland with 3.69 digs per game.

Northland finished the year 11-14 overall. The Pioneers gained an MCCC state tournament berth in dramatic fashion by first beating Central Lakes 3-2 in the regular season finale, then knocking off the Raiders again, 3-1, three days later in a special state tournament-qualifying playoff match.

In state tournament play at Mankato, Northland went 1-2 in first-day round-robin pool play matches – losing to host Bethany 15-3, 15-8 and to Vermilion 15-12, 15-3 before beating Minnesota West 15-13, 15-7.

Those results put Northland in the Saturday consolation round, where Rainy River beat the Pioneers 15-12, 4-15, 15-7, 15-12.

Hunting for hunting land is made easier with maps

Finding a great place to hunt is often as challenging as the actual hunting itself. Minnesota hunters are fortunate that the search is not nearly as difficult as it is in many other states where public land is rare. Texas, for example, has only 2 percent of its total area open to public hunting. Compare that to Minnesota, where 23 percent--more than 11 million acres--is publicly owned, almost all of that land is open to public hunting.

The most commonly hunted public lands in Minnesota are state wildlife management areas, state forests, national forests and federal waterfowl production areas.

Minnesota's 1,034 WMAs are wetlands, uplands or woods owned and managed for wildlife by the Department of Natural Resources. Hunting is open to the public during regular seasons. The DNR's "Guide to Minnesota Wildlife Lands" shows the location of each WMA and lists the larger areas that have resident managers and detailed maps. Get the free map by writing or calling the DNR Information Center, 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155; phone 612-296-6157.

The 3 million acres encompassed by Minnesota's 56 state forests hold game such as moose, deer, bear and ruffed grouse. Except in a few portions, these areas are entirely open to public hunting. A free state highway map showing the location of all state forests is available by writing to the Minnesota Office of Tourism, 100 Metro Square, 121 Seventh Place East, St. Paul, MN 55101-2112.

Most of the federally managed WPA wetlands and surrounding uplands are open to hunting. Exact locations are shown on the Minnesota Public Recreation Information Maps.

Portions of Minnesota's eight national wildlife refuges are open to hunting. Restrictions are given on pages 108 to 107 of the 1997 DNR Hunting Regulations. For hunting maps and regulations, write to the Regional Director, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Bishop Henry Whipple Federal Building, 1 Federal Drive, Fort Snelling, MN 55111-4056.

Chippewa and Superior national forests in northern Minnesota are open to public hunting. For maps of these areas send $4 to Chippewa National Forest, Cass Lake, MN 55663, or to Superior National Forest, P.O. Box 338, Duluth, MN 55801.

All this public property notwithstanding, most of Minnesota is private property, and most hunters hunt on private land. Minnesota's trespass laws have been written to protect human life, livestock and the rights of landowners. These laws, summarized in the 1997 DNR Hunting Handbook, require hunters to get permission to hunt agricultural land. Also, hunters can't hunt any posted private land unless they have written permission, and they can't hunt land if they've been told to leave. To find out if unmarked land is private, inquire at the county auditor's office.

One type of private land all hunters are welcome on is a private shooting preserve, where a fee is paid to hunt game. For a list of Minnesota's shooting preserves (it's called the "Fur License List"), call the Minnesota Documents Division at 1-800-657-3757. The $13.70 price includes shipping.

Easiest way to find out if land is public or private is to look on a detailed map. As important to hunting as ammunition, maps can tell who owns what parcels, where property lines begin and end, and sometimes the land topography.

DNR Public Recreation Information Maps show the boundaries of state and national forests, WPAs and WMAs. Fifty-one maps covering all of the state are available at major sports retailers and the DNR Gift Shop in St. Paul. The suggested retail price is $4.95.

They don't indicate property boundaries, but USGS topo maps do show practically everything else, including hill contours and even tiny streams. Available in atlas form in some bookstores or individually from the Minnesota Geological Survey in St. Paul. Phone 612-627-4780. Cost is $2.75 per map.

County plat books show who owns all parcels of land in each of the state's 87 counties. Available from county courthouses and some land abstracting firms. The cost varies from county to county.

Tree stands pose dangers for deer hunters each fall

Climbing in and out of tree stands is often the most dangerous time during a deer hunt. The Department of Natural Resources advises hunters to be on the lookout for unsafe deer stand situations when the Minnesota firearms hunt begins Nov. 8.

- Repair permanent stands: they don't last forever because wood deteriorates and tree movement throughout the season tends to bend or loosen bolts, nails and boards.
- Inspect a portable tree stand every time you use it, making certain that bolts are tightened and that ropes or chains are in good condition.
- Don't sacrifice safety for cost when purchasing a portable tree stand. Choose a tree stand that's solid, safe and fits your needs.
- Use a safety harness. Don't attempt to climb a tree or hunt from a tree stand without using a climbing belt, safety belt, rope or harness.
- Never carry a bow or gun while climbing; use a haul line and unload your gun before lifting or lowering it.
- Take your time; many accidents occur while hunters are climbing down from trees.

* Minimize damage to trees. Nails left in a tree can damage a chain saw or a sawmill saw and cause serious injury or death to an operator.

In Minnesota, portable tree stands can be used at any height. The maximum height for a permanent tree stand is 16 feet.

Minnesota's deer management plan complex, effective

Managing deer populations can be compared to managing one's personal finances, says Jay McAninch, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources deer research biologist.

"In either case, you have to pay attention to two factors – deposits and withdrawals," McAninch explained. With deer, deposits are the number of births while withdrawals are represented by deaths.

In personal financial management, the objective is simple: deposits should exceed withdrawals in each account. That is not always the case with deer management, McAninch noted. Just as many individuals manage more than one account, deer are managed in Minnesota by different "accounts" as well. Each antlerless permit area in the state can be considered a "special account."

Minnesota deer management strategies and goals can vary remarkably between permit areas (accounts). "In some permit areas, we may want to increase the harvest (withdrawals) while in others we'd like it to remain about the same or even decrease," McAninch explained. The DNR attempts to manage deer populations at levels that are tolerable to landowners and acceptable to hunters in the permit areas.

In recent years, McAninch said, DNR deer management techniques have become even more precise than permit areas. "When a hunter opens up the deer hunting regulation booklet and looks at all the various options that are available today, the reaction can be one of bewilderment. That's especially true of those hunters who were around back when Minnesota basically had one option: you were limited to one antlerless deer or one buck basically anywhere in the state."

That simple system, McAninch pointed out, had a major drawback. "Granted, it was a lot simpler for hunters back then," McAninch acknowledged. "The problem was that in those days, prior to the antlerless permit system, you often had boom or bust years and the deer population fluctuated wildly. There was very little ability with that system to truly manage populations."

With the advent of the permit system, the options and regulations became more complex. They have continued to become more so with the addition of alternatives such as Special Area Permits and Intensive Harvest Permits. "These special permits give us the ability now to almost 'micro-manage' deer populations in very local areas, such as in refuges and parks, or near residential areas or crops that demand special circumstances," McAninch explained.

Thanks to these special permits, many hunters now have the opportunity to take two deer in one season. In nine special permit areas as well as the metro area, hunters can take up to three additional deer. Along with improved odds of taking a deer, the permit system gives Minnesota hunters more options to choose from when it comes to selecting a hunting method. A hunter today can choose to hunt with a longbow, compound bow, rifle, handgun, shotgun or muzzleloader, among others.

As Minnesota's deer management system continues to become more refined, the hunting regulation booklet becomes more complex. But with that complexity comes the ability to better manage Minnesota's deer population and provide better hunting opportunities. "It also allows us to better respond to landowner concerns," McAninch said. "Whether it's an orchard grower in the southeast, a suburban gardener in the metro area, or a row crop farmer in southern Minnesota, there is something in the regulations book that is designed for each landowner type," McAninch said.

Complex it is, McAninch acknowledged. "But if it wasn't complex, the result would simply be fewer deer and fewer opportunities for fewer hunters."

According to a news release from the Pennington County Sheriff's department, on Wednesday, October 29, as a result of a long-term investigation by the Paul Bunyan Task Force into the illegal trafficking of controlled substances in Pennington and Marshall counties, Darryl Craig Olson, 32, Thief River Falls, James Brian Baker, 26, Thief River Falls, James Alan Odegard, 25, Thief River Falls, and Lyle Jason Miller, 25, Goodridge, were arrested on controlled substance violations.

Pennington County Court records show that Olson was officially charged with two counts of felony controlled substance crime in the fifth degree and released on his own personal recognizance. Baker was wanted on three felony counts of controlled substance in the fifth degree. Baker was arrested in the Twin Cities. Odegard was charged with controlled substance crime in the fourth degree and released on personal recognizance. Miller was cited with a petty misdemeanor charge of possession of marijuana.

Several search warrants were conducted as a result of the Paul Bunyan Task Force investigation. A yet to be determined amount of controlled substances were seized along with assets related to the sale of controlled substances.

Subsequent to the arrests on October 29, the investigation continued and has led to the arrest of Gerardo Martinez Pruneda, 32, Grafton, ND, and Pedro Angel Pruneda, 31, Stephen. Helpful hints are offered to plan a safe hunting trip

Nothing can ruin a hunt faster than an accident. Drowning, hypothermia, getting lost or just spraining an ankle are among the perils awaiting hunters ill prepared for a trip afield. Because hunting involves firearms, knives and arrows and is often conducted in cold and wet weather in some the state's wildest areas, hunters should take particular care to prepare before heading out for a day in the woods or wetlands.

Roger Grusslein, coordinator for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Advanced Hunter Education Program, said many hunters want to know more about how to plan their hunts to avoid accidents, injuries and getting lost.

"In our hunter education seminars, we spend one entire evening on helping people learn navigation and survival skills, and how to properly plan their hunts," Grusslein said. "Many hunters know what it's like to be disoriented in the woods or to just miss taking a serious fall, and it's something they want to learn to avoid."

Grusslein encourages any Minnesota hunter to consider taking an Advanced Hunter Education class to learn the latest hunting techniques and tips on coming home alive. For details, call 1-800-766-6000 toll free in Minnesota.

Grusslein gives these five suggestions for a safe and successful hunting experience:

- Get a detailed map of the area to be hunted, review it before leaving, and carry it into the field.
- Carry a compass and know how to use it. Decide ahead of time the direction to head for if you get lost or disoriented.
- Weather can change quickly in Minnesota, so hunters should carry a simple survival kit and be prepared for an unexpected overnight stay in the field. The survival kit should contain a rope, a knife, water, waterproof matches, an emergency shelter and first aid supplies.
- If on the water, wear a personal flotation device (life preserver).
- Know each hunting partner's physical and emotional limitations, as well as your own; don't push your partners or yourself beyond those limits.

Dry week helps fall fieldwork

A continuation of some of the best fall weather in memory helped Minnesota farmers to move toward completion of harvest and other tasks during the week prior to November 3, according to the Minnesota Agricultural Statistics Service.

In general, this fall's harvest has been fast and sometimes tedious, but relatively steady and safe. Bad weather episodes have been brief, and the prevalence of nice days has minimized the feeling producers often have of needing to hurry during periods of good weather, or work under marginal conditions to catch up. Farmers have had more time than most years for attention to fall tasks that are often postponed until spring, or done only occasionally, such as moldboard tillage, fertilizer application, and baling of cornstalks. Some of the land going out of CRP has been cut for hay, then tilled up.

As of Sunday, corn was 90 percent harvested, the most advanced progress for this date since 1991, when 94 percent had been harvested. By comparison, corn harvest was 74 percent complete for the same date in 1996 and 60 percent complete for the five-year average. Moisture content of corn for grain being harvested averaged 18 percent. A year ago, moisture content was running 21 percent and the five-year average was 28 percent.

Sunflowers harvested at 94 percent equals last year's progress and compares with the five-year average of 85 percent. Pasture feed has now been depleted in many areas. Some pastured cattle have been put into cornstalk fields, and others have been moved to lots where they have begun receiving winter feedstuffs.

Moderate amounts of precipitation in the form of rain and snow at the end of the week slowed fieldwork temporarily, but provided some needed moisture to topsoil. As of Friday, topsoil moisture was rated one percent very short, eight percent short, 87 percent adequate, and four percent surplus.

Young growers of wheat eligible for essay contest

Young Minnesota wheat farmers are eligible to enter an essay contest in which two $750 leadership development awards will be given away.

The program is designed to acquaint young wheat farmers with the National Association of Wheat Growers organizational structure, leadership development, policy development and the educational aspects of wheat organizational meetings.

The $750 awards will help defray the costs for winners to attend either the national convention in San Diego, CA, January 14-17, 1988, or the NAWG summer leadership conference scheduled for July of 1998.

Any Minnesota wheat farmer between the ages of 20 and 35, who has not previously won a trip to either of the meetings mentioned above, is eligible to enter. Entries are judged by an unbiased committee and winners are selected based upon the content of their brief essay answers to three questions.

Entry forms may be obtained from the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers office at Red Lake Falls by writing to 2600 Wheat Drive, Red Lake Falls, MN 56750 or calling 218-253-4311 or toll-free 1-800-242-6118.

Red Lake County Sheriff's department received a 911 emergency call at 12:38 p.m. Monday, November 10, reporting that Magnell had been shot in a hunting accident.

According to the report, as a member of a hunting party, Magnell was posting a field of hunters walking an area. Magnell was struck in the right shoulder by a .243 calibre bullet fired by one of the members of his hunting party. Magnell was transported to Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls by Oklee ambulance. Initially, the incident has been ruled an accidental shooting, but it remains under investigation.

Magnell was listed in serious but stable condition.

Polk County Sheriff's department received a 911 emergency call at 3:49 p.m. Sunday. Dyrdal was transported to Riverview Hospital by Great Plains Ambulance.

Scab research gets boost

A million dollars for research on Fusarium Head Blight (scab) in wheat and barley crops was included as part of the Fiscal Year 1998 appropriations spending bill for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

According to U.S. Sen. Rod Grams, the senate also passed an agriculture research bill which would authorize $5.2 million annually for the next five years for scab research. Both bills have been cleared by Congress and are expected to be signed into law by President Clinton.

Scab and its toxic byproduct, vomitoxin, have caused an estimated more than $1 billion in economic losses in Minnesota and the Dakotas and that Minnesota is experiencing another major scab epidemic.

Under the USDA spending bill, $500,000 will go to the Cereal Rust Laboratory in St. Paul and another $500,000 to the USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Red-tailed hawk displayed by Greg Olson of Critters & Co. of Champlin was used by Olson to teach about "dangerous friends" during programs at Challenger elementary school recently. Olson explained that each of us is responsible for self protection, that we need to be alert and think about how to protect ourselves before we get into a high-risk relationship and that dangerous friends are treated with respect and courtesy.

Gregory M. Olson of Critters & Co., Inc., used his cockatoo named "Bianca" to teach principles of friends and choices during a recent appearance at Challenger elementary school in Thief River Falls. He emphasized that relationships need time to develop ("Bianca" is 45 years old), people and animals need personal space, it takes commitment to intervene in other people's issues and healthy relationships develop through respect for the individual.

Pine to Prairie celebrates National Home Care Month

Pine to Prairie Home Health Care is joining with thousands of home care providers across the nation in celebrating November as National Home Care Month.

The Medicare-certified agency has office locations in Fosston, Thief River Falls, Grygla, Karlstad, Roseau, International Falls, Kelliher and Bemidji. Its services include nursing, home health aide, personal care assistant, therapists and homemakers.

Theme of Home Care Month is "Celebrating Over a Century of Health Care at Home," calling attention to the history of modern-day home care while honoring all of the doctors, nurses, therapists, social workers, aides and administrators who provide high-quality health care and supportive services in clients' homes throughout the United States.

For more than a century, home care has been keeping families together by helping individuals recover and remain independent in the comfort of their own homes. During this special time, recognition is given to how the oldest system of health care delivery has maintained its tradition of providing personalized care and attention for the client, and education and support for the family.

Home care is a service to recovering, disabled or chronically ill individuals who need medical treatment and/or assistance with activities of daily living. It generally is appropriate for a person who requires care that cannot easily or effectively be provided solely by family and friends.

Task force develops flood victim strategy

To help flood victims who either did not apply to FEMA/SBA for assistance, or who qualified for SBA assistance but turned down an SBA loan, the Minnesota Recovery Task Force has developed a strategy of assistance.

The strategy was outlined by Kay Hegge, Region One flood recovery coordinator for the Northwest Regional Development Commission and Colleen MacRae, information specialist for the Northwestern Minnesota Disaster Response Network.

"It is important to note that this strategy is part of a state program that was created to fill any gaps between what the FEMA/SBA process can provide and the amount necessary to return the property to pre-flood condition," Hegge said. "In addition, it covers the repair of health and safety hazards and conducts activities necessary to prevent the same type of damage in the future."

Eligibility requirements for home rehabilitation deferred loans include:

1. Households which applied to FEMA and were not referred to SBA because they didn't meet income thresholds.
2. Households which applied to FEMA and which were referred to SBA but didn't apply. These need to follow through with their application.
3. Households which applied to SBA but turned down the loan because they didn't believe they could afford it, should appeal to SBA.
4. Households which simply didn't apply to FEMA/SBA are too late for that resource and should apply for a fix-up or other loan from a bank. After a loan from a bank is accepted, the state deferred loan funds could be used to fill in any gap between the amount of the bank financing and the total cost of the project.

Insurance payments received for real property damage must be deducted from any assistance unless the property has been repaired and the owner can produce receipts for materials, labor or contractors.

Northwest Minnesota Disaster Response Network is a coordinated network involving Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota, Northwestern Mental Health Center, Polk County Social Services, Rural Life Outreach Program and Tri-Valley Opportunity Council.

Mission of the network is to provide outreach and referral services to local individuals and families experiencing emotional reactions or hardships related to the flooding and its aftermath in Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Mahnomen and Norman counties.

It offers crisis counseling and support services, education training and seminars, resource referral and information, outreach, home visits, senior nutrition sites, statewide clean-up and recovery volunteer coordination/recovery sites.

To reach the network call 218-773-2056, 218-773-2162 or toll free 1-888-853-4715.

Law enforcement handles reports of area assaults

Law enforcement officials investigated a number of incidents during the past week, including a couple of assaults.

Assault. On November 5, following an investigation into an assault that happened on September 27 and which resulted in charges of assault against two women, a third woman, Alissa Faye Austad, 18, Thief River Falls, was cited for fifth degree assault.

On November 1 at 2:41 a.m. police received a report from Northwest Medical Center that a man was being treated for a knife wound. A man had a knife cut to his cheek that took nine stitches to close, and a superficial cut to his forearm. The cuts occurred during a fight in a parking lot. While police were taking a statement from the victim, the assailant turned himself in to police. Charges of assault are pending against David Brian Volpe, 24, Thief River Falls.

Sen. Stumpf receives award

MSUSA, a student group, honors him as Legislator of Year

Senator LeRoy Stumpf, Thief River Falls, will be honored as one of the 1997 Legislators of the Year at a dinner sponsored by the Minnesota State University Students Association (MSUSA).

The Penny Fellowship, a program established by MSUSA that assists state university students pursuing internships in the public service or non-profit sectors, will celebrate its 10th anniversary on Friday, November 7, during the annual Penny Fellowship dinner at the Minneapolis Airport Marriott in Bloomington. The event marks the beginning of the MSUSA Fall Conference, the group's most prestigious gathering of the year.

Guest speakers at the event will include Joanne Benson, Minnesota Lieutenant Governor, Hubert H. "Skip" Humphrey III, Minnesota Attorney General, Michael Vekich, MnSCU Board of Trustees chair, Morrie Anderson, MnSCU chancellor, Representative Marty Seifert, Marshall, and Sharon Gates Hull on behalf of Tim Penny.

Also at the dinner, MSUSA will honor Sen. LeRoy Stumpf and Representative Gene Pelowski Jr., Winona, as the 1997 Legislators of the Year. This award is given annually to one state representative and one state senator in recognition of efforts supporting public colleges and university students. The MSUSA Presidential Board of Directors, which consists of the student presidents from Minnesota's seven state universities, chose Stumpf and Pelowski during a September meeting at Bemidji State University.

"The dinner brings students, faculty, administrators, higher education officials and MSUSA supporters together for a common cause," said Heidi Hage, MSUSA associate director of development and coordinator of the Penny Fellowship program director.

Since 1987, 138 students have received over $69,000 from the Penny Fellowship. The program provides scholarships to qualified students in the MnSCU system to help defray costs incurred during service-oriented internships, which are often unpaid. The Fellowship also hosts an annual fund-raising golf scramble in August.

The Fellowship was named in honor of Tim Penny, a former MSUSA officer and a Winona State University alumnus. While at Winona State, he became student senate president and the first student member of the Minnesota State University board. He also served as MSUSA's first student lobbyist in 1973, as the association's vice chair in 1974 and as the 1975 MSUSA state chair.

MSUSA is a non-profit student advocacy organization that represents the students attending Minnesota's seven state universities in Bemidji, Mankato, Marshall (Southwest), Minneapolis/St. Paul (metropolitan), Moorhead, St. Cloud, and Winona.

USDA supports Co-op project

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman has announced that USDA will provide $2.8 million to help jump-start new agricultural cooperatives or to improve the operations of existing co-ops nationwide.

In Minnesota $75,000 has been awarded to the Minnesota Department of Agriculture to be used for assisting cooperatives and potential cooperatives entering the marketplace with value added products. The project will utilize an existing network of public and private resources and funding mechanisms of the Minnesota Department of Agriculture to provide a coordinated and systematic approach to cooperative and product development.

Of the $2.8 million, $1.1 million is being awarded under the Cooperative Value-Added Program (CVAP), with funding provided from the Clinton/Gore administration's Fund for Rural America. These funds will help 18 cooperatives in 16 states develop plans to produce value-added products from the agricultural commodities their members produce.

The other $1.7 million is being awarded as cooperative development grants to help 11 co-op development centers around the nation start or continue a wide range of assistance activities that support cooperatives. These co-op centers work in partnership with other state, national and local organizations to help establish and strengthen cooperatives which, in turn, enhance the power of individual farmers in the marketplace.

"For many of our nation's farmers, future success will hinge on their ability to move up the food ladder from being producers of raw commodities to processors of finished or further-refined products," Glickman said. "In this way more of the money derived from farm goods winds up in the producers' pockets and is spent in rural communities."

Actual recipients of the CVAP funds are service providers — such as state departments of agriculture or universities — which are working directly with cooperatives. The USDA funds will primarily be used to finance feasibility studies, business development plans, market analysis studies and product development plans for new cooperatives seeking to produce value-added goods.

"The large number (104) of applications USDA received for the CVAP development funds indicates a burgeoning interest in rural America for new, farmer-owned co-ops that produce value-added products from their members' raw goods," said Jill Long Thompson, USDA under secretary for Rural Development. "Had cooperatives themselves been eligible to apply for the funds, rather than service providers, the number of applications probably would have tripled," she noted.

Recipients of both the co-op development grants and the value added development project funds had to contribute matching funds worth at least 25 percent of the USDA funding they will receive.

Chris Bjerklie on BSU student senate group

Chris Bjerklie of Goodridge, a sophomore social studies education major, has been elected as a member of the 1997-98 student senate at Bemidji State University.

Student senate is a part of the Bemidji State University Student Association (BSUSA) and works with university administration in developing campus policies that affect issues such as school budgets, student conduct and assessment of academic courses.

Among its several responsibilities as a student government, the senate adopts resolutions proposed by administration and senate committees, creates service programs to improve campus convenience and acts as a regulator between the university and its students.

Our Homes, Communities and Jobs Depend on a Stable Supply of Energy

Americans use more than 700 million gallons of petroleum products each day in the form of gasoline, heating oil, diesel fuel and jet fuel. Much of that petroleum is transported through underground pipeline systems.

FOR YOUR SAFETY:

IDENTIFY PIPELINES
Be aware of pipeline markers in your neighborhood. Write down the name and phone number of the pipeline company listed on the markers in case of an emergency. Markers include warning signs, aerial patrol markers, casing vents and painted posts.

RECOGNIZE A PIPELINE LEAK BY:
- SIGHT: Pool of liquid, dense fog or discolored vegetation
- SOUND: Hissing or roaring noise from the pipeline
- SMELL: Unusual smell

REACT TO A PIPELINE LEAK
- Leave the leak area immediately.
- Do not touch, breathe or go near leaking liquids.
- Do not create any spark in the leak area.
- From a safe distance, call 911 or your local emergency number and the pipeline company.
- Do not drive into a leak or vapor cloud area.
- Warn others.

CALL BEFORE YOU DIG
Know the location of all underground utilities near your excavating site. Call your State's Excavators "One-Call System." Representatives from the pipeline or utility will come to your site and locate the utility for you at no charge.

Proposed Diversity Rules Would Perpetuate Lack Of Achievement

"Public education in Minnesota stands at the most significant crossroads in its history. Minnesota parents must decide whether their children's schools exist to teach students the skills and knowledge they need to survive and prosper in the world, or whether, instead, our schools will henceforward be used to inculcate our children with the discredited and divisive ideology of the far left."

This is the conclusion of John H. Hinderaker and Scott W. Johnson, attorneys in Minneapolis, after studying the "Diversity Rules" proposed by the State Board of Education. These proposed mandates for Minnesota public schools will be the subject of public hearings in St. Paul November 17 and 18. Hinderaker is a member of the board of directors of Center of the American Experiment in Minneapolis.

The writers maintain that the proposed rules do not represent a confused but well-meaning effort to improve the educational performance of minority students. Rather, they say, the rules represent a carefully calculated effort to advance a far-left political agenda. And there is ample evidence in the proposal to substantiate that assessment.

According to the "Statement of Need and Reasonableness" upon which the mandates for change are based, "racism, exploitation and hypocrisy abound in the American experience." These problems are alleged to result in part from traditional school curricula, which the drafters of the rules say "propagate a racist society." The proposed rules would seek to "bring about a change of current social issues involving race, ethnicity, socioeconomic class, gender and disability."

One would expect that an effort to bring about positive change would involve special emphasis to improve areas of recognized disparity. In other words, if there is a socio-economic advantage to any one group, efforts to equalize opportunity should be directed to bringing other groups up to that competitive standard.

Not so with the educational diversity reformers. Their answer to higher dropout rates on average among American Indian students is to teach these students in a manner which emphasizes "cooperation and harmony" rather than "individualism, competitiveness, profit, speed and efficiency." The contention is that this would be consistent with American Indian culture.

The State Board of Education proposed rules would seek to improve the academic performance of African-American children by teaching students more about black culture. "There is currently a lack of incorporation of black customs, culture and contemporary black contributors within educational content areas in K-12," the board rationalizes.

Teaching of the contributions of black Americans is fine in history and social studies courses. There well may be a lack of such emphasis in most schools' curriculums. But it will do nothing to improve the performance of black students—or any other students—in the basic areas of reading, spelling and mathematics. There is only one correct answer to a math problem, regardless of the racial, cultural, gender or handicap status of the person doing the computation.

The framers of the Diversity Rules have this situation covered as well. If "diverse" students fail to do well on a test, the problem must be with the test. Therefore school districts must develop tests that are "sensitive to diversity issues." Each school district "must strive to ensure that tests are inoffensive to all groups of students, and that biases are eliminated."

Persons who truly are interested in bringing about racial and cultural gains through education should be incensed about the proposed Diversity Rules. Teachers pointing out to Native American children that they are culturally unable to compete or to African American youngsters that they are an oppressed group in a racist society is a guarantee to further retard their achievement and perpetuate a lack of success and equality.

If not the actual purpose—which it may well be—the actual result of the Diversity Rules would be to isolate minority students and create more embittered, anti-American cadres who will perpetuate the politics of grievance into the next generation.

The Statement of Need and Reasonableness argues that "multicultural education should move toward the inclusion of social justice issues and empowering young people to make social changes." It advocates "an approach that deals more directly with oppression and social structural inequality based on racism, social class, gender and disability." Teachers should be expected to "be prepared to allow this transformation and growth."

Further, the Diversity Rules consider every public school student in the State of Minnesota to be "diverse" except for able-bodied white males. Despite the fact that girls hold a large advantage over boys in verbal skills, generally do better in school than boys, are more likely to graduate from high school than boys and more likely to go college than boys, the Statement of Need and Reasonableness characterizes boys' participation and achievement in school as "disproportionately large."

The State Board of Education is not an elected group. Its proposed Educational Diversity Rules would give state bureaucrats the power to dictate virtually everything taught in the classroom to the racial and socio-economic makeup of school co-curricular activities. And the board had the gall to request that the rules be accepted without public hearing.

Fortunately, enough concerned citizens came forward to force the hearing process. Protest against this divisive, regressive and offensive power grab at the hearings next Monday and Tuesday should be loud enough to be heard in every corner of the state and echo from border to border. Mandated rules which would assure perpetuation of lack of achievement offer only more problems with no solutions.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

I would like to publicly thank Terry Blacklance (School District 564) and Ridlie Boldt (Northland Community and Technical College) for planning and organizing the Human Rights conference held in Thief River Falls October 29 and 30.

I felt the conference was very meaningful. There were panels on racial, gender, disability and anti-violence issues. Fosston Public School's "Village Project" presentation and the "Gang-Activity" information session from two members of the Minneapolis Police Department were both thought-provoking.

I liked the whole conference, but for me the highlight was the keynote address brought by Larry Aitkin, a Native American from the Walker area, who is an author, former college professor and new president of the Leech Lake Tribal College. His topic, "Respect," included respect for all people, spirituality, living and dying. He could "hold his own" with the best public speakers anywhere. I have not heard such a powerful message in years.

I wish more people in the area had chosen to, or been able to, attend this conference. It was well worth our while! I think we're lucky having Terry Blacklance in our Thief River Falls school system as Minority Student Services Coordinator.

Sincerely,

Strandquist News

Northwest Minnesota was hit with "Blizzard Number One" for this season on Sunday the 2nd of November, giving most of us a shocking awareness that winter is here again. Spring, summer and fall, all three seasons were crowded into only six months and by the looks of this storm, winter has decided to stay. The change from October's bright, blue weather, reached into the Vagle domicile, with no easy going morning coffee and visiting, but hurrying to find boots and gear before going to Sunday school.

In my hurry to get ready, I was going to put some "cover up" on my nose and when I looked in the mirror, I had used my eyelash brush and my nose was painted black. That waterproof eye stuff was something else to get off. So my tip for today is haste makes waste.

The Strandquist Seniors met on Thursday with Adaline Stonnes and Gladys Johnson of Thief River Falls as guests. They spent most of the time visiting and enjoying Gloria Renstrom's delicious luncheon. Ida Bruce won the door prize. Next Thursday, November the 13th, they will have their exchanging of gifts and close their meetings for this year.

The Bethesda Lutheran Church had their Fall Festival on Sunday evening. The audience enjoyed the beautiful violin music and the singing of Lois Freeman and her children, Luke and Rachel. The ladies of the church served a delicious supper after the program was over.

Judy and Lois Kleinvachter visited with Frank Grochowski on Friday.

Betsy Thompson is in St. Charles, Missouri, staying with her daughter Barbara Woodruff for awhile. She says Barbara is doing well and hopes the rest of the family will be down there for Thanksgiving Day.

LaVarne and Bev Rasmussen who have moved to Frazee, were visitors on Friday at Peter and Pearl Thompson's home and Roy Vagle's home. They came for their 5th wheeler, as they intend to travel to Texas for part of the winter.

Jeremy Johnson could be renamed Orion, the big hunter in the sky, or Hiawatha, the famous hunter H.W. Longfellow made immortal in the poem by that same name. On Saturday with his trusty bow and arrow, he brought home a ten-point deer buck. Congratulations. Not many times a Boone and Crockett winner comes along.

Most folks had their baskets filled with treats on Friday evening and nothing is more fun than having all those little trick or treaters come to the door. Little Jake was one who came to Grandpa Peter's house.

Elmer Holmstrom and Evelyn Albaugh visited Judy and Lois Kleinvachter on Saturday.

Isaac Thompson had dinner at Peter Thompson's home on Wednesday. On Thursday he joined Peter and Pearl and Roy Vagles to supper at Elsie Lofteeth's home. Marlys Lofteeth joined them later.

Roy was busy this weekend getting all those leaves ground up and cultivated into the ground before the snow came. I saw he had bundled up the small evergreens to keep them from getting damaged this winter. He doesn't buy green bananas but he is talking about Spring again.

FROM THE NEW CITY

THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

The Truth
Not in Figures but in Plain Facts

The Press last week, under the heading "Truth in Figures" published an unofficial financial statement of the city. It also by way of explanation, said:

"We desire to correct the impression made by The News of October 28th that the present council was more extravagant than the previous one."

The News did not state that the present council was more extravagant than the previous one. We merely published the views of some prominent citizens and taxpayers who were of the opinion that the expense of the administration each year should not exceed $4,000 of the amount collected by taxation, and that as much of this sum as possible should be expended on city improvements.

"No one is objecting to the tax rate. It is very low. Many would be willing to pay double the amount of taxes if the money spent was for city improvements."

"The claim is made that the expenses of the present council, owing to several reasons, have been greater than it will be possible for any future council to incur that follows out the present council's policy." This is undoubtedly true.

State Ditch 83/Thief River project stirs muddy waters

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Question: When is a river not a river?

Answer: When it is a ditch.

Question: What if it looks like a river, flows like a river, acts like a river, seems to be a river?

Answer: It's a ditch that looks like a river, flows like a river, acts like a river, seems to be a river.

Attempted action by the Red Lake Watershed District to comply with the request of 16 petitioners to have channel work done on State Ditch 83 for about 11 miles upstream of Thief River Falls has met with a stream of protests from a number of area residents, at least several downstream communities, governmental agencies and environmental organizations.

To many of the complainants, State Ditch 83 is simply the Thief River—the flowage coming out of Thief Lake in eastern Marshall county and emptying into the Red Lake River at Thief River Falls.

Look on virtually any map of the area and the meandering line snaking its way northeast from Thief River Falls is identified as the Thief River. Ask almost anyone in the community the name of the watercourse that flows into the Red Lake River at the Eighth Street bridge and he or she will tell you it is the Thief River.

And he or she would be right—at least to a degree. It is the Thief River that flows into the Red Lake River. But beginning at a point about three miles north of Thief River Falls and continuing upstream about 22 miles—an area where channelization was done initially some 80 to 85 years ago—it is State Ditch 83.

And that is the point where law runs a collision course with fact—at least what is fact in the minds of a number of property owners along the river, primarily below the point where County Ditch 20 empties into State Ditch 83 from the east.

Property owners objecting to a recent decision by the watershed for tree cutting and brush clearing along the east side of the watercourse contend that it has re-established itself as a river over the years and is in fact—by all appearances and actions—a river.

On the other hand, the petitioners and the watershed district—through its manager, board, engineer and attorney—are equally adamant that due process in 1910 created a legal ditch and that the watercourse continues to this day to be a ditch. As such it also remains subject to state ditch law, which defines the procedure under which the agency with jurisdiction, in this case the watershed district, must operate.

Petition Starts Action

This past June 10 the Red Lake Watershed District received a petition signed by 16 landowners from northeast of Thief River Falls. The petition states:

"The undersigned request the following repairs on Ditch #83 starting at Section 34 of Excel Township through Agder Township and up to Section 10 of East Valley Township.

"A. Remove trees from the bottom of the ditch and up over the top of the spoil.

"B. Remove silt and debris and cut the bottom back down to the original grade.

"C. Slope the sides of the ditch to a 1 to 1 pitch."

District Must Proceed

If the watershed district receives a petition for repair of a ditch under its jurisdiction from [illegible] state, it is required by statute to carry out the process. That process requires an engineer's report and a public hearing. To prepare a report, the engineer must conduct a survey of the ditch area.

Engineer Brent Johnson, formerly an engineer with the watershed district and now employed by Houston Engineering in Fargo, ND, has been designated the project engineer. He recommended to the watershed district board the clear-cutting of trees and brush along the east side of State Ditch 83 from the point where it leaves the west edge of Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge to a point about 11 miles southwest.

The clear-cutting would extend 90 feet from the center of the ditch and involve a total of about [illegible] acres. It would provide access to the ditch and create open sight lines for the survey to determine distance and angle of the channel and cross sections every 400 to 500 feet along the

Brent Johnson, project engineer on the State Ditch 83 repair project for the Red Lake Watershed District, announced late Monday afternoon that he was placing a temporary suspension on the work order for tree clearing along the east side of the ditch, more commonly known as the Thief River.

Spruce Valley Construction has been awarded a contract by the watershed district to clearcut at a height of six inches or less all trees and brush for a distance 90 feet from the centerline of the ditch on the east side right-of-way to create access for equipment and an open area for survey prior to preparation of a report and a public hearing. (See accompanying story for more detail.)

The suspension was ordered to permit alternative options and other ideas to be presented to the watershed district. The district administration has requested that those ideas be presented to the district office this week. The board will discuss ideas presented at its next meeting November 26.

LHS drama department stages Romeo & Juliet

Lincoln high school drama department, under the direction of Connie Stock, will present the play Romeo & Juliet by William Shakespeare on Friday and Saturday, November 21 and 22, at 7 p.m. in the Lincoln auditorium.

Tickets will be available at the door and admission prices are $4 for adults and $2 for students. Director Stock provided the following information regarding the production.

The time is the 1990s, the place is Italy, the players are wealthy, warring mob families. Violence erupts in the streets as gangs fight, protecting their turf and connections. At an annual masquerade party held by one of the families, the son and daughter of these hated enemies meet and fall in love at first sight. Without their families' knowledge and against their families' wishes, they marry, thereby hoping to end the bitter feuding.

Meanwhile, the girl's parents have arranged her marriage to a wealthy, eligible bachelor. Through a mess of complications, missed messages and bad timing, the young girl and boy end up needlessly taking their lives. Their parents finally see the tragic outcome of their hatred and lack of understanding and make peace with one another, after bearing losses that far outweigh the gains.

This is not the lead story in The New York Times, it is the timeless story of Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet which will come alive this weekend on Lincoln high school's stage.

This production is the age-old story and the original text set in today's time and style. The themes of love and conflict, and the relationships of parents and children are as applicable today as they were in Elizabethan Times.

The setting remains in Italy, but the Capulet mansion, featuring stained glass windows and a striking fountain, hints of Shakespeare's Globe Theater with multiple levels, an inner courtyard, and a thrust stage for scene changes. The costumes are '90s style, depicting the colors of each gang, but the masquerade ball is renaissance style complete with Elizabethan costumes.

The swords have been traded for guns and knives, the street for an amusement park and the ballads for '90s rock and church choir gospels. However, Shakespeare's beautiful language remains the cornerstone of the play. Even though the language may be unfamiliar to today's audience, the actors' understanding of the lines and the familiar action of the plot bring it alive and make it real.

The star-crossed lovers in this production are played by Bridgette Stock and Mathew Bitzegaio. Their parents are Adam Quernell and

MECC board to pursue funding to restore cuts

Monday, the Multi-Events Cultural Center Joint Powers board approved a recommendation to pursue funding for elements of Phase I which had to be cut from the project because of a lack of funding.

There were two elements to the recommendation. The first element was to continue to raise funds for what's left in Phase I of the project. Rick Nelson, a project coordinator, also recommended that a fund raiser who had been working for the board, be rehired to complete her efforts to raise funds and actually solicit funds for the project.

Nelson explained that as bids came in, elements of Phase I had to be set aside until more funding could be found. Those elements of the project that they are now seeking funds for include stadium fencing, stadium bleachers, lighting, tennis courts, a press box, sidewalks, a concession building, construction of parking lot lighting, soccer fields and two additional softball fields. He estimated the cost of those projects at $1.2 million.

Nelson has submitted a request for over $950,000 to the Amateur Sports Commission and the Governor. Nelson said the money could be used for any project as long as it can be proven that the project would promote community benefit through sports events, and provide increased opportunities.

At this point Nelson stressed there are no strings attached to the grant money if awarded. The Amateur Sports Commission gave the required third place ranking in a list of eight requests. That list was turned over to the Governor. The request will be turned over to the legislature.

Nelson said he has no intention of pursuing the request if they don't find matching funds.

Darla Twomey, joint powers board member for School District 564, said she could understand why people would have questions about the project. With so much of the project left to be funded, she said residents may wonder what we did get for the $3 million in state funds and a $1 million match from board participants.

Her statement was part of a greater discussion about how to clarify the project for the public.

J.J. Womack, a former city councilman in attendance at the meeting, asked what's on the minds of many residents when he asked "What's exactly in Phase I?"

Nelson suggested a news release and meeting with media, but other members of the group thought [illegible]

EQB asks comments about proposed transmission line

Minnesota Environmental Quality Board (EQB) is seeking comments on the potential environmental effects of a proposed 56-mile-long, 115-kilovolt transmission line through Marshall, Pennington and Polk counties in Minnesota and Walsh county in North Dakota.

The proposed route crosses the through the municipalities of Thief River Falls, Warren and Oslo and runs adjacent to Alvarado, according to John N. Wachtler, project manager with the EQB.

Otter Tail Power Company and Minnkota Power Cooperative propose to build approximately 56 miles of new 115 kV transmission line from the Oslo substation in Walsh county, ND (1.5 miles west of Oslo) to the Thief River Falls substation, which is located two miles east of Thief River Falls.

The route requires about 33 miles of new right-of-way and will replace about 23 miles of lower voltage power lines. The proposed line is designed to share right-of-way with roadways as much as possible and runs primarily along cropland, although it also crosses rivers and wetlands.

The EQB has prepared an environmental assessment worksheet (EAW) on the proposed power line. This 31-page EAW summarizes the project and its potential environmental effects, Wachtler said.

A copy of the EAW is available upon request from the EQB (address listed below). The worksheet is also available for public review, along with detailed project maps, at the Northwest Regional Library, 101 East First Street, in Thief River Falls.

EQB asks coments about proposed transmission line

(Continued from Page 1) to help government decision makers and the public decide whether an environmental impact statement (EIS) is necessary on a proposed project," Wachtler added. "The EAW process is also intended to disclose information about actions that would help reduce any potential environmental harm."

The Environmental Quality Board will review all comments on the EAW before making a decision on the need for an EIS. Comments on the EAW, therefore, should address the accuracy and completeness of the information in the EAW, potential impacts that may warrant further investigation, and the need for more extensive study in an environmental impact statement.

The 30-day comment period of the environmental assessment worksheet began on Monday, November 17 and ends at 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, December 17. Comments must be submitted to the EQB at the following address by the end of the comment period by mail, fax or E-mail.

Mr. John N. Wachtler, Project Manager, Minnesota Environmental Quality Board, 658 Cedar Street, St. Paul, MN 55155. Telephone number is 612-296-4095. E-mail address is John.Wachtler@MN PLANSTATE.MN.US, and fax number is 612-296-3698.

TRF area food shelf continues to be needed

During the month of October the Thief River Falls area food shelf provided assistance to 174 families including 300 adults and over 200 children. The food shelf serves between 150 and 200 families per month.

The food shelf board expresses its appreciation to volunteers who help with the unloading of supplies, assist with distribution or donate food items or money to help the program.

Through the CROP walk held last April in Thief River Falls as many local people were filling sandbags, $1,179.22 has been received by the area food shelf.

The food shelf continues to need donations of food and will use all cash donations to purchase food items for distribution to area people in need.

Author spreads good news in children's book series

by Kathi Carlson
The Times Reporter

Author Kathryn Dahlstrom could be an auctioneer. When she gets excited, she talks fast. And Kathy is excited about her writing career.

Kathy grew up in Thief River Falls, the youngest of Dorothy and the late Roy Shetler's three children. Kathy has two older brothers, Tim and Dave. As she grew up she idolized her big brothers.

Kathy graduated from Lincoln High School in 1977, received her Associate of Arts degree from Northland Community College in 1979 and graduated from Bemidji State University in 1981 with a Bachelors Degree in vocal music education.

Kathy is married to Tim Dahlstrom, son of Helen Dahlstrom and the late Alvin Dahlstrom of Thief River Falls.

The couple lived in St. Louis, MO for a number of years where Kathy taught reading in a pre-school.

Tim's job with McDonnell-Douglas then took them to Los Angeles, CA. In California it wasn't necessary for Kathy to find a job, and she was able to pursue her dream - writing fiction for children.

She was always an avid reader, and writing came easy, but Kathy soon realized that writing fiction is something very different from the writing she did in college.

Kathy spent a year studying fictional writing. She read books about writing, attended seminars and took classes. She befriended published authors and participated in critique groups where other authors read her work and offered constructive criticism.

With the typical publishing house receiving three to five thousand unsolicited book proposals per year, Kathy says that the "competition is unbelievable."

When a manuscript reaches a publishing house, a "first reader" spends "about 37 seconds" with each piece determining if the writer has done his research, if the manuscript has worth and if the writer's style is compatible with that of the publisher. In a few seconds the labors of an aspiring author - years of work - can be shot down.

Like most authors, Kathy has known her share of rejection, and she is still trying to market the first series of children's books she wrote.

While living and writing in Los Angeles, Kathy volunteered at a "Good News Club," a world-wide non-denominational week-day Bible club for boys and girls sponsored by Child Evangelism Fellowship, Inc. (CEF). The children she ministered to lived in the Jordan Downs housing project in the Watts area of Los Angeles. Kathy found the concerns of the inner-city youth to be very different from those of children in other parts of the country as they asked her to "pray for my dad in jail" or "my brother in a gang."

It was from her inner-city experiences that Kathy wrote another series of books. While the characters are fictional, the situations are very real and set in the "Gordon Brown" housing project.

Wanting to use "Good News Club" in the name of her series, Kathy called CEF about trademark information. She was passed from one party to another and no one seemed to be able to answer her question, but finally someone asked to see her manuscripts.

Author Kathy Dahlstrom (center, in rocking chair) made a presentation to the Thief River Falls branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) on Monday evening. Kathy is the daughter of Dorothy Shetler and the late Roy Shetler of Thief River Falls and is a 1977 graduate of Lincoln High School. The author of the six-book Good News Club Series, Kathy participated in a book signing at Falls Book Company yesterday afternoon before returning to her home in Cambridge. AAUW members pictured with Kathy are: Mary Meiken, Margaret Saetre, Kathy, Gayle Waale, Lois Amundgaard and Gretchen Beito

CEF had never published fiction before, and it took the company a year and a half to decide to publish Kathy's books. When the editor called to tell her, Kathy says, "I melted his ear wax!" When she's excited she talks fast. When she's very excited obviously she talks loud! Hearing her, husband Tim retreated to the upstairs of their home and when she did get her hands on him, Kathy said, "He jumped up and down with me to protect himself physically!" That day in 1975 was a joyful one in the Dahlstrom household.

There are six books in the Good News Club Series. The books center around four main characters–Machell, Carlos, his sister Anna and his best friend Felipe. Machell and Carlos alternate as the main characters in the different books. The main plot of each book is based on an adventure while the sub-plot is centered around an emotional story.

Titles include Peppy's Rescue, Trapped by an Earthquake, Captives in the Wilderness, Street Games, Scat into Hiding and Hate Fighters. Each story deals with very real situations of the inner-city–homelessness, drugs, natural disaster, gangs and prejudice.

On the back cover of each of her books, a short description reads: "In a world of fear and frustration, the Good News Kids learn they can face tough problems through God's love and friendship. The Good News Club Series brings exciting stories filled with action, suspense, drama and humor."

Kathy's faith is deeply rooted. When she was 12 years old, her brother Tim returned to Thief River Falls from the University of Colorado where he had participated in a number of campus crusades. Tim told his little sister about "knowing Jesus on a personal level" and "finding a friend in Jesus." Kathy followed her older brother everywhere including Bible studies at the Miracle House.

Because she "met Jesus for the first time" as a child, Kathy vividly remembers being a child which makes it easy for her "to write to kids." "Nothing in life is accidental," she said.

Kathy wrote the series about and for inner-city youth to show them that "they are not junk" and "God loves them," Kathy said. "They don't have to join gangs. They are worth more than that." She also wrote the books to help other youth understand what life is like in the inner-city.

With rigid age recommendations, the publisher suggests the series appropriate for children between the ages of 9 and 12 years of age. Kathy says the books are enjoyed by youth between the ages of 8 and 14.

The artist's drawings on the colorful covers of the books are done from actual photographs of children she worked with in the Good News Club, and she is pleased at how realistic they are.

In November of last year, Tim took a position with United Defense in Fridley which brought the couple back to Minnesota. They are making their home in the Cambridge area.

Kathy left her Good News Club in Los Angeles to a very capable co-teacher who lives in Watts. There are about 20 young people between the ages of 5 and 14 who make up the core of the Bible study group. Kathy estimates that in the four years she was involved with the group, she came into contact with about 100 youth. She stays in contact by writing to them and sending them books. Of course, they are continually in her prayers.

What does Kathy have planned for the future? Will there be any more books in the Good News Club Series?

While each book is a separate story, Kathy has picked up main plots in new books from the sub-plots of preceding stories. It would be easy to continue the series with the end of the last book leading into her next story-line if and when CEF calls for a continuation of the series. Kathy doesn't know if that will happen as six books are a marketable number for a series, and the books are currently seeing steady sales.

Books are distributed through the Christian Booksellers Association (CBA) to the American Booksellers Association (ABA). Because of their religious nature the Good News Club Series is marketed through the CBA.

Kathy continues to try to sell her first series - a group of fantasy stories about alien children who befriend a human girl who discovers the ability to turn into an eagle and fly. Kathy says, "Children adore the stories, and adults say, 'WHAT?'" Sadly, adults publish books.

While morals and religious undertones are the "heartbeat" of Kathy's stories, these books are not "blatantly religious" and could be distributed by the ABA which would enable public school systems to carry the series without the fear of offending someone or censure.

Kathy's income is derived from royalties and personal marketing efforts. She is able to buy her books at warehouse cost and sell them herself.

As she continues to try to sell the fantasy series, Kathy writes a column for Evangelizing Today's Child, a bi-monthly publication for Sunday school teachers and Christian educators. She is also traveling more and more with the Good News Club Series which explains her presence in Thief River Falls this week.

Monday evening she made a presentation to the Thief River Falls branch of the American Association of University Women, and yesterday afternoon she participated in a book signing at Falls Book Company.

Husband Tim shows interest in writing and his wife describes him as a "natural." Kathy excitedly anticipates co-writing a project with him.

Author Kathy Dahlstrom is excited, and she's talking fast. Hopefully one day soon a publisher will call, and she'll once again be talking loud!

Author Kathy Dahlstrom (right) visits with AAUW member Margaret Saetre on Monday evening following her presentation to the Thief River Falls branch of the American Association of University Women. While in Thief River Falls Kathy also participated in a book signing at Falls Book Company yesterday afternoon. She is the author of the the Good News Club Series–a set of six children's books that vividly portray the lives and challenges of youth living in the Watts area of south-central Los Angeles.

Reflections

On Principles Of Truth

Tammy Myhrer
Our Saviour's Christian Academy

What Is Right and What Is Wrong?

Homosexuality is an act that has swept our nation like a contagious disease. If we think we are not harmed by the growing problem of homosexuality, we need to think again. Now that homosexuality is "out of the closet" it's time to think seriously about what is going on.

We live in a society that is rapidly changing its morals and values. Now that we have promoted homosexuality as a lifestyle, we are responsible for what happens. Our President and Vice President are even promoting it. President Clinton should be ashamed for going before the public and exalting those who would have us redefine marriage and family. Vice President Al Gore has praised Hollywood for producing the lesbian TV character "Ellen".

Fighting against today's society that says homosexuality is an alternative lifestyle is very hard to do.

The practice of homosexuality has never influenced any society positively. It has always resulted in negative consequences, especially in the area of health. Never before have Americans faced a more serious threat to their health. With the practice of homosexuality increasing, AIDS has become a preventable killer disease that has affected far more than the individuals involving themselves in this reprehensible act.

Homosexuality has never been a significant problem until we promoted it through television, movies and music. Each of these influences children more than you think, and that is where society is twisting their minds by saying it is right, and that is why people find defining right and wrong confusing.

The effects of homosexuality today are overwhelmingly expensive and harmful to our children's upbringing. Are we going to let it get to the point where children are scared to leave their homes for fear of getting AIDS because of someone else's immorality?

Aren't you disgusted by what is going on in our world today? We are quite naive to what is happening, but we choose to ignore it and never do anything about it. It is sad to see that we have let it enter our churches and schools, and we just stand there and let it happen.

Are we buying into the lies of this perverted practice? Too many of us can answer that with, "Yes!" If we don't do something about it now, our nation is going to fall just like the past nations that have permitted and promoted homosexuality. Those nations died internally of immorality, corruption and inaction toward truth.

Our society tells us to "do our own thing," so we commend people (like Ellen) for coming out of the closet, but we continue to say that the use of drugs, tobacco and alcohol are wrong. What is determining that these things are wrong and homosexuality isn't?

It has come down to a matter of what is right and what is wrong. Everyone today is determining for himself what is right and what is wrong, so by saying homosexuality is right, why not say that murder, rape and adultery are right too? These things have always been absolutely wrong. Are we going to lower our standards even more and say these things are right also?

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

The Best Of Winter

The first significant snowfall of the season found many of us dreaming of a very long vacation in a sunny locale – perhaps even permanently. The snow and cold also has many of us questioning why we endure the elements year after year after year.

It's easy to compile a list of negatives about winter and its accompanying weather. It's cold. Sometimes very cold. The roads are slippery. It's cold. It's difficult to plan travel. It's cold. It's hard on people and cars. It's cold. Shoveling snow is strenuous work. It's cold. Need I continue?

But, when you think really hard about it, there are many good features to winter weather. For instance, winter gives people the opportunity to get their money's worth on their roadside assistance insurance policy. A couple of battery jumps and a tow or two make people appreciate the few bucks they shelled out for this coverage.

Winter also gives people a chance to test the new handle on the snow shovel and lets them test the shooting power of the snowblower. See if you can fill up the neighbor's driveway in less than 10 minutes.

Winter is also time to:

- Break in the new Arctic Cat you purchased.
- See if the Christmas lights still work after being hung up all summer. Don't expect much from the ones you nicked with the lawnmower.
- Validate the claim that your winter boots are effective to 100 degrees below zero.
- See how many wheelies you can execute in an icy (and empty) parking lot.
- Relive memories of what it was like the time someone dared you to stick your tongue on a metal pole.
- See how fast you can dress a child from head to toe in winter attire. Have a contest with the neighbor.
- Sit in the house, watch television and not feel guilty. Most likely you're snowed in and can't go anywhere anyway.
- Overeat in preparation for the months ahead. It's perfectly normal for bears, rabbits and squirrels to stock up. Why not humans, too?
- See if boiling water actually freezes in mid-air when thrown.
- See how much hot chocolate one family can consume.
- Watch the news hoping to hear your town mentioned for being the coldest location in the United States, setting a new record low temperature.
- Pray you'll never need to use the winter survival kit stowed in the back seat of the car.
- Start a new and very involved craft project or jigsaw puzzle (maybe a 3-D of New York City). There are many, many long cold months ahead to work on it.
- Drive around and look at Christmas light displays.
- Catch up on all the movies you didn't see at the theater.
- Wish you owned one of those remote starters for cars.
- Build snowmen and snow forts. Make snow angels. Go ice skating and sledding. Watch hockey games. In other words, do all the things you can't do in the summer. After all, that's why we live here, to enjoy the beauty of the four seasons - even if it often seems like winter is the longest of them all.

SPEAKING OF

Sherry LaCoursiere

...Keep Them Here

A while ago I had a chance to chat with a repair person. Well, I'll admit I have chatted with many repair people lately, since everything I own seems to be going to pot, but this particular repair person got me to thinking.

We were talking about how good a job he has done for me and how I'd noticed he always seemed to know what was wrong and got it fixed quickly and I happened to say, "I hope your boss is paying you a good salary, since you're pretty good at what you do." He said no, he didn't get a good salary at all and that he and his family would probably be moving some time in the future because of the low salaries in this area. I was shocked at what he said.

Isn't it a shame! What is wrong with this picture!

Here we have a young, smart fellow – a reliable, settled sort of guy – a family man – someone who really knows his business – and he will have to move in order to make a wage he can live on. What a waste to our community! What a shame that he won't be keeping his talents in our area! Thief River Falls will lose a family that would patronize its stores, utilize its churches and schools, take advantage of its medical facilities, partake of its activities and pay taxes here because of a stingy employer.

The trouble is, this young man is only a representative of many such young people. These are smart, talented people who are good workers, good employees, employees who are loyal and faithful to their employers, and they must move in order to make a decent living. They can't get decent wages, nor can they get decent benefits, unless they leave town. Isn't there something wrong with that picture?

Shame on the employers who are creating this problem! Don't you see a good thing when it is right in front of your nose? Can't you find it in your hearts and pocketbooks to provide wages that compensate good employees for good work so that we in this area can have them around?

This type of environment simply creates problems - poor wages and few or no benefits creates employees who are dissatisfied and unhappy. These employees take out their frustrations on the customers in one way or another, either in poor workmanship or impolite service, and then customers are unhappy and quit patronizing the company or business. And then we hear gripes and groans from local businesses because area people are shopping in Grand Forks! Is it any wonder? Stop and think about it.

Soon it will the holiday season and the new year. Maybe it is a good time for some employers to take a look at their businesses. Could it be that your workers are unhappy? I think you can tell whether they are or not quite easily - if you can't, try asking them outright - a little honest discussion might make for a better employer-employee relationship anyway - and don't forget to listen to what they have to say.

Then give some thought to what that employee is doing for you and your business. Is he or she doing a good job? Is he or she honest and reliable? Is he or she representing your business to customers in a friendly manner so that they continue to utilize your services? Has he or she been in your employ for a length of time?

Now the hard part - dig into your pocket and give them a raise and some benefits (and I don't mean a pittance of a raise, either). Let's try to keep the good ones here in our area, because there are plenty of us who appreciate them and pay you because of what they do for us. Hang on to them for us, please!

Thanksgiving Countdown

Heighten anticipation of upcoming holidays with holiday countdown chains. Make a paper chain (one link for each day until the featured holiday, e.g. Thanksgiving, Christmas) from construction paper. Attach the chain to a seasonal decoration such as a pumpkin for Halloween, turkey for Thanksgiving, Christmas tree for Christmas and display it. Each morning have your child cut a link from the chain. When the last link is cut, it's holiday time!

Spinelli, Eileen. Thanksgiving at the Tappletons'. Thanksgiving at the Tappletons' looks as if it's going to be pretty bleak as the turkey slides down an icy hill into the pond, the bakery sells out of pies, and the relatives will show up too early. Nothing seems to go right ... until Grandmother attempts to save the day.

Fathers and Children

Regardless of their personal style of upbringing, most fathers are genuinely interested in having a good relationship with their children. However, a father may not know how to go about developing that good relationship because his father may not have been a good role model or he may think that good relationships just automatically happen because you live in the same house (and that is not true).

In past generations men were not expected to be involved with their children or to be affectionate. So fathers today may not know how to go about developing this relationship. Yet with commitment and deliberate effort it can be done. The first step is to be involved.

Being involved starts with simply watching, observing and listening. Whether your child is five days, five months or five years old, start watching and observing. Enjoy your child with your eyes. What is your child doing? What can't he/she do? What interests him/her? What comforts or excites your child? Learn all you can about your child.

Sometimes we adults "play" with children by trying to get them to do what we want them to do rather than being aware of what the child wants to do or is capable of doing. If you sit down to play trucks and cars with your child, first observe what your child is doing with the cars. Start by imitating his/her style of play. Then after that you can expand his/her play with suggestions. But only after you are aware of what your child is capable of doing. To be involved means to be interested in your child and to show him/her that you enjoy him/her as a person. What you do isn't as important as that you notice each other and share a common interest.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk to your child about what he/she is doing. Ask questions to which you do not know the answer. (Often we only ask questions to which we already know the answer, for example "What color is this?")

"Resonance" quartet at Zion church

After giving concerts and performing at various functions throughout the Thief River Falls area, "Resonance" men's quartet will present an "Evening of Music" concert Sunday, November 23, at 7 p.m. in Zion Lutheran church. The concert is open to the public.

The quartet originated at Zion three years ago and the free will offering to be received at the fall concert Sunday will be used for the chancel refurbishing project currently being planned at Zion. Both sacred and secular numbers will be presented.

Many of the sacred numbers have been sung by the quartet at one time or another for worship at Zion and include spirituals and gospel songs. The secular numbers vary from 1950s music to barbershop to western.

Quartet members include Jim Matson, tenor; Van Swanson, lead; Dennis Raymond, baritone; and Joe Ramm, bass. The group is directed by Naomi Raymond.

The group rehearses about once a week and has developed a substantial repertoire. Two years ago the group recorded its first tape, a limited supply of which will be available at the concert. Plans for a Christmas tape this year did not materialize because the recording studio was inundated by the flood.

Christmas dinner plans made

Plans are being made to serve 500 people during the Annual Thief River Falls Community Christmas Dinner. Members of the steering committee met recently to begin making plans for the event.

Last year the steering committee planned to serve 325 people and 430 people attended the event. This year, they are making plans to serve 500 people.

The dinner in Thief River Falls is unique in that most holiday dinners of this type are served in church basements or community centers. The dinner in Thief River Falls is held in one of the city's premier restaurants —The Evergreen Eating Emporium, which is owned by Jane Mattson and Judy Nelson.

As 22 businesses contribute to the dinner, with Bridgeman's, Hartz Foods and Northern Pride being three of the largest, little is left off the holiday dinner menu. Absent from the menu this year, however, will be lutefisk.

The contributions of businesses and individuals allow the dinner to be served at no cost to the city or dinner guests. Reservations will be taken after December 1 by the Chamber of Commerce.

Members of the steering committee this year include Peggy Bruzek, Irene Gomulowski, Jane Mattson, Ken Schmalz, Chuck Wahrath and Doreen Wahrath.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Jessica Krankkala
Lincoln High School

This year has already been full of exciting dances, games, contests and activities. And, yes, there have already been trips. One that I will never forget is the 1997 Magnet Arts trip to Minneapolis.

We left the school at 3 a.m., October 25. The bus ride there was very dark and long. Half of the bus riders were trying to get sleep, while the other half was sprung on a caffeine high from drinking an overabundance of Mountain Dew. We finally arrived in the Twin Cities at about 10 a.m. Our first event of the weekend was to go to Orchestra Hall to see the Minnesota Orchestra. The concert was extremely delightful - but for those who didn't sleep the night before, it was a time of relaxation. That night we loaded the bus and headed to the Mystery Cafe Theater to see "Trial By Jury". This was an audience participation play, so it made us very energetic and alert. "Trial By Jury" was a unique play, with murder cases to solve, guys running around dressed up as girls, and very unexpected conclusions.

My favorite day of the weekend was Saturday. We started off the day by dining at the Chanhassen Dinner Theater, followed by the play, "The Rainmaker". Because the play "The Rainmaker" was a love story this ended up being the "tear-jerker" part of the weekend. I remember on one side of me tears were being shed by Amanda, while on the other jokes were being suggested by John. I really enjoyed this play and recommend it to anyone interested in going to the Chanhassen.

The day continued with a trip to the Orpheum Theater to see "Tap Dogs". This was the most amazing thing I had ever seen in person. The tap dogs originated in Australia and were made up of six unbelievable guys with unlimited talent. My eyes were glued to them the whole time with their incredible dance moves from tapping on ladders to tapping upside down. I was totally impressed and would love to see them again any day.

Our exciting day was not over yet. After "Tap Dogs" we went to the Guthrie Theater to see "Blithe Spirit". The play was very descriptive and extremely humorous. It was based on a married man's ex-wife coming back from the dead. This caused conflicts in his relationship with his new wife, who ended up dying too. Though it was not sad, it held many confusing situations and was very funny.

Sunday was full of many more fun times. That morning we went to The Basilica of Saint Mary. I could not believe how enormous and beautiful the church was. Every angle was full of great detail and creativity. The view was breathtaking. After our stop at St. Mary's we went to the Minneapolis Institute of Art. While the visual art students had their portfolios judged, the rest of us wandered around the art museum and art shops. One of my favorite pictures which I saw that day was an original Monet. It was worth four million dollars, and it is very beautiful. I wanted to sneak and brush the famous picture with my pinky, but I controlled my impulsive thought.

The rest of the trip was very fun while half of us played "Truth or Dare" in the back of the bus. This trip was very exciting and I will never forget all the experience I had with the arts in one weekend. It was educational and enormously fun. Anyone who has the opportunity to do something on this order should take advantage of it. It probably will only be offered once in your life.

Magic of Hospice to be celebrated by Pine to Prairie Hospice in Nov.

Pine to Prairie Hospice will join the Hospice Association of America, the National Hospice Organization and more than 2,500 programs nationwide in celebrating November as National Hospice Month.

"Celebrating the Magic of Hospice" is the theme of this year.

For more than a quarter of a century, hospice has helped thousands of terminally ill Americans and their families cope with and find meaning in one of life's most challenging transitions. By providing physical, emotional and spiritual care to patients at home and in home-like settings, hospice caregivers enable the dying to cherish and make the most of the time that remains.

The "magic of hospice" lies in its ability to preserve and enhance the patient's quality of life and provide support for the family before, during and after the death of a loved one.

National Hospice Month has [illegible] public [illegible] hospice [illegible] patients and families [illegible] professionals and volunteers who devote their [illegible] support to providing [illegible] quality end-of-life care. It also focuses national attention on the critical issues affecting hospice care [illegible].

MECC board to pursue funding to restore cuts

public forum should be held after the bids come in on the track and building on December 12. Charlie Naplin, joint powers board member for Pennington County Commissioners, suggested that the group wait until after the bids come in and then get information out to the public so that they can form questions. He later suggested that a public forum be held in January to avoid a concern raised by Jim Burkholder, that residents would be less likely to attend a meeting during the holiday season.

The suggestion to hold a meeting in January was approved. The board will wait to see how the bids come in and then meet with member boards of the joint powers board before going to the public.

Norm Trebewasser of the project's architectural firm, provided an update for the board. He noted that Thygeson Construction, which was awarded the bid for site preparation, had moved 18,000 cubic yards of fill or about one-third of the fill on the site. With the freeze up, he believes the work on the project will be shut down for winter.

The next meeting of the board has been scheduled for December 18.

During an opportunity for public input, Dave Strong of Thief River Falls, said this project was one of the greatest things that could happen to this community, and urged the board to continue.

Jim Burkholder, suggested that the public forum be held in the evening when people can attend, and in January after the holiday season.

Santa Claus Day December 13 at TRF Eagles hall

channel to allow comparing present conditions to original construction.

The survey would provide information the engineer needs to prepare his report, which would estimate the amount of work needed to be done and approximate cost of accomplishing the work requested.

The board accepted the engineer's recommendation, issued a call for bids and subsequently awarded a contract for the clearcutting to Spruce Valley Construction Company operated by Louis Cater of Middle River. The contract was for approximately $86,000 and the work was to be completed early this winter.

Objectors Would Save Trees

People objecting to the project have made a plea for saving the trees which have overgrown the right-of-way, some likely since the channel work was done a few years after the State Ditch 83 was established in 1910. They maintain that a portion of the area is open enough for surveying and that in other areas limited cutting could be done to create the necessary sight lines.

It is acting contrary to logical sequence, they say, to cut trees first and then conduct a public hearing to determine if a project to remove the trees is to be approved.

Families Were Pioneers

Lowell Dyrud, one of the principal objectors to the tree cutting, says that his family has been residents of the area since 30 years before the channelization was ordered to provide better drainage in 1910.

"The river has done a marvelous job of recovery and a return to its natural state," he said. "No one thinks of it as a ditch. It is a beautiful area. Canoeists use it, hunters walk the banks, wildlife utilizes the cover. It would be a travesty to cut all the trees, especially without even a public hearing."

Dyrud attended a recent meeting with the watershed district board and showed enlarged color photos of parts of the area to illustrate its beauty, utilization and appearance of a river.

But It's No Longer a River

"What people have to realize," states Lowell Enerson, manager of the watershed district office, "is that regardless of appearances, State Ditch 83 is still a ditch. It was designated by law and the original river was altered to improve its function as a drainage course."

Enerson said the controlling authority for the ditch was originally the State of Minnesota, then a conservancy district board created in about 1920 to 1930. When the Red Lake Watershed District came into being in 1969, it became the jurisdictional agency.

"Anyone who looks at the ditch area can see the spoil banks and tell that work was done at some time in the past," he said. "The fact that we are talking about a drainage ditch really shouldn't be a surprise to anyone."

Enerson said that a concession of sorts has already been made by the district in electing to clear only one side of the ditch for access and survey work. Right-of-way was purchased for 90 feet on both sides of the center when the ditch was created, he said, and property owners have paid for benefits which the ditch is presently incapable of providing.

Farmers Fight Flooding

Doyle Martin, who was the first signer of the petition and took time from his farming operation to solicit the other signatures, said that 30 square miles flooded last spring and water remained on the land longer than necessary because the Ditch 83 channel is clogged with fallen trees and silt.

In addition to the spring flooding, he said, some of the area is subject to summer flooding when heavy rains fall and water is released from state and federal impoundments upstream, often to preserve duck nesting sites. He says his loss of a livelihood from farming due to flooding should be as important as the aesthetics of trees growing along a ditch where they aren't supposed to be.

"I've been second in consideration to ducks for the 17 years I've been trying to farm here," he said. "I spent between $13,000 and $14,000 last year fighting to keep flood water out of my house, not counting what I lost in crops I couldn't plant or harvest. Now if I get shoved further down the list because of a few trees, that doesn't seem right."

He suggested that if people are concerned about trees, that they plant them outside of the ditch right-of-way. "Maybe they have enjoyed trees for 85 years where they really didn't have a right to have them," he said.

Donald Larson, another signer of the petition and life-long resident of the area, points out that water drains into State Ditch 83 from the Grygla, Gatzke, Moose River, Thief Lake and Agassiz areas and that repair of the ditch is desperately needed.

"Hundreds of farmers who are draining water into Ditch 83 are very upset with people opposing the repair that is so much needed," he said, "because there is major flooding along Ditch 83 below Agassiz refuge and the farmers can not continue to have this flooding year after year."

Environmental Groups Concerned

Representatives of environmental agencies groups have joined in expressing concern over the ditch repair plans and the clearcutting contract.

John Line Stine, administrator of the permits and land use section of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources in St. Paul, advised cities downstream from the proposed project area in a letter that the project was being planned.

"The department has serious concerns about this project," Stine wrote in the letter dated October 28. "In addition to the environmental impacts from the vegetation removal, channel excavation and channel enlargement, we feel the potential for increased downstream flooding and sedimentation is a distinct possibility. In light of recent flooding, we feel that it is in the best interests of the citizens of the Red River Basin to consider basin-wide solutions to our flooding problems. Closer examination and involvement of all interests with individual projects of this magnitude are necessary to prevent individual actions from exacerbating problems elsewhere.

It is our opinion that options exist that would begin to alleviate some of the local flooding difficulties without intensifying downstream problems. Such options include alternative land uses, upstream retention of water, culvert sizing and property acquisition or easement through existing federal programs."

In a letter to Enerson dated Oct. 14, 1997, Margaret Anderson, manager of Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge, addressed the refuge's position on hydrogen sulfide odor, drawdowns of pools at Agassiz and flood control.

She noted that Agassiz manages about 40,000 acres of wetlands in 22 managed pools varying in size from 100 to 10,000 acres. The pools are drawn down periodically on a four to 12 year cycle, depending at least partially on size.

"Drawdowns or partial drawdowns may occur at different times of the year depending on the management strategy for a specific pool," she wrote. "We will continue managing water levels at Agassiz refuge in this manner."

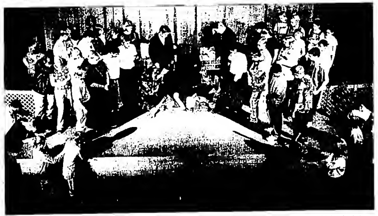
Regarding flood control she wrote "Last year the Red Lake Watershed District requested that Agassiz Refuge and Thief Lake WMA consider a winter/spring drawdown due to the extremely high snow fall and moisture content. Refuge and state staff spent many hours opening frozen structures, monitoring water levels on a daily basis and cooperating to the fullest, recognizing the extreme circumstances.

"Agassiz refuge was not established by Congress for flood control. The refuge was established as a vital link for migratory birds in the chain of National Wildlife Refuges in the Mississippi Flyway. Our management is focused on providing habitat for breeding and migrating waterfowl. This will always be our primary focus when making management decisions.

"As we have discussed before, to truly address flood control issues a holistic watershed management approach is needed. This approach needs to assess all upstream activities and downstream impacts in a watershed."

The watershed district office has also received negative comment from downstream cities and organizations such as the Minnesota chapter of the National Audubon Society.

"All I want to do is get a water flow problem repaired so I can survive to continue as a farmer in this area," Doyle Martin said. "I spent more than I could afford fighting the floods already. I don't have money left for attorneys to fight this problem too. It seems to me the law should be clear enough."



Tragic result of the fighting between the Montagues and the Capulets is the unnecessary deaths of two young members of the families. The death scene is from William Shakespeare's "Romeo & Juliet" to be presented by the Lincoln high school drama department at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, November 21 and 22. Tickets at the door are $4 for adults and $2 for students.

"Romeo & Juliet" will be presented by the Lincoln high school drama department Friday and Saturday, November 21 and 22, at 7 p.m. in the school auditorium. Connie Stock directs the classic by Shakespeare with a modern twist. Here the cast members don their Shakespearian costumes for the masquerade at the annual Capulet Renaissance Ball. So that's how Romeo meets Juliet!

The magnet arts visual class, supervised by Marilyn Adams, has worked extensively on visual details such as stained glass windows, paintings and stonework. A talented volunteer crew consisting of Mike Melby, Scott Bornholdt, Howard Rokke, Jim Bitzegaio and Lyle Hanson, headed by Art Heinze, built the impressive set. Scott Bornholdt is also in charge of technical crews consisting of Jessica Altendorf, Andrea Olin and Stephanie Sculthorp.

First Minnesota Class A girls state high school swim meet included Thief River Falls divers Naomi Olson (center) and Chelsea Haviland, who are shown with Prowlers head coach Shon Thompson prior to the event that began Thursday and concluded Saturday at the University of Minnesota Aquatic Center in Minneapolis. Haviland, an eighth grader, finished second in the 32-diver field. Olson, a sophomore, did not make the first-day cut.

Eighth grader Chelsea Haviland second in Class A...

TRF diver state runner-up

Thief River Falls eighth grader Chelsea Haviland turned in a second place performance in the diving portion of the 1997 Class A state high girls swim meet completed Saturday at the University of Minnesota Aquatic Center in Minneapolis.

Kim Bahmer, a junior from Shakopee, won the Class A diving title with 415.15 points. Haviland collected 397.65 points, while third place Alison Schiefelbein of Ely had 396.50 and fourth place Gina Ryan of Waseca wound up with 388.30.

The 32-diver Class A field was trimmed to 16 during Friday's eight-dive prelims when Ryan, a freshman, was the leader with 291.75 points, followed by Schiefelbein with 289.20, Bahmer 275 and Haviland 267.35.

Bahmer, who was eighth last year in the single-class meet and was the only returning medalist in the Class A field, vaulted to the top of the leader board during Saturday's three-dive finals. Haviland followed her, also jumping ahead of the two first-day leaders.

"Chelsea put a lot of pressure on the girl in first place," pointed out Thief River Falls head coach Shon Thompson. "She (Bahmer) needed to hit her last dive, or Chelsea would have beat her."

This was the first time in history the state meet featured a two-class format. Haviland was a state meet qualifier last fall as a seventh grader, when she placed 18th in a field of 40 divers. She was the Section 8 runner-up in 1996 and the Section 8A champion in 1997.

First state meet cuts were made after five dives, when the field was reduced to 20. Three more prelim dives set up the finals.

"Chelsea was a little shaky the first five dives," reported Thompson, "but she came around after that. She settled down and dove really well in the finals. To do what she did as as eighth grader is phenomenal."

Haviland exceeded expectations, according to Thompson. "Her goal was to make the top 16 finals," he explained. "I knew that would be no problem. My goal was to be in the top five, but I didn't tell her that. I wanted to keep the pressure off her."

Thief River Falls sophomore Naomi Olson joined Haviland as a 1997 state meet qualifier, but the first-time competitor did not earn a spot in Saturday's finals.

"Naomi had a good day," offered Thompson. "Just to be there is an accomplishment. Diving at the state meet is a lot different than what you're used to during the season."

Beth Mattson, a former Thief River Falls resident now a senior at South St. Paul, was a seventh place finisher in the Class A diving competition with 335.65 points.

Jamie Senger, a junior from Wayzata, won her third straight state diving title with a meet-record 507.00 points in the Class AA competition. Anna Sterm of Forest Lake was second with 401.50 points.

The two-class meet featured 788 athletes, compared to the 499 who took part in the single-class meet a year earlier.

Haviland's performance was highest finish ever for a Thief River Falls diver at the girls state meet. This was the fifth straight year Prowlers had a diver competing at the state, with Jennifer Olin qualifying three times, followed by Haviland in 1996, and then the Haviland/Olson combination this fall.

Hutchinson (Class A) and Eden Prairie (Class AA) won team titles.

■ Pelican Rapids beats mistake-prone B/G-MR

Pelican Rapids converted Badger/Greenbush-Middle River mistakes into points Friday afternoon as the Vikings beat the Gators 45-24 in the Class 2A state high school football semifinals at the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

The Section 8AA champion Gators, who knocked off No. 1 ranked Deer River 22-8 in the state quarterfinals the week before at Middle River to earn a trip to the Metrodome, ran into early trouble. They fumbled away their first snap of the game at the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River 9-yard line, and on their second possession watched a high punt snap set up the Pelican Rapids offense at the Gators' 11.

Those two misplays led to a 6-yard Matt Soberg touchdown run and a 25-yard Heracio Diaz field goal for a quick 10-0 Pelican Rapids lead.

Quarterback David Truscinski scored on a 1-yard run and added the two-point conversion to get Badger/Greenbush-Middle River back in the game at 10-8, but the Gators gave up a 57-yard return on the ensuing kickoff that led to a 1-yard Jake Wiese touchdown run and a 17-8 lead.

First snap after the touchdown was another Badger/Greenbush-Middle River fumble, this one recovered by the Vikings at the Gators' 31. Wiese scored four plays later to make it 24-8 two minutes into the second quarter.

Richard Wockenfuss scored from a yard out and added the conversion run to again pull Badger/Greenbush-Middle River within a touchdown/conversion at 24-16 with 5 1/2 minutes to play in the first half, only to have the Gators give up a 42-yard touchdown run by Wiese before the second quarter ended.

The 31-16 spread remained on the board through the third quarter. Wiese scored his fourth touchdown of the game early in the fourth quarter, and another Badger/Greenbush-Middle River fumble set up a 3-yard scoring run by Soberg as the gap hit 45-16.

Scoring ended when Truscinski and Andy Schenkey hooked up on a 50-yard touchdown pass, and Truscinski went to Trevor Lorenson for the conversion, with 4:19 to play.

The loss ended a 9-3 season for the Gators, who began the year 2-2 but rattled off seven straight wins to reach the state semifinals for the first time, producing their Metrodome debut.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River was also 9-3 last year when the Gators earned a state playoff berth for the first time with a Section 8C title before losing a 19-16 quarterfinal decision to Cook County in Grand Marais.

They duplicated the record and went a step further in the expanded six-class playoffs despite returning just three starters on both offense and defense from last year's team.

Steve Willman, in his fifth year as the Gators' head coach, has watched the program accumulate 18 wins over the past two years after going just 3-6 in 1995.

Registration is key to tracking deer numbers

Hunters are being reminded once again by Minnesota Department of Natural Resources officials to register their deer before having the animal processed.

Registration is the most important step in the paperwork process of deer hunting. The information collected at more than 1,000 big game registration stations across Minnesota provides essential data on deer harvested from each zone, season, and permit area – the number of bucks, does, fawns and adult deer removed from the population. It's the largest and most important piece of the puzzle that makes up the ever-changing "big picture" of deer management in Minnesota – a process of habitat improvement, information gathering, research and scientific analysis that has given wildlife managers in the DNR Section of Wildlife the ability to accurately predict, manage and maintain deer populations.

With the antlerless permit system, which allows control over reproduction by controlling the harvest of does, the DNR has doubled, tripled even quadrupled annual harvests – compared to the boom-or-bust deer seasons of the 1960s and early 1970s.

But that system only works if hunters cooperate by registering and accurately reporting the age and sex of their deer. "If we suspect that we don't have accurate harvest data from some areas, if we don't know what's left out there in the population, we have to be conservative when it comes to allocating antlerless permits for the next season," said Jay McAninch, a nationally recognized expert on whitetail research at the DNR Farmland Research Center in Madelia.

"Inadequate or inaccurate harvest data could result in the DNR issuing fewer antlerless permits than we would, or should be issuing to maintain target population goals in certain areas," explained McAninch. "Under-reporting of harvested deer, or "fuzzy data" from registration stations, tends to reduce hunting opportunities in subsequent years."

The "fuzzy data" McAninch refers to has been verified in the past with DNR check stations – where wildlife managers and research biologists spend time at a number of busy, strategically located stations gathering verified data on large numbers of registered deer.

Check-station biologists categorize the harvest into three groups – fawns, yearlings and adults. The deer are sexed and weighed, and the exact age of adult animals is accurately determined by extracting a tooth to be examined later.

By comparing check-station data to regular deer registration data for the same area, McAninch has discovered that the age and sex of harvested deer are not always reported accurately by hunters in registration agents. The most common error – buck fawns are reported as adult does, from ten percent to as high as 40 percent of the time.

"The hunter doesn't check that closely and just assumes that a large fawn buck is an adult doe because it hasn't grown antlers," explained McAninch. "Or else a party of hunters will come in with five or six deer in the back of a pickup, one or two have antlers and the rest are automatically registered as does."

Another good reason to register your deer: It's the law.

Check out pages 48 and 49 of the 1997 Minnesota Hunting and Trapping Regulations booklet about deer registration and transportation requirements. The person whose tag is on the deer must personally present it for registration. It is illegal to possess or transport your unregistered deer after the season has closed, or to transport someone else's unregistered deer anytime, even if it is tagged with the owner's license tag. Either violation could net you a misdemeanor charge, with fines of up to $700 and possible jail time.

It is also illegal to butcher an unregistered deer, either at home or at a commercial meat processing facility. Theoretically, you and your butcher could end up in court if your deer doesn't have a processing tag.

If you've harvested a deer anywhere in the five-county "two-deer" area of northwest Minnesota, the deer must be registered at a station within Marshall, Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods or Pennington counties. This special requirement helps ensure accurate harvest data for ongoing research in the only region of Minnesota where hunters may shoot a deer in both the archery and regular firearms seasons.

Jennifer Ann Olson, 12-year-old daughter of Tron and Kelly Olson of Brainerd and granddaughter of Erv and Joyce Olson and Ted and Darlene Koropatnicki of Thief River Falls, had a memorable first deer hunt in northwestern Minnesota when her first shot downed this large buck.

Thief River Falls power boat racer...

By Sports Editor Mike Lundgren

Dennis Nabben has two goals, and they go hand in hand. The Thief River Falls power boat racer wants to [illegible] a major sponsor, and to win a national title. With the former, he thinks he can accomplish the latter.

He competes on the national level, trying to accumulate enough points to win a title that would cap a quest begun in 1992.

"Winning a national title is the goal," said Nabben. "Consistently winning or placing high, and not breaking down, are the keys to reaching the top in the highly competitive and very expensive sport," he explained.

That's where the sponsor part comes into play. "The major hangup," admitted Nabben, "is finding [illegible] paying for the equipment so breakdowns don't knock me out of a race."

Nabben, who left a job in the Twin Cities area to return to Thief River Falls in May, has a proposed budget of $13,800 for the 1998 season. That covers fuel, transportation, lodging, equipment, etc. To date his efforts have produced about $10,000 in sponsor commitments – about half of it locally.

"I had eight sponsors this year, but we'll lose six of them," noted Nabben. "Right now I'm looking for a major contributor that would help alleviate many future problems. If possible, we're trying to stay locally (with the sponsors)."

Nabben put about 12,000 miles on his rigs during the 1997 season that began April 19-20 in Valdosta, GA. He also raced in Iowa (Dubuque, Independence, Clear Lake), Wisconsin (Prairie DuChien), Manitoba (Winnipeg) and Minnesota (Little Falls, Winona, Crosby, Hastings, Minneapolis) during a season that stretched to Sept. 6.

He competed in three classes, finishing second in the nation in Super Mod, third in Pro Mod I and fifth in Pro Mod II. A national title escaped his grasp when mechanical trouble forced him to miss three races, robbing him of the points needed to win the crown. He was unbeaten in the Super Mod competition except for a second place finish at the nationals Aug. 16-17 in Independence, IA.

The boats hit speeds of up to 105 miles per hour during the quarter-mile drag races. Nabben was consistently a top ten or top-three place finisher each time out against competition that often drew 40 boats for the elimination type races.

"Our performance has definitely picked up," acknowledged Nabben, who took an extended work break to concentrate on the 1997 race season.

However, success on the American Power Boat Association circuit doesn't result in a financial windfall. Two firsts, a second and a fourth at Clear Lake, IA in the 1997 season netted only $500.

Nabben ran two boats this year but will compete in all three classes with one boat next season. "Logistically, it's just too hard to get two boats up and going," he explained.

Right now the racing equipment is in top-notch shape, noted Nabben, who spends the off-season working on fine-tuning the boat and motor set-up. The engines are short-lived, but tips from southern-area racing crews during their practice runs have helped save wear and tear on his equipment.

The impetus for this new hobby has resulted in a growing local interest in Nabben's racing efforts. "The community support has been great," he said. "People come up and ask me how things are going. It's kind of neat to see the interest."

Now, if he can come up with another sponsor or two for insurance against future mechanical problems and/or financial demands, Nabben can again turn his attention to achieving his national championship goal.

DNR NEWS

To help meet a growing demand for certified instructors, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources will offer instructor training sessions across the state.

"The response to our instructor training has been overwhelming," said Dick Anderson, senior planner for the DNR hunter education programs. "This program is designed to protect our hunting heritage based on knowledge, responsibility and respect, and to develop responsible role models for future generations."

Bowhunting Education Program instructor candidates will learn how to facilitate bowhunting seminars.

Advanced Hunter Education instructor candidates will learn how to facilitate seminars using group discussions to reach a consensus on hunting-related issues, how to use videos as learning tools, how to use resource professionals most effectively, and much more.

Training sessions have been scheduled Dec. 6-7 at Voyageur Environmental Learning Center west of Mound; Dec. 13-14 at Laurentian Environmental Center northwest of Britt; Jan. 10-11 at Eagle Bluff Environmental Learning Center in Lanesboro; Jan. 17-18 at the Conference Center near Loretto; Jan. 31-Feb. 1 at Bemidji State University; Feb. 21-22 at Good Counsel Education Center in Mankato; and March 7-8 at Camp Ripley near Little Falls.

To register for any of the sessions, call Bev Auger toll-free in Minnesota at 1-888-MINNDNR.

Safety sessions are being suggested for snowmobile drivers

A new law that aims to improve snowmobile safety means many teenagers would be wise to enroll in a snowmobile safety course this winter.

The Minnesota Legislature passed a law last session that requires snowmobile operators born after Dec. 31, 1979 to have a valid snowmobile certificate effective Oct. 1, 1998. Since snowmobile safety courses are held only during winter, teenagers who want to be certified for next year's snowmobile season should take the course now.

"Those who don't take the class this winter will not have a safety certificate by Oct. 1, 1998," said Jeff Thielen, Department of Natural Resources education coordinator for the Division of Enforcement. "That means they will not be able to legally operate a snowmobile on public lands during the first part of next year's snowmobile season because the next opportunity to take a snowmobile safety class won't be until later next winter."

Snowmobilers can obtain the dates and locations of snowmobile safety classes by calling toll free, 1-888-MINNDNR.

"We are currently developing a new course for students who are age 18 and over," said Thielen. "Unlike the traditional youth and young adult safety course, this curriculum would focus more heavily on the major causes of accidents, including speed, alcohol, stopping distances, and over-driving headlights during night riding. This new 'adult' course should be ready to be tested on a limited basis around the state early next year. Until that time, students need to enroll in youth and young adult courses that are currently being offered."

OUTDOOR NEWS

Minnesota deer hunters are sharing stories about their experiences in the forests and fields this fall. Those stories that detail examples of ethical hunting traditions are of interest to the Minnesota Deer Hunters Association and the Department of Natural Resources.

Nominees are being sought for an award that will honor a deer hunter who has exhibited conduct that can serve as an example of admirable hunting, according to Wayne Edgerton, DNR agriculture policy director. "All too often we hear about uncommonly bad examples of hunter ethics," Edgerton said. "This is an opportunity to highlight someone who exemplifies outstanding hunter ethics, the type of person who model behavior all hunters can look to with pride."

Minnesota Deer Hunters Association Executive Director Joe Wood agrees. "MDHA is very proud to again co-sponsor this award with the DNR," Wood said. "Winners of the past have been very positive examples of the type of hunters we're are proud of."

The MDHA and DNR will accept nominations for the fifth annual Minnesota Deer Hunters Ethics Award until Jan. 23, 1998. Nomination letters should be sent to Joe Wood, MDHA, 2820 South Highway 169, P.O. Box 5123, Grand Rapids, MN 55744. Anyone may nominate a hunter. Nominees must be Minnesota residents. The incidents for which hunters are nominated must have occurred during any of the 1997 Minnesota deer hunting seasons (archery, firearms, muzzleloader).

The award will be presented at the 1998 MDHA habitat banquet Feb. 21, at the Elks Club in Wadena.

State Patrol investigates two accidents

Minnesota State Patrol responded to two separate but separate accidents Thursday, November 13.

The state patrol received a report of an accident two miles south of Newfolden at 7:57 a.m. According to the accident report, Gary Dunarski, Newfolden, was driving a car south on Highway 59, and collided head-on with a car driven by Daylin Holthusen, Thief River Falls, which had crossed the center line due to slippery roads. Dunarski, his wife Dawn, and Holthusen were all taken to Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls. Gary and Daylin were treated and released. Dawn Dunarski was held for observation. Both vehicles were considered a total loss.

At 8:09 a.m. the state patrol received a report of an accident in Brooks at the intersection of Highways 92 and 59. Quesnell was traveling south. Her vehicle was considered a total loss. There was moderate damage to the Sander vehicle.

Officials seek information on TRF burglaries

Police suspect that four burglaries committed in the last few weeks are related. Burglaries have been reported at Pizza Hut and Taco John's. Over the weekend, two more burglaries were reported.

On November 16 police received a report of a burglary at the Black Cat. Police believe entry to the business was gained through a back door. The burglar or burglars took a safe weighing between 200 and 300 pounds and which contained about $1,600 in cash and checks. The incident remains under investigation.

On November 17 at 6:28 a.m. police received a report of a burglary at the Rex Cafe. No further details were available Monday morning. The incident remains under investigation.

Police Chief Ken Froehlheiser said it's possible that the four burglaries are related. He encourages anyone who may have seen something unusual or suspicious or had heard something about the incidents that may help law enforcement, to contact the law enforcement center at 681-6161.

On November 18 police reported that a cash register taken during the burglary at Pizza Hut had been found in a ditch near Challenger Elementary school on Friday, November 14.

Depending upon the circumstances of a case, charges can be, and sometimes are, changed or dropped by law enforcement officials or attorneys even before the case reaches court. Readers should also realize that under the American system of jurisprudence, individuals charged with crimes are innocent until proven guilty of those crimes in a court of law.

Graduation standards understood by those who become involved

by Terri Anderson
Center for School Change

Are you wondering about the Minnesota Graduation Standards? You're not the only one. Here's a brief overview of the standards and a few suggestions for how you might get involved as a member of your local school district.

There are 30 standards at the primary (K-3), intermediate (4-5), middle (6-8) and high school levels. The standards define what students should know and be able to do. The standards-based education movement in Minnesota comes from a concern that students are not adequately prepared for the demands of the workplace.

People are beginning to recognize that in addition to a foundation in the basics, students need diverse skills to help prepare them for future employment opportunities. I recently saw the following sign at a Career Resource Center in Thief River Falls: "The three R's — reading, writing, and arithmetic — are no longer enough. We must add the three C's — computing, critical thinking, and the capacity to change."

As part of the Graduation Standards, students are asked to complete performance packages that apply their knowledge to real world situations or scenarios. Many of the performance packages require students to use their community as an essential resource. For example, to meet the writing and speaking standard, primary grade students might be asked to gather information, take notes, and create a report about a career. To meet the peoples and cultures standard, intermediate grade students may be asked to identify where early settlers in their community came from and describe why they chose to settle in the area.

Middle grade students, to meet the inquiry standard, could interview community adults to examine their experiences during the Vietnam war. High school students may be asked to compare several retirement investment strategies to meet the math applications standard.

Middle grade students at Brainerd's Mississippi Horizons school plan to study their community as they work on the peoples and cultures standard. To help prepare students for this task, principal Dr. Carol Minnis created and sent out a Parent/Community Involvement survey that lists 30 different ways adults in the community can help increase student achievement. She got back almost 100 completed surveys. Involvement opportunities are divided into four categories: assist at school, extend learning by helping arrange experiences in the community, serve on an advisory or decision making committee, and increase resources available to the school.

Examples of what adults can do in each category include: help in the Media Center on the evenings the computer lab is open to the public, help set up a student internship at their business, organization or agency, help organize a parent organization for the school, and arrange for a business or other organization to donate materials to the school.

The survey found: "Caring adults do make a difference in the lives of young people. As a caring adult, what can you do to help make a difference in the life of a young person from your own community?"

For more information about the Graduation Standards call 612-296-[illegible] or visit the Department of Children, Families and Learning's Web site at

A white, white world greeted me this morning and we know winter is most definitely here. My hope is that it won't be as severe as last year, and I hope it will bring many pleasant experiences for you all.

The Women of Immanuel met on Thursday afternoon at the church with President Lucille Kvasager presiding. After a brief business meeting the Eve Circle was in charge of a program on Thanksgiving. Bonnie Wagner of Middle River, coordinator of Cluster #2, was guest speaker who brought in humor and a thoughtful message for the season. It was a joy to have her with us! Hostesses for the evening were Emilie Skjerven, Alma Hanson and Effie Byer.

55 Alive

A large class turned out for the 55 Alive course on Friday morning at the Plummer Hall. Marvin Bronken was the teacher for the class sponsored by AARP. Many in the group had dinner at the Hall, along with the regular diners at the meal site.

Lloyd and Wava [illegible] were among the many who attended the funeral for Owen Weckworth on Friday at Faith Lutheran Brethren Church of Thief River Falls. Later they were supper guests of her mother, [illegible] and Gene Prestegaard.

Eleanor Hodgson, Edna Hyde and Bunny DuChamp were among the many who attended the lutefisk supper at Trinity Lutheran Church of Thief River Falls last Thursday evening.

Jean Carpenter, Nancy and Danielle Holmes helped Judy Kelley celebrate her birthday on Friday night.

Ruth Paez of Long Beach, CA arrived on Friday by plane to visit her sister Amelia Eskeli until Wednesday.

Lowell, Karen and Nick Johnson of New York Mills spent Saturday and Sunday here, too, with Nick hunting with the Eskeli gang.

Marilyn Wilson of Cedar [illegible], daughter Carrie and grandson Travis Anderson, also Margie Miner of Grand Forks were Saturday afternoon visitors of Uncle Art and Avis Froland.

Sidney Scheleff of Bloomington, Zack Linn of Spirit Lake, Iowa came for the weekend to hunt with brothers and others and to visit Sid's mother Frances Scheleff. Harley and Darlene Scheleff came on Sunday afternoon to visit with the group and Marie and Bob Swanson came in the evening.

Craig and Darlynne Eskeli and Chad Eskeli of Elk Grove Village, IL were weekend house guests of Eddy Eskeli and also visited with Fern Eskeli.

Mike and Ginger Foster and Katelyn of Osakis arrived on Friday night at grandparents Art and Avis Froland. Mike went on to Roseau to hunt and they all returned to their home on Sunday.

Mary Ann and Harvey Gagnon spent Saturday with Howard and Margaret Greenwald, quietly helping the Greenwalds celebrate their 56th wedding anniversary. They capped off the day by attending the turkey supper at the American Legion Club.

Lon Oberpiller of Minneapolis came to hunt with his cousin, Rick Froland over the weekend and was a house guest there. He also visited with Art and Avis Froland before going home.

Terry Kelley and two children of the Cities came for the weekend to hunt with his brother, Jim Kelley. His mother, Alice Kelley accompanied them and remained to make her home with Jim and Judy for the present.

Edna Hyde, Bunny DuChamp and Eleanor Hodgson spent Saturday together visiting various craft shows in Thief River Falls and Crookston.

Kim Minette and Nicholas Carpenter of Fargo were weekend visitors of his mother, Jean Carpenter.

Mike, Sandy and Sheena Greenwald attended a volleyball game on Sunday where daughter, Patty was playing for her Jamestown College in Crookston.

Now we know the rest of the story - The new little lady in the home of Renee and Dan Lindgren of Pahrump, NV granddaughter of Ray and Ronette Walter is named Kelsey Danielle!

California Trip

Ray Nattonen returned from California on Sunday where he had visited his daughter at Danville for a week and friends in Los Angeles for a week.

Welcome Home Party

Edna Hyde hosted a Welcome Home party for Amelia Eskeli on Monday afternoon at her home. Guests were Amelia, her sister Ruth Paez, Bunny DuChamp, Jean Carpenter, Inga Linder, Esther Walter, Effie Byer, Ruth Wilkens, and Lucille Kvasager. Edna served a beautiful lunch after we'd had a sing-a-long of hymns. Margaret Greenwald joined us for a short time.

Correction: The name of Margaret Greenwald was inadvertently omitted in the recent story about the One Fund Drive. She has been a faithful solicitor for many years. We're so sorry about that.

Bridal Shower

Jerilee Froland, daughter of Rick and Arlene Froland, was honored at a bridal shower on Sunday afternoon at Immanuel Lutheran Church of Plummer. The Mary Circle hosted the event and Lorraine Lorenson was Emcee for a short program which included readings by Jerilee's sisters Kerry and Shannon and some words of advice by Grandma Avis. A game was played after which a dessert lunch was served, followed by the opening of gifts. Jerilee was assisted by her mother Arlene, sisters Kerry Newland, Shannon Nelson and Ginger Froland and her future mother-in-law, Melanie Carpenter of Oslo. A big crowd of relatives from both sides attended as well as many local friends. The many beautiful gifts were passed around for all of us to see. Jerilee will become the bride of Ben Carpenter on November 29th.

The Eve Circle met at the church on Wednesday afternoon with Alice Johnson as hostess. Effie Byer led the Bible study for the seven members attending.

IMPORTANT HOMESTEAD PROPERTY TAX NOTICE

"If the property you now own and live in was not being used by you - or by a "qualifying relative" - or by the previous owner - as a home on January 2, 1997, you can reduce the amount of property tax you will pay on your home in 1998 by applying to have the property classified as a homestead.

If you wish to claim homestead on a property that was not receiving the homestead classification in the past, you must contact the county assessor's office and make application on or before December 15, 1997.

You–or a "qualifying relative"–must have moved into the home you now own and live in it as a principal residence, on or before December 1, 1997, to apply to have the property classified as a homestead.

A "qualifying relative" is defined as a parent, step-parent, child, stepchild, grandparent, grandchild, brother, sister, uncle, or aunt. The relationship may be by blood or by marriage.

Because of a 1993 law change, once you have been granted the homestead classification, no further applications are necessary unless they are specifically requested by the county assessor.

If you should sell, move or for any reason no longer qualify for the homestead classification, you are required to notify the county assessor's office within 30 days of the change in homestead status.

To find out how to apply for the homestead classification and receive the proper application form contact:

Lloyd and Carol Wold and Harry and Agnes Walnemo attended and were guests at Grandparents Day at Park Christian School of Moorhead on October 24. For those who aren't grandparents yet, don't worry about becoming grandparents, rather, be happy, the advantages are much greater than the disadvantages. Years ago when my grandma Guro Hemme came to live with the folks one year, I used to tell her washing dishes was too hard for a grandma and she shouldn't have to do that. I guess I felt if you become a grandparent you also automatically were in the "old category."

Friends and relatives decided they weren't going to let Agnes Walnemo forget that when her birthday came around in October, she couldn't just have a birthday, they wanted to remind her to add another numeral to that list that had grown every year since she was born.

A group drove over to Walnemo's house and sat down to wait for Agnes to get the coffee pot going. Soon she had to add more cups to the table setting. It wasn't only Myrtle Osmonson who came. Ila Torgerson, Debbie Hahn, and Gladys Odegaard also waited for that hot cup of coffee, to enhance the visit and the singing of the birthday song.

In the evening Linnea came to wish her mother a happy birthday. Janell Anderson waited until later that week for her birthday visit. Keep the coffee pot scrubbed up Agnes! The group plans to be there again in October 1998.

We agreed, "it was a success"! The Halloween party at the Community Center in Gully on Friday evening Oct. 31. The party reached the goals set by the club. How? Some of the community club members had a dream. The members met, ideas were set in motion, volunteers came forward, offered time, talents, and work. They persuaded others to join in the venture.

On Thursday, mothers were busy, they needed a cake for each family to use as admission. Which would later be used for the "cake walk". Soon it looked as if a "Specialty Cake Shop" had opened in the one corner of the Center. There wasn't one flat cake, everyone must have had good luck with the baking.

We are especially grateful to the various people that were willing to donate so much time and personal "know how" to make your contribution special, important and appreciated.

"Enrolling my family in a Dakota Clinic managed healthcare program was an important step for all of us. I feel my family is getting better care and it's all coordinated through our family's primary care physician ... whether someone has an ear infection, needs a regular checkup, even a broken bone. Plus, we have access to a whole network of additional specialists when needed ... it's all arranged through our family doctor."

Legislature Made Right Decision On Stadium

Sometimes the best action a legislative body can take is not to take action at all. In the case of the push for legislative (and therefore public) financial support for a new baseball stadium for use by the Minnesota Twins, the legislature made the right decision in choosing not to become involved in the financing project.

There are several reasons why this was the prudent course to follow:

(1) First of all is the basic question as to whether the State of Minnesota should incur debt in behalf of a professional sports franchise—whether it is privately owned or turned over to a charitable trust. (Incidentally, the Metrodome was built by the State of Minnesota at a cost of approximately $68 million.)

(2) There has been no demonstrated need for a new stadium other than the stated desire of team ownership, Twin Cities sports media and some other stadium proponents. The Metrodome has not substantially deteriorated since it opened in 1982 to a good deal of fanfare, and has been good enough to host not only two World Series (won by the Twins in 1987 and 1991) but also the Major League All-Star game in 1985. Seating capacity for baseball is 48,678—more than ample for all regular season games and sufficient for most play-offs.

(3) The legislature was placed under an unrealistic deadline created by Minnesota Twins ownership which did not permit adequate study and consideration of alternatives and possibilities to resolve the situation.

(4) Despite last minute changes in proposals and suggestions, the net result of legislative involvement in new stadium financing would be additional cost to the state's taxpayers.

(5) Major league baseball owners—including Twins ownership—have allowed the game to get totally out of control from a cost standpoint and should not be encouraged to coerce public bodies into helping bail them out of situations which they have created for themselves.

We will admit to being a little surprised that legislators as a rule held firm with the expressed views of a majority of their constituents and did not give in to intense lobbying and political pressure during the special session. That is representative democracy at work.

Time will tell if indeed the Minnesota Twins leave Minnesota. If they do, we will miss them at first. They have given us something to complain about in the summer besides weather, mosquitoes and fish not biting. But we'll get over it, and we will know that they left because of their own selfish interest and because our elected legislators had the courage to do the right thing.

Fascinating Facts About American Families

A survey conducted by telephone of 1,000 randomly-selected adult Americans by Yankelovich Partners and reported by Lutheran Brotherhood reveals some interesting facts about American families—including some that may be a little surprising. Here are some of the results:

- Only 10 percent of respondents said they didn't know their neighbors at all. Twenty-nine percent said they knew their neighbors very well, 32 percent fairly well and 32 percent only slightly.
- Forty-seven percent of Americans talk to their neighbors at least five times a month. In the past year, 69 percent offered to give or have received help from their neighbors, 51 percent have borrowed from or loaned something to their neighbors and 33 percent have had neighbors over or been over for dinner with their neighbors.
- Only 19 percent have given their neighbors their house keys or security code.
- Sixty-three percent say their neighborhood is as safe today as it was five years ago, while 14 percent say it's less safe and 13 percent say it's even safer.
- Sixty percent of Americans say their current neighborhood is about as friendly or more friendly than the one they grew up in, while 35 percent say it's less friendly.
- If Americans had an extra hour each day, 52 percent would spend it with family, followed by relaxing (18 percent) and exercising (15 percent).
- Sixty percent would not give up their current lifestyle in exchange for a simpler lifestyle with less pay.

For a 50 percent pay raise, what moves would Americans make?

- Fifty-five percent would move next door to parents;
- Forty-six percent would move next door to in-laws;
- Forty percent would move to another part of the country away from most of their family.
- Twenty-four percent would live in another city than their spouse during the work week.
- Ninety-seven percent of American parents tell their children they love them, and of those, 78 percent say it at least once a day.
- Ninety-one percent of Americans say they are doing about the same job or a better job raising their children than their parents did raising them.
- Sixty-four percent of Americans say they spend more time with their children than their parents spent with them.
- Fifty-seven percent of American parents say they feel closer to their own children than they did with their parents when they were growing up.

LETTERS

To The Editor:

Thank you for your nice write-up on our community asthma control program. After reading the article, I just wanted to make one clarification and also recognize one of our key team members who was not mentioned.

We would like people to recognize that "reliever" medications are for the most part made up of a class of meds called Beta 2 agonists which most might recognize as Proventil or Albuterol. These medications, when inhaled, provide fast-acting, short-term relief and are generally used at the start of exacerbations. "Controllers," on the other hand, are the inhaled corticosteroids and should be used on a regular basis to control the underlying inflammatory process of the disease, even in times when the patient is breathing normally.

I would also like to recognize and commend Terry Newton from Dakota Clinic in Fargo for her work with physicians, nurses and especially with patients. She has been an integral part of the whole process and has been working directly with the asthma patient at Thief River Falls' Dakota Clinic since the first part of the year. She makes two trips per month to Thief River Falls and, in talking with me, expressed that she would like to come up weekly. Hats off to Terry and also to the physicians, nurses, pharmacists and community in general for making this whole thing such a big success.

Thanks!
Sincerely,
Rick Melby, Pharm. D., R.Ph.

Seen not only those with Gully addresses showed up, others ready and willing to help came. They too wanted a safe Halloween. The youngsters started arriving. The blondes looked like brunettes, the red heads looked like blondes and some didn't know for sure who they were trying to imitate.

There are good seamstresses in the area. From cast off garments they could fashion a costume to look elegant or ridiculous. Some looked as if they were on their way to their own wedding, some looked as if they were on their way to the stage of a New York night club. Ready for a performance and of course as is the habit with "Night Clubers" they used that extra "twitch" to their hips as they entered. Did you notice the five-year-old David Crocker, with his coon skin cap? He left for awhile and pretended to go hunting with his air rifle. He returned empty handed. Guess the animal that he shot was black with white stripes so he decided to let it lay where he shot it.

The youngsters were all given a bunch of tickets that they could use for the various games. The spook house downstairs was a popular place. Some of the other popular spots for enjoyment were, ring toss, bean bag, bobbing for apples, basketball toss, fish pond, duck pond, spinning for winning numbers, tic-tac-toe, and others. The Center was filled with laughter and gleeful shrieks and shouts as each youngster received a little prize for winning. Door prizes were won by Brent Halverson, Ashley Ulrich, Misty Dyrdahl, Janelle Nybo, and Cathy B.

Lund Ladies Aid will meet for its November meeting on the regular meeting day, Nov. 12, the day after Veterans Day. The lunch will be "potluck" this time. We hope to put together a good lunch.

If you have something appropriate for a special to add to the program, please prepare to give it. We need to honor the Veterans who have done more than their share, so that we have the freedom to give an appropriate program instead of as in some countries that it is not a privilege.

Tristan Jeffroy Wagner, son of Holly and Jeff Wagner, was baptized on Sunday, Nov. 2, 1997, at the eleven o'clock service at Lund Church in Gully by Rev. Bob Kelly. Sponsors were Travis and Jill Tharaldson of Crystal, and Tanya Tharaldson of Gully. Following services a dinner was served in the Lund Church basement by the family.

Effie Handy keeps smiling, she has her brother Willis Emerson from Honcon, Wisconsin here visiting her. And if she gives his arm a good twist, he will take her where she wants to go. Effie doesn't like driving in snow anymore. On Wednesday, Willis and Effie visited Don and Shirley Hood at Bagley and Arnold Scott in Fosston. On Thursday, they went to Fargo and visited Kenneth Emerson, Bruce and JoAnn Emerson, and Mindy Olson. On the way back home they visited Hazel Couhoro of Dilworth. On Saturday, they drove to Langby and got in on a 90th birthday party for Marion Bulock. On Monday, Elaine Noss of Embarrass and Lois Grover from Chicago visited Effie.

Melvin Christiansen of Winger was in Gully last week, the message he brought to us was not good! Melvin and his wife Carrie (Weine) Christiansen's only son had passed away on Tuesday Oct. 28th at Altru Hospital, Grand Forks. Ron attended rural school near Gully and later near Winger and graduated from Crookston Agricultural School. Ron worked and lived in various places during his life time including Grand Forks, Duluth, Rapid City, South Dakota, and Michigan. Melvin was in Gully to make arrangements for Ron's burial at Lund Church Cemetery. Melvin said "Now we'd like to bring Ron back home". On Saturday Nov. 1st funeral services for Ron where held at Calvary Lutheran Church at Winger and then Ron, age 60 made his last trip to Gully and is resting near his Grandparents Iduls and Hilda Christiansen and Ole and Laura Weine.

Arnold and Sanna Brovold visited at the Evelyn Hanson Home at Clearbrook on Saturday afternoon. We also helped Evelyn celebrate her birthday, she received many nice and useful gifts. Others there that afternoon were Caroline Rindahl, Harry and Nora Hanson, Heather Sawyer, Mike Davis from Winnipeg. Mike is presently a student at UND in Grand Forks. Evelyn served a good lunch including birthday cake.

The American Legion Auxiliary met on Tuesday evening, Nov. 4th. Nancy Lee called the meeting to order since neither the Secretary nor Treasurer were there, we didn't have their reports. Discussion on who could and should belong to the Auxiliary was brought up. We'd like to get more members. We sent a "get well" card to Eileen Erlandson and a "thank you" card to Fosston's Auxiliary. We hope to meet at one o'clock on Dec. 15th to pack Christmas Cheer baskets. We need to pack sixteen Baskets this year.

Willis Emerson left for his home in Wisconsin after visiting his sister Effie Handy for a week. Curtis Emerson from Wolverton spent from Tuesday to Friday at Effie's. Maja, Michelle and Marci visited with Grandma Effie on Sunday afternoon. Norma Emerson is home from the hospital and is doing quite well after a hip replacement. We hope for a satisfactory recovery for you Norma!

REGULAR BOARD MEETING

S.D.S.C. Conference Room A

A Regular Board Meeting of Independent School District #564 was held on Monday, October 27, 1997, at 7:00 p.m. in Conference Room A of the School District Service Center.

The following Board members were present: Carl Clark, Jean Larson, Cheryl Lee, Orris Twomey and Steve Young. Also present was Dr. Jerry Robicheau, Superintendent of Schools.

Chairperson Carl Clark called the meeting to order and Clerk Jean Larson established that a quorum was present.

A motion was made by C. Lee and seconded by J. Larson to approve the agenda as amended. Motion carried unanimously.

Board members were asked to commit to attend the MSBA Annual Leadership Conference in Minneapolis on January 14-16. An inservice of the Board will be scheduled during that time also.

The following were recognized for their sponsorship of the tailgate parties at the Prowler football games held during the season: KTRF Radio Staff, Hartz Foods, Pepsi, Erl's Market, Bridgeman's and SuperValu.

Franklin Middle School administrators Glenn Chiodo and Chris Mills updated the Board on changes taking place at Franklin this year, specifically those activities and programs that have been implemented to change the climate at the school. Staff, parents and the public have noted a much warmer, more positive atmosphere. Changes have included the implementation of the P.O.P.S. (Power of Positive Students) Program which designates students of the week, month and trimester. Chris indicated they have started publishing a weekly newsletter, one instrument they are using to increase communications. Chris talked about Mary Follett having done some painting in the commons area which has created a warmer atmosphere in the building. It was also noted that the weight room was open for the first time tonight and that the phy ed teachers will be looking at ways of incorporating that facility into their curriculum. Other initiatives have been the Student Council becoming more active with the naming of Bob Stenson as Advisor, establishing team time for core teachers which has resulted in more activities, reward days, and student interventions taking place before problems get worse, and expansion of the after school program. It was also noted that the majority of parents feel the use of uniforms in the phy ed program has been a positive change. Glenn talked about the successes of the School Within a School program which has been established to accommodate those students who are struggling academically but do not qualify for special ed services. Glenn also noted that the Building Leadership Team has again taken an active role in what's happening at Franklin. Glenn commended Chris for his leadership in these initiatives and the resulting positive attitude in the building. Superintendent Robicheau commended Glenn for all the time he has put in at Franklin to bring about these changes.

Members Cheryl Lee and Steve Young reported on behalf of the PER Committee noting they heard reports from the Phy Ed and Business Technology Curriculum Committees. The Phy Ed Committee reported on their use of heart monitoring devices by students in their classes. Business Technology reported they are working on their outcomes and are recommending that keyboarding be moved to a lower grade level. They also noted frustration with the outdated technology with which they have been working.

Member Steve Young reported on the MSBA Phase III Orientation Session he attended in Detroit Lakes last week. TEACHING KIDS TO NEVER TAKE DRUGS
Along With Violence Prevention!

Craig Mattson
DARE Instructor

How do you avoid pressure to take drugs?

"By learning to say no," said Cathy Erickson.

What do you say when someone encourages to try some drugs?

"No thanks," said Nathan Browning. "Drugs are stupid."

"Avoid it and walk away," said Melissa Skjerven.

DESCRIPTION OF THE DARE PROGRAM

PURPOSE: The DARE curriculum for middle/junior high school was developed by the Los Angeles Unified School district for use by law enforcement officers/deputies and educators to reduce drug abuse and violence among youth in their early teens. The emphasis of D.A.R.E., to be Safe and Free From Drugs and Violence is to provide or reinforce the information and skills to enable students to resist pressure and other influences in making their personal choices. In addition, the lessons focus on helping students manage their feelings of anger and resolve conflicts without causing harm to themselves or others and without resorting to violence or the use of alcohol and drugs. Continuing emphasis is also directed toward helping students develop the skills and qualities needed to achieve good character and citizenship.

From an administrative point of view, this instructional guide has been designed to assist school district administrators and teachers in working cooperatively with their law enforcement agencies in the planning and implementation of a program of drug abuse resistance education and violence prevention for students in middle/junior high school. The DARE curricular program is designed to help achieve America's educational goal for the year 2000. Every school in America will be safe, drug-free, and violence-free and will offer a disciplined environment conducive to learning.

ORGANIZATION: The instruction consists of a series of ten lessons on social skills and violence prevention strategies to be taught cooperatively by the officer/deputy and the classroom teacher. The lessons and activities were designed to be implemented as an instructional block of ten days in a required course, such as health science, social studies, or some other appropriate academic subject.

The lessons taught by the law enforcement officer/deputy extend and reinforce the instructional content on substance abuse prevention being taught by the regular classroom teacher. The classroom teacher should maintain a supportive role in classroom management while the officer is teaching and should incorporate DARE program participation by students as an integral part of the students' final evaluation.

School Dist. 564 begins to add staff

Monday, School District 564 authorized administration to post for three 6.5 hour kindergarten educational assistants at Challenger. The additional positions are directly related to the passing of the levy referendum said Superintendent Jerry Robicheau.

Robicheau said that whenever the district does something that is directly related to the passing of the levy referendum he will point it out to the board. This is one of the first actions taken by the board that directly affects the adult to student ratio in the district. Robicheau said the adult to student ratio in kindergarten was 25 to 1. He said that as staff continue their planning, they will be looking at where to reduce the adult to student ratio in other classes.

Monday evening, School District 564 began its review of policies regarding hazing and harassment and violence.

The district has had a harassment and violence policy in place for many years. Periodically the policy is reviewed. The policy discussed Monday night included a change in relation to reporting procedures. The policy calls for violations to be reported to the District Human Rights Officer, who is Frank Hanenbuck. The old policy did not include a provision listing who to report to if the human rights officer was absent.

Whether district personnel were reporting violations of the policy was immediately called into question. Without going into specific details a parent in the audience said she had had three experiences involving her children where policies were not followed. "What you print and do are two different things," she said.

The parent said she had communicated her concerns with the business officer and members of the board, and felt that the problems had been resolved — "sort of."

Harry Nelson, business officer for the district, said he had talked with the superintendent [illegible] and that the matter [illegible] taken lightly.

Board members and the superintendent Jerry Robicheau said policies were included in orientation for new staff. They noted that it's possible the staff involved were not aware of the policy or did not understand the policy.

According to the district's policy on harassment and violence, it is the policy of the district to maintain a learning and working environment that is free from religious, racial or sexual harassment and violence. The district prohibits any form of religious, racial or sexual harassment and violence. The policy is a six-page document which defines harassment and violence, reporting procedures, investigation and school district actions. Information provided board members also included a two page reporting form.

The school board is also looking at a new policy on hazing which is required by Minnesota Statute. The purpose of the policy is to maintain a safe learning environment for students and staff that is free from hazing. Hazing activities of any type are inconsistent with the educational goals of the district and are prohibited at all times. The three page document sets forth definitions, reporting procedures and school district action. It also includes a single page of examples.

Ray Lunde of Brady Martz and Associates appeared before the council to present his audit report. Lunde provided a quick review of the balance sheet and reporting system. Lunde said he was glad to see that the district did not sell certificates of indebtedness last year and that fund balances were growing. He noted that the per pupil unit fund balance had grown from $532 per pupil unit to $660 per pupil unit. The district has been as low as $200 per pupil unit. Lunde said he would like to see it increase to $880 per pupil unit.

BSU president is looking to the future

M. James Bensen, president of Bemidji State University (BSU), expounded on the role of education in a rapidly changing world at a luncheon meeting with Thief River Falls government, education and organization leaders Friday, November 21, at the Best Western Inn.

Prior to Dr. Bensen's talk, a review of the BSU full-tuition scholarship program was presented by Sue Johnson, a graduate of Marshall County Central high school in Newfolden, who is a participant in the program.

To qualify for the program, applicants must graduate from high school in the top 10 percent of their class, earn an ACT score of 28 or higher, submit a 500-word essay and visit the campus for a personal interview. Extra-curricular activity participation is also considered.

The individual scholarships are renewable for up to four years and provide tuition payments worth approximately $10,000 to students who maintain eligibility through a 3.5 grade point average for the full four years.

Johnson is in her third year of the program and said an organization has been formed at BSU for interaction among full tuition participants. "Sometimes it's hard to complain to your friends about getting a B in a class," she said.

Introducing Johnson, Dr. Bensen and other BSU personnel in attendance was Dr. David M. Tiffany, vice president for university advancement.

Dr. Bensen commented on the close working relationship BSU has

He spoke to a luncheon gathering of community government and organization leaders and participated that evening in a meeting of the BSU Alumni Association.

BSU president is looking to the future with Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls and other two-year colleges to facilitate two-plus-two transfer programs.

"We have come to realize that we need to reach out not only to these two-year colleges and their students but to reach out in partnership with other schools, businesses and industry in the area," he said.

Referring to BSU as the "knowledge resource of the North," Dr. Bensen said that the university works well beyond its established classroom program. By the end of July this past summer, he said, BSU had conducted 78 workshops and seminars to provide information to groups from the area.

He also commented on the campus located along Lake Bemidji, stating that it is a beautiful location. In the winter when temperatures are far below zero, he said, students can put on their shorts and move freely from building to building on campus through the interconnecting tunnel system.

Noting that change has already been rapid and extensive in the field of education, Dr. Bensen said that of some 4,700 students which BSU had enrolled in the past year, one in 10 earn their education through interactive television and other technological means without ever stepping on campus.

Emphasizing that businesses that grow are knowledge based, he said that only 16 of the 100 largest companies in the United States in 1900 still remain today. He also commented on the advances of technology and its utilization, noting that computers today are capable of making a billion calculations per second.

In a presentation to medical staff members from Mayo Clinic locations recently, Dr. Bensen said he told the doctors that they are leading the way and that is a dangerous place to be. As they strive to maintain that position, he said, there may be other factors they overlook.

One of the keys to the Mayo Clinic success is its ability to diagnose, he said. Using the current availability of computers and networking, the world's medical knowledge could be combined into a computer pool and accessed instantly.

Dr. Bensen presented a scenario which might be possible a few years from now. A person not feeling well at 1 a.m. could get in the car with a urine sample and drive down to the local discount store. There he or she would find three booths—a photo booth, a rocking horse and a medical booth.

At the medical booth the person could put a twenty-dollar bill in the slot, deposit the urine sample, do a finger stick and blood smear, record temperature and blood pressure and in 15 seconds have a printout of the composite diagnosis made from 15 billion calculations of the combined knowledge in the medical pool.

Dr. Bensen and others from the university also participated Friday evening in an alumni association event at the Best Western Inn.

Correction is noted in story on Bjorkman's

Failure to make a correction in a story on the Bjorkman's store history and closing in the November 22 issue of the Northern Watch has resulted in confusion for readers.

At the time of writing, we were unsure if Cliff and Shirley Swanson had leased or purchased half of the Bjorkman's store for their Paul's Shoes operation and wrote "leased (sold?)" in the article with the intention of removing one or the other terms.

The correction to indicate that the Swansons had indeed purchased their part of the store was not made prior to publication. The Times-Northern Watch regrets the oversight and any confusion it may have caused.

Family Caregivers Week observed November 23-29

by Kathi Carlson
The Times Reporter

As we age, one of the most difficult issues we face is the loss or partial loss of independence. For most of us, the fear of becoming a burden to our family members is stronger than the fear of death.

Despite the grim picture of far-flung, uncaring families, a 1993 Gallup poll revealed some rather heart-warming statistics. Eighty-five percent of the people surveyed think it's an adult child's responsibility to care for his or her parents as they grow older. Eighty-five percent also said that they would consider asking their parents to move in with them if they could no longer live alone.

Long-term care is the range of services that addresses the health, personal care and social needs of individuals who need assistance in caring for themselves. The specific site and nature of this long-term care vary according to individual circumstances. While nursing home care comprises the most easily recognized form of long-term care, home care and community services accommodate a much larger percentage of the population.

Today, one in seven Americans cares for a loved one with a chronic illness. In twenty years that number is expected to be one in five. As America ages, the number of family caregivers will increase dramatically. People over the age of 85 are the fastest growing population segment.

Family caregivers are providing a varied number of services which include assisting with personal hygiene, cooking, cleaning, laundry, handling finances, giving shots and other medications, changing dressings and intravenous tubes, running errands to stores and businesses and being a source of information to the person being cared for and other family members and friends.

Most caretakers in family situations are not trained but find themselves in a caregiving situation suddenly and unexpectedly. Often they simply do the best they can while relying on experience, intuition and the advice of others.

About 75 percent of caregivers are women–usually wives, daughters or daughters-in-law who often forego employment–about one-third are employed–and other familial obligations to provide primary care to a relative. The average age of informal caregivers is 57 years.

Because of the trend toward later parenthood, many Americans will find themselves joining what demographers have dubbed the "sandwich generation"–people who are still raising their own children but must also shoulder the emotional and financial burdens of caring for an elderly parent.

With 75 percent of the caregiving responsibilities falling on women, after spending an average of 17 years raising their children, women can expect to devote another 18 years to helping their parents.

Older individuals are often caregivers themselves, and it is estimated that 12 percent of the caregiving population is age 65 or older. At least 20 percent of the nation's informal caregiving force consists of the "young-old"–those 60 and older–serving the "old-old"–those 75 and older.

There are many reasons why care is provided by family and friends in the home. Love for the person is probably the most frequent reason and the desire to provide care in familiar surroundings.

Often, home care is the only option because outside care, if available, is too expensive. Other caregivers are motivated by a sense of obligation, or a fear that no one else can provide quality care.

Many caregivers find the role rewarding, but few will say it's easy. Caregiving can be physically and emotionally stressful for both persons involved. A once independent and proud person may feel helpless and he or she may experience feelings of anger, confusion and fear. For the caregiver, the pressure of a busy schedule can be compounded by feeling inadequate about providing care or preventing pain, by feeling both love and pity for the person being cared for, and by feeling anger at having his or her life consumed by the situation.

While each situation will be unique in some ways, caregivers need to realize that others have already dealt with the problems and emotions they are facing and that they are not alone.

Many caregivers make the mistake of feeling like failures if they can't or don't want to care for their loved ones by themselves.

Eating properly, regular exercise, proper sleep and an occasional break from caregiving responsibilities are important for caregivers. Those who sacrifice their own physical and mental health while assisting loved ones are likely to hasten the day when a run-down condition prevents them from being able to provide any care at all.

Caregivers need assistance from family, friends and community and professional resources while bearing the responsibilities of providing care.

The Northwest Area Agency on Aging, a program of the Northwest Regional Development Commission, recognizes that caregivers need help and support to be able to continue doing their important work. It encourages family caregivers to seek support and respite care so they can continue to help their family members live as independently as possible.

Information about caregiver services is available by contacting the Senior LinkAGE Line at 1-800-333-2433. The line is simple to use with a touch-tone telephone. By punching in the zip code of the community in which one resides, one is put in touch with a representative who will provide information about the services offered a particular area.

November 23-29 is National Family Caregiver Week. Across the country, as many as five million older individuals are receiving care each day by more than 22 million informal caregivers.

These family caregivers provide more than $300 billion worth of free health care services each year and form a safety net that literally holds the American health care system together.

As citizens, organizations and businesses recognize the valuable contributions that family caretakers make to our families and communities, take a moment to consider how this applies to you.

If you are being cared for by a family caregiver, say thank you. Let them know that what they are doing for you is appreciated.

If you know or are related to a caregiver, show appreciation and offer assistance. Too often caregiving responsibilities fall on only one member of a family and are taken for granted by the others.

Finally, if you are a family caretaker remember to take care of yourself. Take advantage of the resources available to help you. Most of all, remember that what you are doing is very important.

125 take part in open house at Agassiz Refuge

Despite rainy and cool weather, 125 people participated in the open house at Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge in observance of National Wildlife Refuge Week in October.

Five area organizations contributed funds to purchase food and refreshments served during the open house. They included the Agassiz Audubon Society, Pennington County Sportsman's Club, Fourtown-Grygla Sportsmen Club and Thief River Falls chapters of Ducks Unlimited and the Minnesota Deer Hunters Association.

Agassiz recognized its 60-year anniversary as a national wildlife refuge and distributed portfolios, posters, bookmarks, bags and maps to people attending the open house.

Prizes donated by the Tamarac National Wildlife Refuge Interpretive Center to the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge Bookshop were distributed as follows:

Arthur Mateo, Middle River, bird identification book; Edith Blahauvietz, Thief River Falls, Agassiz moose T-shirt; Eleanor Swanson, Thief River Falls, hand-carved and painted moose; Sander Toresen, Greenbush, Valkommen moose platter; and Larry Schenken, Sewickley, PA, Valkommen iron wolf platter.

The Agassiz refuge staff thanks all who attended and made the open house a successful event.

Asthma program reaches out to area communities

A new wellness program is bringing a breath of fresh air to asthma sufferers in the area. North Dakota State University's College of Pharmacy and Dakota Clinic have teamed up to bring important information directly to the patients.

After holding asthma seminars in Fargo for the past year, organizers took their message on the road for the first time, putting on a presentation in Thief River Falls on September 30. About 40 people had pre-registered, but 72 actually attended.

The outstanding turnout is a strong signal that the public wants to know more about the disease. "Some people drove 30 to 40 miles to come to the program that night," said Mary Kuzel, assistant professor of pharmacy practice and clinical pharmacist in managed care at Dakota Clinic. "Asthma is a chronic disease. Although there is no cure, there are very good medications to control it. There needs to be good education with the public sector to know about the medications, like inhaled corticosteroids, that we typically use to control the disease. Educating the patient is certainly a way to increase their quality of life."

The difficult thing about the disease is that many people are not aware they have it. "Sometimes the only symptom you have is a cough," Kuzel said. "There are certain things that can trigger it, such as allergies or colds. You can be relatively healthy 10 months out of the year but be in pretty extreme distress when you get a viral infection like a cold. Asthma is under-diagnosed."

The information program came about through the work of Kuzel, Pharm D. resident Rick Melhye, Dakota Clinic pulmonary specialist Dr. Don Matthees, and respiratory therapist Terri Newton. Melhye's residency is funded jointly by NDSU and the Dakota Medical Foundation, and it is intended to address community wellness issues.

They did lengthy research before holding the Thief River Falls session. "We talked to most of the pharmacists in Pennington County," Kuzel said. "We also met with all the nurses and physicians in the community before we actually met with the patients. That way we were all on the same page for what the goals of the program would be."

During the four-hour session, patients were told about the disease, effective medications, what to avoid and what makes it worse. NDSU pharmacy students showed patients how to correctly use the different types of inhalers. They also helped the patients master peak-flow meters, so they can increase their medication at home if needed. "The program really helps the patients take control of their own disease," Kuzel said.

The patients receive valuable information and, at the same time, the pharmacy students learn an important lesson in pharmaceutical care. "It is an excellent way to incorporate students into a program where they can have an impact on community health," Kuzel said. "They can get out of the traditional role of what you would think a pharmacist would do."

The program's commitment to the Thief River Falls area will be ongoing. The health care providers will be available to the participants for questions and suggestions. There also will be another session in the spring for children in that area who suffer from asthma.

Kuzel said a similar effort will be made next spring in Park Rapids.

Roseau Area Writers Workshop notes recently published writers

At the first meeting of the season, members of the Roseau Area Writer's Workshop (RAWW) heard success stories about a number of area writers.

Florence Ferrier of Pitt announces that two of her short stories have been published and a third piece has been accepted. "Neighbors in Disguise" and "Faithful Over Little," true-life experiences, appear in God's Vitamin C for the Spirit of Women. "No More Tears" will appear in God's Vitamin C for the Hurting Spirit, due to come out this month. The books are compiled by Kathy Miller in the style of Chicken Soup for the Soul.

Rudy Billberg of Roseau also had one of his stories from his book In the Shadow of Eagles (Alaska Northwest Books, 1992) included in an anthology Last New Land: Stories of Alaska published in 1997.

The work of another author with area roots appears in Last New Land: Stories of Alaska. Ashana, a historical novel, was written by Ethel Brandt Roesch and her husband Paul Roesch. Ethel grew up in Roseau. The Roeschs, who live on the West Coast, have another lengthy manuscript–a trilogy about Viet Nam– ready for publication under the pen name E.P. Roesch.

Last New Land: Stories of Alaska, donated by Inga Morris, is available at the Roseau Public Library.

"A Mother's Miracle," a novelette by Connie Colson Wells of Salol, is one of three stories included in A Mother's Love published by Multnomah/Palisades, 1997. The company also published Connie's two Christian Romances, Cherish in 1995 and Chase the Dream in 1996. Since becoming a mother, Connie's priorities and writing schedules have changed, but she has recently submitted a new manuscript for consideration, and she is half-way into another book.

RAWW also applauded three other authors who published works in 1996. Marnie's Kitchen Shortcuts by Marnie Swedberg of Warroad was published by St. Martins Press. Alvin Johnson of Warroad self-published A Time to Fish and a Time to Dry Nets. Another self-published book, Pioneer's Progress, was written by Vivian Eggen of Wannaska.

It was noted that Up Home–The Land and the People, RAWW's book published for the 1995 city and county centennial, is available for a special gift-giving price of $15, a $3 savings, during the months of November and December. Proceeds from the sale of this book benefit the public library.

The Roseau County Historical Society also has an array of local non-fiction books including Roseau County Heritage (1992) and County Centennial Book (1995). The books may be purchased from Wahlberg's Jewelry and Gifts or the Roseau County Museum.

The works of about three dozen Roseau area writers were included in the second annual literary supplement to the Roseau Times-Region in October. The group concluded that 1997 has been a very productive year for area writers.

Rachel Marshall joins Concordia's production of Godspell

Rachel Marshall was a member of the crew of the November theatre production of "Godspell: this generation" at Concordia College in Moorhead.

Marshall, a junior majoring in theatre, is the daughter of Everett and Dianne Marshall, Thief River Falls.

"Godspell: this generation" is an adaptation of the original "Godspell" of the 1970s by Stephen Schwartz and John Michael Tebelak. The play, consisting of 23 cast members, develops new characters and ideas that are more modern, as opposed to the clown figures used in the original 1970 hit production. The performances were November 13-16 and November 20-22 in the Frances Frazier Comstock Theatre as part of the college's 1997-98 theatre season themed "Voices of the Common People."

ON MY MIND

Temporary Block

People often ask me if I ever run out of ideas for writing this column. Usually I'm able to say that "the ideas just keep popping into my head." This week the machine malfunctioned; the ideas quit popping. The good ones, anyway. I believe that's officially called "writer's block."

So I turned to some suggestions of other writers on how to deal with this temporary condition. (At least I hope it's temporary.)

The first idea was to employ listing, outlining or free writing to keep my words flowing. I started on a subject about how angry I am at some drivers I've experienced lately. I don't ordinarily vent my anger in this column, but I value my safety and undented car.

Returning home from Challenger school after picking up my son, driving the speed limit, I've been passed (on two separate occasions) on Pennington Avenue by people obviously in a hurry. That stretch of road is already extremely busy with buses, parents and children after school. No engagement can be that important for someone to be speeding and passing other cars, especially in town.

That's about how far I got when I realized that this subject couldn't support 1,000 words without me sounding like a whiner. I trashed that subject (even though I still have strong feelings about it) and went on to something else.

How about Thanksgiving? Again, nothing new and fresh magically popped out of my computer keys. I couldn't think of anything creative to say about turkey, family gatherings, the best Thanksgiving or the worst Thanksgiving (stranded in Hebron, ND with a stalled car).

The next tip on dealing with writer's block was to sift through my old notebooks and journals looking for titles, phrases or concepts that I could use for new material. As I organized three year's worth of columns into page protectors, I thought maybe I could use "The Best of Kim Quade."

Then I questioned whether or not I had a "best." Who would decide this? Maybe it would be unethical to re-run something previously written by me? Next tip, please.

I next tried word association (my version anyway) to spark an idea, hoping one word would trigger an entertaining idea. I played at least 20 games of computer Scrabble and the only outcome was that I now know that the word "maquis" means "a zone of shrubby plants, chiefly evergreens, growing in the area around the Mediterranean, used as a hiding place by fugitives."

Reading other writers' works oftentimes helps overcome writers' block. Nothing came to mind after taking two days to read that 200-page courtroom thriller so I got serious and read Erma Bombeck and Dave Barry. Even Erma didn't ignite a spark as she usually does. Dave Barry's works make my head spin; he's the king of exaggeration. Every now and then I wish my brain worked like his because he's funny. Unfortunately, my personal experiences aren't as thrilling as his.

After nothing humorous engaged itself, I started thinking self-help. I've been trying to digest "The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People" by Stephen Covey. I began listening to the cassette tapes while walking on the treadmill but didn't get far enough in the program to make any sense out of a column.

Another suggestion to help overcome writers' block was to take a walk, do something physical. True to the suggestion I bundled up and headed outside. I walked and waited for the inspiration to flow into my fingertips which were now frozen in my mittens. The only thoughts I had were those not suited for the newspaper.

One of the last ideas was to always write down my great ideas – where ever I am. So don't get angry when I suddenly have a great thought in the grocery check-out line and you're behind me and take a break to write down the great words of wisdom. Just feel good inside that you're helping me overcome my writer's block.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Teresa Friend
Lincoln High School

Turkeys gobble in their cages outside Northern Pride. It's that time of year again. A time to reflect, a time to be thankful, a time to be with loved ones. It is a time when people just let it all go, and all diets are put on hold, as we step forward and begin the official Holiday Season.

Thanksgiving seems to be one of the few holidays that doesn't change year after year. Around the middle of October, the entire family rearranges its November schedule to insert the tradition of Thanksgiving at Aunt Dorothy's house. The day the rest of the country starts their happy rides home for Thanksgiving break, I'm staring out the window on the beginning of our annual 16 hour drive to Michigan.

After tedious hours of staring out the window and picking fights with my brother, we arrive at our destination. Smiles and squeals of excitement greet us at our car doors, and we drowsily embrace each one. The excitement carries on for the first ten minutes, then dies down to casual conversation and back to back comparison of heights between cousins. A half year of experiences passes in a series of minutes. After that, it is pretty much everyone for himself.

Additional family members collect over the next day and a half, and the sleeping bags accumulate to stitch a quilt over the basement floor.

The first morning, I step outside as my uncle heads into the driveway, and I stare at the lifeless lump that remains strapped to the roof of his car. Not one of my favorite pastimes! My uncle cuts the deer loose and with help from Dad, lugs it into the garage, where it will be prepared to take its useful place in Grandpa's sausage. The rest of the day trickles by, and we hit our havens late.

I awake Thanksgiving morning and tiptoe through the sleeping mounds. I peak through the doorway of the kitchen and watch my grandma and aunt scurry about to prepare the Thanksgiving feast. I bury myself in the scents of basting turkey dancing with the smoky incense of the burning fireplace. Later that morning, my cousin, Eric, and I wash our hands and join my grandpa and uncle in the garage. Eric helps to pack meat into the sausage press while I have the entertaining job of flushing out the pig intestines. Yum.

I then slip a shiny, but clean, intestine over the tube connected to the sausage press and tie a knot in the end. Grandpa turns the crank, and Eric and I can't help but laugh at the squishy sound as the meat squeezes into the casing. Every few seconds the crank stops, and my uncle twists the sausage to form the links. My brother then carries the sausages to the wobbly card table and ties each end tightly. They are then carried to the smoke house, hung, and left to flavor in the gray cloud. This is the last we will see of them until Christmas.

Eric and I form the left-over meat into patties and watch them sizzle over the garage stoves flame. They make a great snack while endlessly awaiting the long desired feast.

As the hours roll on, every detail is set in place by the hurrying hens of the household. The whirling of the beaters, the clanking of pots and pans, and the constant opening and shutting of the oven door create a racket that echoes throughout the entire house. I knock a few spoons onto the wooden floor, creating a diversion for Eric to steal a few home-made pickles from the crystal dish, cunningly avoiding the classic "You'll spoil you appetite" speech.

We have waited all day! Finally, the little red timer pops up, and the men begin to quibble over who has to carve the turkey. Last minute preparations are made as my aunt shouts a ten minute warning through the house. I sit at the counter and entertainingly watch my grandpa carve the turkey and listen to his constant comments of how nicely the electric knife buzzing in his hand works. When he was young, they didn't have electricity. The meal, like every year, is wonderful. The potatoes melt in my mouth, and the corn is milky and sweet. The turkey is a little dry, but that's ok. (I should have stopped eating halfway through the meal.)

The younger cousins sit in the kitchen and at the counter, while the adults take their place along the table in the dining room. Conversation is subtle. "Please pass the rolls!" "How much salt did you put in here?" "This is corn from our garden..." I can still hear Grandpa talking about the electric knife. It all goes perfectly, except for a few cranberry stains on the new white tablecloth (I'm sure she'll get them out.) After dinner, almost all of the men take a nap.

It's a funny thing about Thanksgiving: no matter how much you eat, four hours later, you're starving again. Later that night, the family gathers to play card games in the dining room, a traditional pleasure. Time passes, and we hit the beds late once again. As I maneuver through the nodding mounds, I step on someone. A sharp punch in my left leg lets me know that it was my brother. I climb into my sleeping bag and gaze around at my sleeping cousins. I feel the meaning of Thanksgiving in my heart. Just to be surrounded by the ones that mean the most in my life is all the holiday I need. The next morning, at 4 o'clock, we will all be going our separate ways again, back to our so-called normal lives.

I wonder what new surprises this year will bring? I guess I'll find out. Happy Thanksgiving, Thief River Falls!

ACTIVITIES

Tasty Toast Shapes

Making cinnamon toast is a great way to review the five senses and learn more about shapes. Before toasting the bread, trim the crusts so that each slice is square. When the bread pops out of the toaster, spread with margarine and sprinkle with cinnamon sugar. With a dull plastic knife, cut the toast in half to form two rectangles. Cut each rectangle in half to form two squares! (You can trim to make other shapes as well, use your imagination!) As you carry out the activity, be sure to review the senses. Talk about how the bread looks and feels before and after toasting, how it smells as it toasts, and how it sounds when it pops up. The best part, though, is finding out how it tastes.

PARENTING TIPS

Cold Weather

Most of us stay inside as much as possible when the weather gets cold. Often we do not get as much physical activity as we should. Children as well as adults need some kind of physical activity on a regular basis. In fact as children's muscles and bones grow and develop, they feel a strong urge to move, climb, jump or run. In the winter when we are inside so much this "urge" can cause problems.

On those days when your children are rather "wild," won't cooperate, or are fighting with each other, it could be that they are in need of some physical activity. If your children have an opportunity for regular physical activity you should also notice that they eat and sleep better. So how can we provide physical activity when it is cold out? Following are some suggestions:

1. Whenever the temperature is warm enough, bundle up and take your child outside to run, jump and climb, even if it is only for 15 minutes.

2. When you can't go outside, try these ideas inside:

•Play a game of "catch me" by crawling on the floor. Take turns. Sometimes you chase and sometimes have your child chase you. Remember that you always set up limits and rules as to when and where this active play will take place in your house.

•Make an obstacle course. Use things in your home to go over, under, around and through.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk about the weather outside, the cold temperature, the wind or the snow. Look at the thermometer to see what it says. Talk about what kind of clothes are needed outdoors at different temperatures.

SPEAKING OF

Sherry LaCoursiere

...Why in November?

Who do I contact about changing a holiday? Thanksgiving is a wonderful holiday, but it is just too late in the year and I would like to try to get it changed to early October.

Yes, Thanksgiving is a fine holiday, when families get together to partake of the fruits of the land, celebrate a bountiful harvest, and give thanks for what they have and for one another. It is a time to eat Grandma's stuffing, Mom's pumpkin pie, and Aunty's sweet potatoes, and remember other memorable Thanksgiving feasts. It is a time when those we love come from near and far to celebrate with us at our groaning tables.

But - Thanksgiving is too close to Christmas. Stores are already stocked with gifts and trimmed in red and green; most of us are already working on our Christmas gift list, trying to remember where we put last year's Christmas decorations, planning our Christmas menu and trying to write on a few Christmas carols, and our minds are gearing up for the busy Christmas season. The joy of Thanksgiving is lost in the pre-Christmas bustle as each year the Christmas season takes over more and more of November. This is not fair to such an important holiday as Thanksgiving.

Frankly, I am chomping at the bit to get out my hidden Christmas decorations, start playing carols and put up a tree. I am sick and tired of the color orange and don't want to look at any more leaves or acorns or corn. If it weren't for Thanksgiving coming up I would have all of my fall stuff packed away and be rummaging happily in my Christmas boxes.

I know the first Thanksgiving celebrated a bountiful harvest and marked the end of the growing season for the early settlers, but the timing just doesn't make sense, especially up here in the north. Our gardens are long gone, the produce is harvested and stocked away in pantry and freezer, as is the wild game that was bagged by the hunters, and there is snow on the hard ground. Our bountiful harvest has come and gone, so why are we celebrating it so late? Don't ask me why. I think some southern gentleman must have chosen the date for Thanksgiving, because a northerner would have known better. We aren't anywhere near fall any more here in the north country - we have already started our winter.

Early October would be a wonderful time to celebrate Thanksgiving and our bountiful harvests. In October, the sun shines brightly, the nights can be frosty, and the very air seems filled with the heady scents of fall, something like harvested grains and freshly-baked bread, ripe apples, purple grapes, freshly-dug potatoes and carrots, drying onions and the musty smell of ripe pumpkins and squash. October smells like food - November smells like winter.

How many times have we celebrated a blizzard along with our Thanksgiving? I can remember many Thanksgivings when the snow was flying and the temperatures were below zero, never mind the wind chill. Bundling up in one's warmest winter wear to go visiting on a holiday that is celebrating harvest time is just ridiculous. I can accept bundling up at Christmas - it is to be expected, since it is the holiday of snow and winter - but bundling up for Thanksgiving just doesn't seem right.

And another thing, why is Thanksgiving on a Thursday? Many of us have to return to work on Friday and it just seems so strange that it is one of the only holidays that is always on one particular day. I could understand if it was a set date and changed from year to year, like Christmas and New Year, but always on Thursday? If it is to be on Thursday, then it should be a two-day holiday so that travelers have time to spend with their families and we all have a chance to get over our Thanksgiving feasts.

Anyway, if anyone knows who I should write to get the date for Thanksgiving changed, let me know.

Deer Park Garden Club meets

Helen Chervestad and Lana Nelson were hostesses for the afternoon workshop meeting of the Deer Park Garden Club held recently at the Chervestad home.

Together the group made a wreath which will be displayed at the State Horticultural Center for Northern Gardening. Each member brought a tangerine, and roses were made from the tangerine peel and dried in a dehydrator. The dried roses were glued to a grapevine wreath along with bay leaves, curly jute and a grapefruit skin ribbon. State rules requested that all natural materials were used for the volunteer project.

LaVonne Radniecki won the door prize for having the most seeds in her tangerine.

President Ethel Wiseth conducted a brief business meeting.

Four new members were noted–Ruth Liedberg, Deloris Bendickson and Donna and Greg Radniecki.

LaVonne Radniecki previewed the program material for the year book which was transcribed by Ethel Wiseth. Club members Becca Rae and John Boccaccio of Apache Junction, AZ will publish the year books. LaVonne offered to plan and design the cover.

The group sang the birthday song in honor of Helen Chervestad's 73rd birthday. LaVonne brought a decorated birthday cake for the luncheon.

The Christmas party will be held on December 8 at OW's in Goodridge. Husbands and guests are welcome. The party will start at 6:30 p.m. and everyone will order from the menu.

Guests at the November meeting included Annabelle Chervestad and Karen Mallea of Trail, owner of Green Earth Nursery.

New outdoors program to serve families of people with disabilities

Applications are being accepted for Project FIT (Families Integrating Together), a federally funded outdoor recreation project for families with members who have disabilities. Ten families will be selected to participate in the project's first events, and they will be notified by December 12. Any family that includes a member with a disability may apply to participate in Project FIT.

PACER Center and Wilderness Inquiry, located in Minneapolis and serving all of Minnesota, are collaborating in Minnesota to launch the new three-year project. The US Department of Education's Office of Special Education and Rehabilitation (OSERS) funds the program. FIT's primary goal is to expand opportunities for families of persons with disabilities, so they can enjoy the benefits of integrated outdoor recreation.

Among five project offerings are approximately 30 hours of outdoor skills training; four one-day outdoor skills workshops to promote family involvement in activities such as canoeing, kayaking, dog sledding and camping; a five-day outdoor adventure planned, organized and implemented by participating families with support from Wilderness Inquiry and PACER; and networks established among families for common recreation interests and mutual support.

For more information about FIT or an application, contact Jane Johnson at PACER Center (612) 827-2966 or (800) 53-PACER or Ellen Lock at Wilderness Inquiry (612) 379-3858 or (800) 728-0719.

Food shelf to benefit from Hugo's plan

Thief River Falls community food shelf will benefit from the Scan-Away-Hunger program which will continue through December 27 at Hugo's Supermarket in Thief River Falls. The program is also conducted in other Hugo's stores.

Persons who wish to contribute to the food shelf may pick up a coupon at the checkout counter and have it scanned through with grocery purchases. The $2.47 face value of the coupon collected by the store will be combined with other coupon donations and turned over to the food shelf.

The $2.47 amount is based on the cost to feed a needy person breakfast, lunch and dinner at the Grand Forks Mission for one day. The mission will receive the donations at Grand Forks and East Grand Forks stores. Donations to the Crookston store will go to the Crookston Care and Share Shelter meals program.

Cellular 2000 adds sites to service area

Cellular 2000/Rural Cellular Corporation added six additional cellular sites to its Minnesota operational service area during the third quarter of 1997.

The Menahga, Red Lake Falls, Perham, Deer River, South Bemidji and Brandon cellular towers will improve cellular coverage for those six rural communities and the surrounding communities. And on November 20 a cellular site was completed in downtown Roseau.

It has taken just 14 years for the number of cellular phone customers in the United States to reach 50 million compared with 77 years for landline phones to reach that number of households and businesses.

Odd Fellows loan education funds available to students

Education loan funds are available to relatives of active members of Odd Fellow or Rebekah Lodges, according to Larry Molstad of Thief River Falls, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Minnesota, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Loans available total $10,000 over a four-year period—$2,000 for freshman, $2,500 each for sophomore and junior and $3,000 for senior years. Loans are also made to students at trade and technical schools with a maximum of $3,000 for one year of study.

All applicants must be attending an accredited college or university full-time or more and maintain at least a C average. Students at two or four-year colleges must complete one grading period in college before receiving loans.

Interest rate is five percent. Interest begins the day the check is mailed from the Odd Fellows office to the student and paid once each year by July 1 while the student is in school. Payments begin three months after graduation at the rate of $35 per month plus interest the first year, $50 per month plus interest the second year and $75 per month the third year and until the loan is paid in full. The loan may be paid in full at any time without penalty.

Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I received a mail solicitation asking me to sign a petition, and also send a donation, to help change part of Social Security. Is this legitimate? Is it of value?

A. There are several private organizations, not associated with the US Government, which request funds to lobby for changes in Social Security and the specific wordings of their solicitations virtually always complies with the law so, yes, these mailings are usually legitimate. Value is in the eye of the beholder so a request for funds from some group may be of value to you and merely "junk mail" to others. However, it is a fact that you are more effective in getting your opinion known by directly contacting your congressman or Senator rather than through a mass mail petition. Also, there is no charge for contacting an elected official.

Q. How long does it take to get a medical decision about whether I can get disability?

A. Disability applications for both Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) are a two step process. Local Social Security office personnel complete non-medical casework such as reviewing earnings records for Social Security or income and resource items for SSI. They do not develop medical issues. Medical decisions are completed by state employees using Social Security guidelines. Clients from Minnesota will have the medical decision made in St. Paul.

There is wide-variation in how long it takes a medical decision to be made but two to three months is commonplace. Some items shortening and lengthening the decision process can include whether or not there is a treating physician, how long it takes to get requested medical records, if a special exam needs to be set up for the client and client cooperation in providing information. Disability applicants are requested to provide medical material which is readily available at no cost to them. They should not request records from their hospital or doctors as Social Security will do so using medical releases.

SPEAKING OF EDUCATION

by Jerry Robicheau
Superintendent
School District 564

Dear Citizens of Independent School District #564,

A BIG, BIG THANK YOU to the residents of Independent School District #564 for your continued commitment to maintaining education as a top priority in this community! It is now incumbent upon the School Board and the administration to be accountable for how those dollars are expended. I will provide a periodic update through this column to the citizens of our school district regarding how those dollars are being expended towards program improvement.

For your information, activities have already begun to address areas that were identified in which we need to have program improvement. First, we have posted and advertised for a Teacher of Agricultural Education. We will be meeting with an Advisory Committee consisting of community members and agribusiness individuals to start discussing what an agricultural program should look like for students. Hopefully, this position will be filled and someone on board before the end of the school year.

Secondly, we have begun to identify where we need to have some educational assistants added, specifically at the elementary level to help our teachers in kindergarten. We will have these paraprofessionals on board as soon as possible.

Third, we are beginning to look at how we can purchase additional and updated textbooks.

Fourth, we are beginning to develop a technology plan for future utilization of technology in instructional programming. That plan will be completed in the next couple of months at which time we will start to develop a budget for technology.

Fifth, each of our buildings is beginning to look at the number of staff necessary to reduce class sizes. These plans will be developed and submitted to the board within the next couple of months. Based on the recommendation to the board, we will then be looking at developing a process of hiring teachers and/or staff to address the class size issue for the 1998-1999 school year.

Sixth, I've also asked the Academic Boosters to begin developing a profile for a Teacher of the Gifted and Talented. As we look at how that program will evolve and what that program will be, we will have extensive community involvement in the process.

Seventh, we have begun the process of developing a comprehensive staff development program that will allow us to make good teachers even better. We have a committee that has been in operation for several years which will now take on the task of how we develop a comprehensive staff development program.

These are just some of the preliminary activities that are currently taking place as they relate to expenditure of the levy dollars. We now know that we will be receiving those dollars. Consequently, we can do some proactive planning. I want to assure the community that there will be a full accounting of these dollars as we develop programs for the students over the course of the next several months.

If at any time you have questions or issues you wish to address or have answered, I would ask that you please contact me and I will return your phone call or letter as soon as possible. We are maintaining a district information line which is 681-8711 ext. 255. If you have any questions regarding the school system or any issues you'd like to address, please call this number and somebody will get back to you as soon as possible with an answer to your question. This line will be in operation for an indefinite period of time. It is a means by which we are attempting to communicate with the residents of Independent School District #564.

It is now a very exciting time in your school district. Again, thank you for your support, for your endorsement and for your commitment to programs for students. Speaking of students, which is our reason for existence, I'd just like to share some information with you. Here are some "did you knows."

Did you know that we have 54 students in our National Honor Society? Did you know that our football team was the Section Academic Champions, which means they achieved an average of a 3.0 grade point average. Did you know that at Franklin we had 226 students on the 4.0 and A-Average Honor Rolls and 140 on the B Honor Roll. This is 62% of the enrollment at Franklin. At Lincoln we had 238 students on the A Honor Roll and 136 on the B Honor Roll, which is 53% of the enrollment at Lincoln.

Did you know that we have 53 students enrolled in Advanced Placement classes at Lincoln? These classes are pre-college enrollment classes. Did you know that we had four students who were semi-finalists in the Emerging Writers Essay Contest sponsored by the College of St. Catherine on Friday, November 14th? These students were Eeva Young, Jessica Krankkala, Beth Olson, and Jenna Tsukichi.

These are just some areas to which I think we need to draw the attention of the community regarding the outstanding things our students are doing. We know we have a great student body, one we can be extremely proud of and that includes Challenger, Franklin, Lincoln and the Area Learning Center! It is for these students that we exist. That's why our doors are open and we must never as a community, as a staff, or as a school district lose sight of the fact that it is students and kids that we're all about.

If there are any issues you wish to bring to my attention, again, please use the district information line to leave your questions and I or someone will get back to you as soon as possible. Again, that number is 681-8711, ext. 255.

School District 564 begins to add staff, looks at policies

Lunde said he had noted a few discrepancies in the reporting system that affects per pupil units. He suggested that staff receive some training.

In summation, Lunde said the board is "definitely taking the district in the right direction." He added that the audit was "good news."

Four students of the Lincoln High School Literary Arts Program made a presentation to the school board Monday night. The four students, Eeva Young, Beth Olson, Jenna Tsukichi, and Jessica Krankkala recently participated in a literary arts competition at St. Catherine's. Eeva placed second, and the other three received honorable mentions. Monday night, sections of their entries were read to the the board. Lorell Dyrud, instructor, and the students, were recognized for their contributions and success.

The school board approved a resolution of Thanks to the Citizens for Quality Education Committee. The resolution states that Citizens Concerned for Quality Education were instrumental in the development of a successful campaign for a levy referendum. The resolution extends the school board's individual and collective gratitude to the members of the committee for all their efforts on behalf of students of ISD 564.

The school board recognized the following: the Northern Expressions of the Arts for its honorable mention academics award from the Minnesota Rural Education Association; Terry Blacklance, minority student services coordinator, for attending the Organization of the Human Rights Conference; donations for the district's Close-Up program from Arctic Cat - $500, McDonald's - $1,594.80, Townsend Printing - $100, Sjoberg's Cable - $25, Forsberg's - $100, Norwest Bank - $100, and Rebekah's club - $25; the Thief River Falls Jaycees for donating $500 to the Boys Golf program; Domino's Pizza which donated $120 from the Halloween promotion for the district's drug education program; donations for the Little Brother/Little Sister program from Heritage Community Center - $200, First National Bank - $66, and AAL Trinity Branch 7984 - $500; Northern American Outdoor Group, which at the suggestion of their employee Rebecca Pluth, donated $100 to the Lincoln High School Scholarship fund.

The following personnel items from the consent agenda were approved: the transfer of Kathy Davis from 6-7 hour EBD educational assistant at Challenger to 5.5 hour pupil program support assistant/playground educational assistant at Challenger, the employment of Angela Simons as minority education tutor for the district, the following extra-curricular assignments for the 1997-98 school year — Jeff Gustafson as assistant eighth grade girls basketball coach, Monica Bartels as high school boys basketball cheerleading advisor, and John Halvorson, assistant high school wrestling coach, the following lane changes effective November 15: Mary Lidlott from BS15 to BS60, Joyce Kapitt from BS60 to BS75, Judy Lindquist from MS to MS15, Elaine McGeary from BS45 to BS60, and MariJo Paschke from BS to BS15, increase the Challenger preschool secretarial position from 150 to 175 days, and increase the ESL teacher from .6 to 1.0 FTE for the remainder of the school year.

The next meeting of the school board has been scheduled for Monday, December 8. A time for that meeting has not been scheduled yet.

The school district's Truth in Taxation hearing will be held 7 p.m. Tuesday, December 2 in the School District Service Center.

Stumpf says stadium debate not over yet

Although the 84-47 House vote against the stadium proposal officially killed the latest stadium bill on November 13, "I'm not convinced that we've heard the last of this issue," says Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Thief River Falls.

Sen. Stumpf said the whole process has been difficult from the beginning and that Minnesota Twins owner Carl Pohlad underestimated public sentiment against providing a huge public subsidy to build a ball park for his team.

"While most people like the Twins and might even have been glad to help out a little at first," the Thief River Falls senator said, "his initial demands were completely unrealistic and unreasonable. The great majority of my constituents opposed his first several offers, as did I. The regular 1997 legislative session closed in May and no action was taken on the stadium."

Proposals made when the governor called the legislature into special session October 23 relied on various methods to raise revenue to pay for building of the stadium, including increased cigarette taxes, creating a casino at Canterbury park and others.

Sen. Stumpf said he supported a proposal that would have raised all of the revenue needed to build a stadium by selling Twins stock to the general public and avoiding state involvement altogether, but no one plan drew a majority of the legislators in either the House or Senate. The legislature recessed for three weeks to allow another offer to be made by the Twins.

The new offer was much improved, Sen. Stumpf said, as it would have brought about public ownership of the Twins through a sale of stock in the team and the owner would have been required to donate the team to a nonprofit foundation.

"Still, I and other legislators and our fiscal analysts were skeptical of many details of the funding," Sen. Stumpf said. "We were concerned about the cost to the state's general fund and the possibility that the state could be sued if the revenue forecasts were inaccurate and the private investors didn't get their money on time. That bill couldn't get enough support to pass."

Proponents of a stadium made several more changes to the bill in an attempt to sway a majority of legislators. The final presentation was a bill that would pay for a new stadium with user fees that included a special surcharge on the highest paid employees using the ball park (mostly players), a ticket surcharge, a tax on food and beverages in establishments located in a district immediately surrounding the stadium, two special baseball oriented lottery games, a sales tax on sports memorabilia sold in the stadium, fees from the television and radio stations that have broadcast rights and rent from the Twins.

"It looked like just enough money would be raised to pay for the ball park, and I was strongly considering supporting the bill," Stumpf said. "However, it was killed in the House and we in the Senate never had a chance to vote on it. I think my constituents would have been satisfied with the bill, too. Basically, if you didn't go to a Twins game or go to a restaurant around the stadium or buy sports merchandise at the stadium or buy the special lottery tickets, you wouldn't have had to pay for the stadium."

People have heard from stories in newspapers and on radio and television that the stadium issue is now dead.

"I'm not so sure that's true," the senator said. "I believe there is a good chance this issue could come up in the 1998 session, which begins January 20.

"Without question," he continued, "Mr. Pohlad and the Twins have handled this issue poorly from the beginning. The debate has soured the public on the Twins and reduced support for baseball in general.

"However, I believe that the Twins do add to the quality of life in our state. In the past months I've heard from many elderly constituents who enjoy following the Twins on TV and from farmers who catch the games on the radio while working in their fields. I'm hopeful it isn't too late to keep the Twins in Minnesota but not at a cost to state taxpayers."

Dummer herd has highest September DHIA average

Richard Dummer's dairy herd had the top production among herds in the Red Lake-Pennington Dairy Herd Improvement Association in September, according to Randy and Margaret Rasmussen, supervisors.

Ninety percent of Dummer's herd of 89 cows was in production in September and averaged 68 pounds of milk, 2.1 pounds of butterfat and 2.1 pounds of protein per day.

Todd and Jay Johnson had the second place herd with 62 cows, 81 percent of which were in milk, and averaging 61 pounds of milk, 2.2 pounds of butterfat and 2.0 pounds of protein.

In third place was the Mylo Carlson herd with 82 percent of the 71-cow herd in milk and averaging 60 pounds of milk, 2.0 pounds of butterfat and 1.8 pounds of protein.

Other herds listed among the top 15 in the association for September were as follows with number of cows, percentage in milk and average daily production of milk, butterfat and protein listed respectively:

Wayne Vettleson (herd milked three times a day), 139, 86%, 59, 2.4 and 1.9; Northwest Agricultural Experiment Station (large cow herd), 54, 89%, 56, 2.1 and 1.8; Beyer Farms, 66, 83%, 54, 2.0 and 1.7; and Randy and Jo Gast, 74, 88%, 54, 1.9 and 1.7.

Also Greg Zak, 69, 91%, 54, 1.8 and 1.7; Kevin and Beth Roppe, 35, 91%, 54, 1.7 and 1.7; Tom Willett, 57, 82%, 53, 1.9 and 1.7; and Bob Schindler, 64, 83%, 53, 1.8 and 1.7.

Also Walter Buss Farm, 194, 81%, 53, 1.6 and 1.7; Northwest Agricultural Experiment Station (small cow herd), 58, 79%, 52, 1.8 and 1.8; Wayne Nelson, 41, 85%, 52, 1.7 and 1.7; and Wesley Bring, 36, 89%, 51, 1.7 and 1.7.

The supervisors point out that averages are adversely affected by the percentage of dry cows in a herd since production is averaged over the entire herd to give the producer a record of the herd's earning power for the month.

Harvest States plans merger with Cenex

Representatives of Northwest Grain in St. Hilaire and Warren heard of merger plans between Harvest States Cooperatives and Cenex at the annual meeting of Harvest States November 18 and 19 in St. Paul. Northwest Grain is affiliated with Harvest States.

John Johnson, president and CEO of Harvest States, said that merger talks are progressing and that both cooperatives are in a strong financial position. If they merge, the combined cooperative will have a business volume of $10 billion.

Johnson said that Harvest States' net earnings reached $52.5 million during the past year—up from $51 million in 1996 despite a reduction in sales from $8.2 billion to $7.1 billion.

Now the second largest farmer owned cooperative, Harvest States is owned primarily by local grain marketing and farm supply cooperatives in 16 Midwest and Pacific Northwest states that, in turn, are owned by 160,000 grain farmers.

It also announced plans to build a soybean processing plant along the southwestern Minnesota border and a flour mill at Orlando, FL, and a partnership with American Italian Pasta Co. of Excelsior Springs, MO to build a pasta plant at Harvest States' new flour mill in Kenosha, WI. Johnson said the expansions are all geared at adding value to farmer members' crops.

Attending the meeting were Jerry Hasnedl of St. Hilaire, a member of the board of Harvest States; Dave Giles, manager of Northwest Grain; Donald Mosbeck of St. Hilaire, Arlo and Tom Schultz and Richard Jinde of rural Thief River Falls; Bob Proulx of Red Lake Falls; and Merle Stinar and Jerry Sedlacek of Warren.

Northwest Grain will have its annual meeting on Monday, December 1, in Thief River Falls.

Area cities to get flood funds

East Grand Forks, Ada and Warren will share $3.3 million in flood relief grants to help support businesses that suffered financial losses as a result of last spring's flooding.

The grants are being provided through the Department of Trade and Economic Development's Minnesota Investment Fund and will be administered by local officials.

East Grand Forks will receive the bulk of the grant money—$2.5 million—with Ada and Warren to be granted $400,000 each.

Under terms of the agreement, each of the cities will make loans to businesses to compensate for losses due to floods. A total of $6 million in state funding will be provided to local units of government in the state, helping an estimated 200 to 400 flood-stricken businesses.

In addition, an Empowerment Zone Planning grant of $100,000 is available to leverage millions of federal dollars and tax incentives for economic development and job creation.

In August special session the Minnesota Legislature approved the most generous flood recovery package in the state's history at $124 million. An estimated $830 million in total relief, including $574 million in federal funding and $132 million from private sources, has been dedicated to the largest natural disaster in Minnesota's history.

NCTC men short on height

Jeff Krize's background should serve him well in his first year as the new men's head basketball coach at Northland Community and Technical College.

Krize will head into the 1997-98 season facing one of the biggest obstacles for a coach to contend with: lack of size. Tallest player on the Northland roster stands just 6-4, creating obvious problems around the basket for the Pioneers.

There are two options for teams like Northland: slow things down, play a deliberate style of ball and hope you shoot the lights out from the outside or pick up the pace with a fast break offense and smothering full court defense. Since the Pioneers do have some quickness and athleticism, Krize will opt for the latter. And besides, he learned his basketball growing up in Chisholm, where the crew cut Bluestreaks were synonymous with the the fast pace game.

"It's going to be an interesting team," said Krize in assessing his first head coaching assignment. "There's not much size, and not a heckuva lot of experience."

Only veterans back from last year's team that went 10-12 under Mark Dannhoff are 6-2 forward Josh Whitlock from Kittson County North and 6-1 guard Nic Thompson from Warroad, and they averaged only 2.6 and and 1.5 points per game respectively.

Other sophomores on the squad include 6-2 Melvin Whitney Jr. (Chicago, Ill.), who returns for a second year of eligibility after sitting out the 1996-97 season when he served as a Northland assistant coach; 6-3 Dwight Goodwin (Milwaukee, WI), a transfer from Hibbing Community College; 6-4 Jeremy Larson (Tri-County) and 6-3 Garrett Burowicz (Stephen).

Whitlock and Thompson are serving as co-captains this winter. "They'll do a good job for us," offered Krize.

The freshmen are led by 6-4 Chaka Ali (Minneapolis). "He (Ali) has the potential to be a good player in this league," said Krize.

Other first-year players are 5-11 Adekunle Adegbemi (Chicago, Ill.), 6-2 Arthur Hamilton (Ft. Lauderdale, FL), 6-1 Russ McPipe (Crystal), 5-11 Ryan Terken (Fordville, ND), 5-10 Maurice Anderson (Chicago, Ill.) and 5-11 Sean Bruggeman (Winger).

Lack of experience is a bigger concern to Krize than the lack of height. "You don't need size to play defense," he explained. "You work hard and try to distract your opponent. We will be aggressive. If we have a problem defending the bigger teams, we'll have to pack it inside with a zone. We do have some decent quickness to compensate for our lack of size. We'll play man to man defense and we'll push the ball up the court on offense. We didn't sit on the ball much at Chisholm, and I don't plan to do it here. I don't believe in that style of ball."

The Pioneers open the year Wednesday, Dec. 3, at home against UND-Lake Region.

"It'll be a challenge," admitted Krize, but he said the Pioneers up up for the test. "The players have really responded well," he said. "They have a great attitude. We've got a lot of work to do with a new coach and new players, but we're progressing. We're exciting about the season."

Sanden gets start

Kyle Sanden, a redshirt freshman from Thief River Falls, got his first collegiate start Saturday for the University of Minnesota basketball team when the Gophers met Alabama at Williams Arena.

The Crimson Tide, after building a big lead, held on for a 64-63 win.

Sanden, a 6-11 center, played extensively off the bench in a pair of preseason exhibition games and in the Gophers' first two regular season contests against Vilanova and Utah State before coach Clem Haskins gave him a start against Alabama.

The 1-2 Gophers will be be back in action Dec. 1 against Campbell (NC) University, a 7 p.m. game in Minneapolis that will be on MSC television.

Grygla-Gaztke line-up has few veteran players

Vern Johnson, after coaching a succession of Grygla-Gatzke boys high school basketball teams staffed by veteran players, finds himself directing a new cast of characters heading into the 1997-98 season that will begin Dec. 5 at home against Stephen-Argyle.

The Eagles, who have put together back-to-back 17-8 seasons, were Sub-Section 31A champions a year ago before losing a pair of Section 8A games.

Alex Anderson was a starter on that team, while Philip Brateng was used as a sixth man. The 5-9 Anderson averaged 8.6 points per game, while the 6-2 Brateng scored 3.6 points per game off the bench.

"It's been a long time since I've had a team with less experience than this one," said Johnson. "The past few years we've always had kids coming back. This year we're basically starting over. But that's okay. It's kind of fun working with a new group of kids. We'll just have to do some experimenting and try a few new things."

Anderson and Brateng will be joined by fellow seniors Andrew Sundberg, Jeddah Holte, Tobey Holthusen, Mike Sax and Bryce Turgerson to form the nucleus of this year's ball club.

"We've got a lot of kids who played a lot of junior varsity basketball," mentioned Johnson. "We'll be okay, but it might take them a while to get their feet wet at the varsity level."

The team has some shooters, noted Johnson, but rebounding is a concern. "Every season is a new year, and you have to adjust to your personnel," explained Johnson. "But we'll always try to play an up-tempo game if we can."

The faces have changed, but Johnson figures the Eagles will be able to continue to hold their own. "I think we'll be competitive," he said. "I think we can be in every game. It's a very enthusiastic bunch. I think they'll do well."

1997-98 TRF hockey debut Friday...

Prowlers will open season with Rams

Scott Bergland is looking forward to starting the season as the new Thief River Falls head high school hockey coach. But he's even more excited about the end of the year – when he figures the Prowlers could emerge as a serious challenger to the Section 8A leaders.

"We're optimistic, but with a new coach and a new system, it might a while before things fall into place," said Bergland. "I don't expect a lot at the start, but I expect to be a pretty good hockey team at the end of the year. There's enough in the cupboard to give people trouble, that's for sure."

The Prowlers will be led by junior Wade Chiodo and senior Kyle Anderson. They were the leading scorers on last year's team when Chiodo had 16 goals, 18 assists and 34 points, while Anderson finished with 14 goals, 15 assists and 29 points.

Other double figure point producers from last year's 6-17-1 team include senior forward Trevor Lee (3-8–11) and senior defenseman Adam Nordin (6-4–10).

"We've got some kids back, but we've still got a lot of young kids," noted Bergland. "We're going to have to forecheck hard, and obviously we have to put the puck in the net if we're going to beat some people. I think we've got two lines that can score, and hopefully our third and fourth lines will be able to hold their own."

The Prowlers will start the year, according to Bergland with Kyle Anderson-Lee-Lawrence and Chiodo-Rislov-Fogarty as the top two line combinations.

Dowers is the lone goalie in camp with any varsity ice time, appearing in five games as a freshmen when he had a 4.31 goals against average.

The Prowlers start the 1997-98 season against traditional rivals Roseau and Warroad. They host the Rams, who have opted to move up to Class AA this winter, in the opener Friday at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center and will head to Warroad to face the four-time defending Section 8A champions Tuesday.

Prowlers impress new coach

■ Bob Johnson directs TRF boys program

New Thief River Falls boys head high school basketball coach Bob Johnson likes what he's seen in preseason workouts. Dec. 4 he'll find out how the early enthusiasm plays out in a game situation when the Prowlers open the 1997-98 season at home against Crookston.

"I know it's early," said Johnson, "but I like what I see. "The enthusiasm, the attitude and the effort have been great. Everything has been very up-beat. The level of enthusiasm for basketball from grades 7-through-12, and everyone involved in the backcourt club has been elevated a notch or two, and that's what it's going to take to get the program turned around."

Johnson's first task is trying to pick a line-up from a group of eight seniors and five juniors who make up the nucleus of the squad. "It's a nice mix at all positions," he said. "We've got three pretty decent centers, and a good group of forwards and guards. It's a great group of kids to work with. It's going to be difficult deciding who will play."

The seniors on hand include Kyle Waterworth, Justin Walseth, Jeremy Swanson, Anthony Hendricks, Mike Johnson, Mike Morris, Cody Huschle and Casey Skjerven. Among the juniors looking to break into the line-up are Todd Christensen, Matt Myers, Wade Haviland, Kelly Cota, and Darin Bjerkens.

Hendricks averaged 11 points per game last year, Swanson 7.5 and Sjkerven 7 on a team that went 7-16.

The Prowlers have some size in the 6-8 Myers, a transfer student from Warroad, and 6-7 Christianson.

"First thing we'll do is play defense," pointed out Johnson. "That's where it all starts. We'll work hard on our defensive rebounds. Our offense will take care of itself. We'll run if the opportunity is there, but I think people will probably see us playing a more disciplined half-court game than they have in the past."

MCC looks to improve win total

Only two players with extensive varsity experience return from a 5-18 team, but there is still reason for optimism for Marshall County Central heading into the 1997-98 boys high school basketball season.

Garrett Magner (6.9 points per game, 128 assists) and Caleb Holthusen (5.4 points per game) provide the experience, while Matt Nelson, Craig Wawrzyniak, Dayton Elseth, Greg Ueland and Jon Donarski add a confidence that stems from success enjoyed during a 16-6 junior varsity season last winter. All seven are seniors. Junior Nick Wilcox and sophomore David Wilcox could fit into the picture, too.

"They're all pretty solid players," said Marshall County Central coach Ron Ueland. "They give us some pretty good depth."

With Magner as a third year starter at point guard, the Nordics' offense should be in pretty good hands, noted Ueland, who looks to get some scoring from the perimeter this winter. "Our guards shoot the ball pretty well," he said.

Ueland looks for a marked improvement in the record department this winter, but recognizes that the Nordics still won't have the luxury of being able to pull out a win while not playing well. "There's still no margin for error," he said. "We have to go out and take care of the little things that make a difference over the course of a ball game. There will probably be six-seven games where we will definitely be an underdog, but we should be right in the rest of them."

Marshall County Central will open the season Tuesday against Warroad in Newfolden.

Six state champions named at Prep Bowl

Six state champions were crowned Saturday in the 1997 Minnesota State High School League Prep Bowl football playoff finals at the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

Championship game results found Verndale beating Cromwell 18-12 in Nine-Man, Cook County over Adrian 13-12 in Class 1A, Pelican Rapids outlasted Waterville-Elysian-Morristown 34-32 in Class 2A; Albany handled Jackson County Central 56-7 in Class 3A, Northfield shut out Detroit Lakes 28-0 in Class 4A, and Eden Prairie got by Blaine 32-28 in Class 5A.

Sports Boosters group will not meet this week

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday, there will be no Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club meeting this week.

Goodridge trying to retain winning ways

Goodridge boys high school basketball coach Eric Mickelson thinks the Huskies can have a pretty good season in 1997-98. But "good" is a relative term. They may have a tough time matching last year's 17-8 showing, but more wins than losses is still an obtainable goal, he figures.

"We could be .500 or better," said Mickelson. "That may be a drop compared to where we were at last year, but it's still a pretty good year. We lost some good ball players."

Returning experience rests with seniors Jim Scheef, Jared Eidelbes and Ben Hanson. The 6-3 Scheef, a top-notch defensive player who averaged 6.4 points per game, was an all-conference pick last winter. Eidelbes was in and out of the starting line-up last year, and a season as a starting quarterback should be a big confidence boost on the basketball court, according to Mickelson. Hanson has been playing varsity ball the past two years.

"We've got those three seniors, but not a lot of experience after that," noted Mickelson.

Junior Seth Vettleson and sophomore Josh Gallagher also played some last year. Others on hand include seniors Nicky Kotrba and Cory Marquis, sophomore Travis Scheef, and freshman Chad Hanson, maybe the team's top outside shooter.

"We're going to try to push the ball up the court this year," said Mickelson. "We're going to try to speed things up if we can."

The Huskies will host Fisher/Climax Tuesday in their 1997-98 season opener.

Area deer harvest figures listed

by John Williams, Thief River Falls Area Wildlife Manager

The 1997 deer season has come and gone and many people are wondering about the harvest and how it compares to last year. While the statewide report will not be out until mid-December, we do have a fairly good picture of the results locally after collecting registration slips.

Each Area Wildlife Office has a number of cooperating stores or business owners that agree to be deer registration stations. These businesses provide both a service to the public and the state by recording information regarding the deer that the hunter brings in to register. The main information recorded is the following: the permit area where the deer was taken, the county, the date the deer was harvested, and the age and sex of the deer. As soon as possible after the firearms deer season, the slips are collected and tallied.

The Thief River Falls Wildlife Office has registration stations in the following locations: Erl's and Amoco 24 in Thief River Falls, Fourtown, Grygla Hartz, Goodridge Hartz, St. Hilaire Kruse In, Viking Store, Super America in Warren, John's Super Service in Alvarado, and the Oslo Cafe. The registration stubs collected from these stations following the close of the season provide a quick picture for permit areas near Thief River Falls.

Here are the results tallied from those registration stations, compared to last year. Overall harvest was down 35 percent from 1996 (please keep in mind that 1996 was down significantly from 1995). Broken down by zone, we find that Zone 2 was down about 50 percent while Zone 4 was down about 20 percent compared to 1996.

These declines in harvest are a direct result of lower deer populations, due to the previous two severe winters, and the Department of Natural Resources reducing antlerless permits to a level reflective of the reduced populations. In permit areas 201-212, antlerless permits were reduced by better than 50 percent, with three permit areas (201, 203, 211/212) having no permits available. In Zone 4, deer populations were not as severely affected and antlerless permits were reduced only 15 percent in permit areas 401-406, collectively.

Permit areas showing the greatest declines were 203, 208 and 211/212. All permit areas recorded lower harvest levels, but those in Zone 4 generally did not decline as much as Zone 2. Permit areas 401, 404 and 405 had declines ranging from 14 percent (404) to 22 percent (401).

When the final state harvest figures are tallied, the above figures may change a little as other registration stations also register deer from permit areas around Thief River Falls. But for now, these are the early results of the 1997 season compared to the 1996 season.

What about the 1998 season? It is early to say, but more than anything else, a "normal" winter that will allow deer to make it through in good health would be the best news one could ask for."

Gators should be strong

■ Basketball team to build on football success

Success on the football field might put Badger/Greenbush-Middle River a step or two behind at the start of the 1997-98 boys high school basketball season, but head coach Eldon Sparby figures with time the Gators' court fortunes could follow the path fashioned on the gridiron.

Several members of the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River football team that reached the Class 2A state playoff finals in the Metrodome are basketball players. The extended football season bumped into the start of basketball practice, but Sparby isn't complaining. The confidence gained from winning a Section 8AA football title will outweigh the loss of a couple early-season basketball practices.

Besides, it's a basketball program that returns two full time starters, a part time starter and a top reserve from a Sub-Section 32A championship team – a club that lost a one-point first round Section 8A tournament game to Fertile-Beltrami, then came back to beat Grygla-Gatzke for third place.

"I think we have the potential to be a better team than last year," said Sparby. "It might take a while to get going, but the potential is there. We hope to be rolling by Christmas time."

Jeremy Vacura has been a two-year starter at guard. He averaged 10.9 points per game last winter. Daryl Wickenfuss, who scored 9.1 points per game and averaged a team-high 10.2 rebounds per game, is also back in the starting line-up. Andy Schenkey scored 5 points per game as a part time starter and Adam Holmes came off the bench to score 6.9 points per game. All four are seniors.

Add senior Bret Bentow and junior Richard Wickenfuss and you have the making of a pretty solid basketball team, acknowledged Sparby. "We've got six seniors, and eight or nine kids who can play," he said.

Not surprising, in light of their football backgrounds, the Gators figure to show some muscle around the basket this winter. "We're going to be pretty physical," said Sparby. "We've got some strong kids. We should be a good rebounding team."

And in Schenkey and Vacura the Gators have outside shooters as well.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River will start the season Dec. 4 at Warren-Alvarado-Oslo.

Red Lake County Central boys basketball...

RLCC boys have new coach

First-year Red Lake County Central boys head high school basketball coach Chris McLean figures he will be able to put a pretty good team on the court this winter. It's a good thing, because the Mustangs face some tough competition in Sub-Section 30A. They will have to play well to be competitive, warned McLean.

Three starters return off last year's 6-19 team – senior David Fox and juniors Mark Lorenson and Nick Waldal. Junior Danny Payment joined the team late in the 1996-97 season as a transfer student from Red Lake Falls. Sophomore Matt Hruby and senior Eric Walter also played at the varsity level.

"Mark and David are real strong shooters, and I feel Danny will really step it up this year," said McLean. "Those three can all hit the outside shot."

Lorenson led the Mustangs in scoring a year ago, averaging 15.3 points per game.

"We expect to be very competitive," offered McLean, "but our subsection is going to be really tough. Teams like Win-E-Mac and Fertile-Beltrami will be very strong. It'll be a real battle for us every night."

The Mustangs will try to compete with an up-tempo game. "We're going to focus on playing man-to-man defense, and we'll try to run a little," said McLean, whose team opens the season with road games Dec. 2 against Fertile-Beltrami and Dec. 5 vs. Win-E-Mac.

McLean is the Mustangs' fourth head coach in as many years. Todd Fore stepped down after the 1994-95 season. Brad Boreen filled in for the 1995-96 season and Ryan Sedler handled the program last winter. It's the first head coaching job for McLean, an assistant for a year at Goodridge and an assistant last year under Sedler.

Dept. of Transportation offers winter driving tips

Minnesota Department of Transportation is offering winter driving tips and reminding motorists of some important facts. For instance, an average snowplow weighs 50,000 pounds and a car 3,000 pounds. Don't take chances, they suggest.

Several other winter driving tips are offered in this year's safety campaign being called "Stay Back Stay Alive." Minnesota Department of Transportation suggests that motorists should assume that snowplow drivers do not see you. Snowplows travel 30 to 50 miles per hour slower than other vehicles so it is important to reduce speed when approaching a snowplow. Motorists should be patient. Never drive into a snowcloud caused by plowing light snow from crosswinds. And always give the snowplow driver room to work safely.

Motorists are also urged to be prepared for winter driving: keep your gas tank full, your headlights on, plan ahead, make sure your vehicle is equipped with winter safety items, pay attention to weather forecasts and trust them.

Other safety tips include watching bridges which may be slick, and avoid using cruise control when driving on snow or ice-covered roadways.

When driving in winter, your vehicle should be equipped with booster cables, road flares, a shovel, a snowmobile suit, a sleeping bag or blankets, mittens, stocking cap and boots, windshield scraper and tow rope. A winter survival kit should include flashlights, hand/foot warmer packets, first aid supplies, high energy foods or snacks, bright colored cloth to tie on vehicle antennas for help, a candle, matches and a small metal container to melt snow for drinking water, pencil, paper and quarters for phone calls.

If you get stranded in a winter storm stay in your vehicle. Walking alone in a storm is very dangerous. You can lose your way, wander out of reach, become exhausted, collapse and even die. Your vehicle is your best shelter.

Keep calm if you get stranded. Calm down and think. Remember, the storm will end and you will be found. Your main concern should be to conserve body energy and heat. You will not starve to death. Do not attempt to push your car or shovel in extreme storm conditions. It's too dangerous due to injury from tools, a slipping vehicle, exhaustion, heart attack or overexertion.

Keep fresh air in your vehicle. It's better to be chilly and awake than to be comfortable and be overcome with carbon monoxide fumes. Keep your exhaust pipe free of snow and run your engine only for short periods of time, keeping a downwind window slightly open.

Keep warm without fuel. Keep your blood circulating freely. Loosen tight clothing and change positions frequently. Move your arms and legs, massage fingers and toes, tuck your hands between your legs or under your armpits. Cuddle with each other to share heat. Elevate your feet to improve circulation.

Dial 911. If you have a telephone you should dial 911. Describe your location, the condition of those in the car and what happened. Stay on the line until you know who you have spoken with and what will happen next.

Second semester foreign students need host home

Students from Europe, South America, Central America, Scandinavia, Australia and the former Eastern Bloc will be arriving in January to attend the second semester of school in the United States and will need host homes while here.

Persons in this area interested in being host families are encouraged to contact Donna Nelson of rural Middle River at 218-459-3329. She is the local coordinator for the [illegible] and CETUSA student exchange organizations.

Families may also call [illegible] at 1-800-813-9051 or CETUSA at 1-888-238-8721 if they are willing to host one of the students for the second half of the school year.

The students have their own spending money and medical insurance, are screened for academic and English skills and ready to learn about another culture. They bring interests and talents to share with host families as well as a belief that student exchange promotes global understanding.

With or without diversity rule MN schools face challenge

by Sen. Roger Moe

It now appears that the controversy over the proposed diversity rule for Minnesota schools will come before the Legislature in 1998. It is unfortunate that so much effort was expended on preparing and revamping the diversity rule proposed by the State Board of Education without finding the common ground necessary to tackle the diversity issue in general. The potential problems and merits associated with the specific requirements of the diversity rule should be fully considered before moving forward.

Before addressing the proposed diversity rule specifically, the public should know that the changing demographics of our schools require us to address some looming concerns regarding student achievement. Those who wish to avoid any discussion of this issue, or those who resort to using highly charged political labels in flatly opposing the diversity rule, simply are not facing the reality of life in today's schools.

Although Minnesota has consistently achieved excellent high school graduation rates, some students are falling behind. Our state has among the largest gaps in the nation between white students and minorities in graduation rates and other measures of achievement. Former State Demographer Hazel Reinhardt told legislators earlier this year that, "Minnesota has not been stellar in this area," while commenting on a range of demographic issues including the achievement gap.

In the past, this gap was not an issue. However, today as we see much greater diversity in the schools this gap has become more apparent. In addition, the work force has also become more diverse. As a result, "It never has been as important to equip young people of color as it is today," Reinhardt commented.

Any decision to entirely ignore the achievement gap between white and minority students would clearly have negative consequences for the social and economic foundation of our state in the future. Conversely, the assumption that every diversity regulation and mandate contemplated at the state level will help solve the problem is ill-advised.

The main features of the most recently considered diversity rule include the following proposed school district requirements:

- Compiling data on students by race, gender, family income, English proficiency, as well as monitoring students' attendance, dropout rates, disciplinary actions, and participation in co-curricular activities
- Setting up diversity committees and classes that are multi-cultural, gender balanced and disability-aware
- Student assessments will be reviewed for bias that might place certain student populations at a disadvantage

If the diversity rule is implemented in 1999 as proposed, school districts not complying with its provisions would face penalties, including the eventual loss of some state funding.

It isn't surprising to find that some school administrators have expressed concern about the potential extent of regulation by the state in the area of diversity curriculum. School officials in Minneapolis and St. Paul have indicated that they already have fully developed diversity initiatives and do not want to duplicate those efforts just to satisfy state administrators. It seems reasonable that other school districts throughout the state could benefit from these models already in place.

While specific questions regarding the appropriate handling of the diversity rule need to be addressed, we cannot lose sight of the overall challenge we face now and in the future. As our schools and communities become more diverse, we must work hard on closing the achievement gap. Our state's future depends on it.

Dairy economist projects impact of milk orders system

In a study submitted to the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, dairy economist Tom Cox reports that milk marketing reform options most likely to help the state's dairy farmers could be among the least likely to be adopted by the federal government.

Cox, a professor in the Department of Agricultural and Applied Economics at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, concludes that each of the options being considered by the United States Department of Agriculture helps some regions while hurting other regions. Unfortunately for Minnesota and Wisconsin, the plans that help the upper midwest hurt other regions with more political clout — particularly the southeast, Florida and New England.

"Given this fundamental conflict of regional interest," Cox writes, "policies that are close to the status quo and/or minimize the losses to regions with considerable political clout are likely to have the most appeal to the Dairy Division of USDA."

Since the 1930s U.S. dairy farmers have been receiving differential payments for Class I milk used for fluid products that increased the farther away he or she was from Eau Claire, WI. The purpose was to encourage milk production outside the traditional dairy states. While this policy led to increased production in states such as Florida, Texas and Idaho, Upper Midwest milk producers suffered from declining milk prices due to the artificially inflated milk supply.

USDA Secretary Dan Glickman is thought to be considering six options for reforming this outdated system. One of these options, Option 1A, calls for location specific Class I differentials. This model sets a fixed $1.60 per hundred[illegible] for the Upper Midwest, West and Southwest [illegible] the [illegible] is the [illegible] of [illegible] this [illegible] under the current system.

Other options of note include Option 3A, which calls for flat [illegible] per hundredweight Class I differentials across all regions, and Option 3, which calls for demand based Class I differentials. This model sets both a $1 per hundredweight fixed differential plus a demand based transportation credit determined by how far away the given region is from the nearest reserve milk supplies.

Of these, Cox reports that Option 1A would probably do little to help Minnesota and Wisconsin dairy producers. Conversely, Options 3A and 3 would help the Upper Midwest much more.

While Option 1A [illegible] increase Class I [illegible] Upper Midwest [illegible] MDA Commissioner Gene Hugoson [illegible] the plan wouldn't do [illegible] for Minnesota producers. "There would still be a strong incentive for producers from other regions to overproduce," he said.

"Upper Midwest dairy producers are among the lowest cost, most efficient milk producers in the world, but even the most efficient producers can't survive when other regions are encouraged to produce more milk than the market warrants," Hugoson said. "What Minnesota dairy farmers need is meaningful reform that takes steps toward stopping this overproduction."

Cox's study indicates milk production would drop in all regions except the Upper Midwest, West, Northwest and California if USDA [illegible] Option [illegible] Northeast and Southeast.

Such [illegible] would [illegible] milk prices for Upper Midwest producers relative to other regions. For producers, Upper Midwest producers would see price increases only 0.2 percent under Option 1A.

"Option 1A is not meaningful reform — it does nothing to correct the regional imbalances we have under the current system," Hugoson said. "Since some regions would lose [illegible] Option 1A, but it is improper for the federal government to implement an unjustified, unnecessary policy that hurts Minnesota and Wisconsin farmers. We believe Option 3 restores a level playing field for our producers while still compensating other regions for the cost of transporting milk."

Patrol requests safe driving

Last year eight people were killed and 537 injured in traffic crashes over the Thanksgiving holiday, according to the Minnesota Department of Public Safety.

The holiday typically falls during some of the winter's early hazardous driving conditions. It is also one of the longest holiday weekends— from 6 p.m. on Wednesday night to 12 midnight on Sunday.

Minnesota State Patrol Chief Anne Beers urged the public to pay extra attention to speed this year.

"This is the first winter holiday since the new speed limits went into effect and drivers may not be aware of the extra stopping distance needed at higher speeds," she said. "The posted speed limit may not be the safe speed limit during adverse conditions."

"Every state patrol trooper wants all Minnesotans to enjoy a safe Thanksgiving holiday. That can happen if everyone remembers to buckle up, keep children under 13 in the back seat, drive sober and adjust speeds to the existing road conditions."

Add activities to Cultural Festival

Continuing its efforts to expand its interest area for people of all ages and interests, the All Nations Cultural Festival at St. Hilaire will be adding more activities for children in 1998.

The sixth annual festival has been scheduled for July 11 and 12, according to Ed Leeper of Thief River Falls who is the originator and has been the promoter of the event since its inception.

At a meeting of the festival committee recently, committee members agreed that more activities were needed for children in the area. Contacts therefore have been made to add a petting zoo, mule-drawn stage coach, covered wagon and pony rides for the festival in 1998.

The additional activities will not detract from the tradition and mission of the festival, which is to educate through a cultural experience, Leeper said.

Among featured performers for 1998 will be Belgian folk dancers, a band from Norway, Greek folk dancers, musicians and dancers from India, an Irish band, a nine-piece Salsa band, a cowboy show, Polish dancers, a Japanese drum group and the return of the always popular Fialka Ukrainian Dance Ensemble.

Another addition will be a multi-lingual master of ceremonies to handle introductions and provide information on performing groups.

The craft show will also be continued and crafters wishing to participate are urged to register early by calling Renae Rasmussen at 681-6932 after 5 p.m.

For more information about the festival, call Ed at 681-7363 or view the event's Internet web page at http://www.northernnet.com/leepfrog/.

Red Lake group earns Minnesota Peace Prize trophy

Red Lake Middle School theatre group called 'Circles' has received one of three Minnesota Peace Prize awards presented by Lieutenant Governor Joanne Benson.

According to the Minnesota Department of Children, Families and Learning, this group of teens explores options for dealing with issues such as drugs, violence and death. The program was started by Dian Church, who organized and ran a five-day camp for 36 Red Lake Middle School teens to confront youth issues.

Trainers came to Minnesota from surrounding states to work with the young people. Each student was taught to use theater skills to help understand violence in our lives.

Following the camp, the students formed theater troupes that began going into classrooms to perform short acts on particular topics.

Tri-Valley Opportunity Council receives grant from Fund

Twenty non-profit organizations received much needed support recently as the Minnesota Futures Fund announced its first grant recipients. Among the organizations receiving grants totaling more than $350,000 was Tri-Valley Opportunity Council, headquartered in Crookston.

"We hope the grants are the first steps for these organizations in coping with the many changes and challenges they will face in the coming years due to devolution," said Chris Park, director, Dayton Hudson Foundation and chair for the Futures Fund. "The planning and assessment they do now will hopefully allow them to reorganize and restructure in order to maximize the effectiveness of their service in the community."

The 20 non-profit recipients from around Minnesota will use the Futures Fund grants for everything from researching methods for providing aid to low-income families to assessing the organization's role in the community.

"Non-profits of all sizes will benefit from these unique grants," said Louise Thoreson of Lutheran Brotherhood, chair, Minnesota Futures Fund Grantmaking committee. "Unlike most foundations whose grants help with operational support or the delivery of certain services, our funds are intended to help organizations with planning in response to federal restructuring. All non-profits that could benefit from these grants are encouraged to apply."

The Minnesota Futures Fund, established in the fall of 1996, is helping Minnesota non-profit organizations prepare for the changes that are expected to come as a result of federal government restructuring and cost-saving initiatives, commonly referred to as "devolution." The Fund is designed to help these organizations do the planning that is necessary to continue to meet the needs of their communities. It is the only effort of its kind in the nation to address this critical and emerging issue.

Thirty-eight Minnesota funders have contributed to the Futures Fund, including the Northwest Minnesota Foundation. In addition, the Futures Fund received an allocation of $750,000 from the state of Minnesota. The Fund, which provides one-time grants of up to $20,000, now totals more than $2 million. Grants will be awarded through 1998 or until funds are exhausted.

An advisory board consisting of corporate, non-profit and foundation representatives oversees the program. A community-based grantmaking committee reviews and makes decisions on grant proposals.

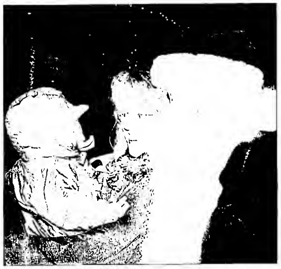
More information on the Minnesota Futures Fund, and how to apply for a grant, can be obtained by contacting Marty Sucec, Northwest Minnesota Foundation, 722 Paul Bunyan Drive NW, Bemidji, MN 56601, or by calling (218) 759-2057.

Gas prices drop for holiday

Minnesota motorists traveling this Thanksgiving will pay seven cents less for gasoline than they did over Labor Day, when self-serve unleaded gasoline was $1.291. A current survey shows that the statewide average price is $1.221. Last year, the price of unleaded self-service gasoline was $1.288. The current national average is $1.234 per gallon.

According to AAA, a strong demand for gasoline has continued into fall this year, but inventory levels and production rates are high enough to meet the demand. Although gasoline prices have fallen, current events in the Middle East could potentially impact prices and will be watched closely by the industry.

"Thanksgiving travelers are expected to head out in record numbers this year. An estimated 32.4 million Americans plan to take a trip of 100 miles or more during the upcoming holiday, up 3 percent compared to last year. In the Midwest, 5.2 million people are expected to travel — 11 percent of the population.



One-year-old Brayden Dravlow get to visit with Santa Claus while being held by his mother Jody Dravlow of Thief River Falls at the Christmas tree lighting ceremony Saturday evening. About 200 people attended the event, which was held in Floyd B. Olson Park.

Carolers from the Lincoln High School Choir performed during the Christmas tree lighting ceremony Saturday evening in Floyd B. Olson Park in Thief River Falls.

Christmas for Pennington Co. project to bring gifts to children in community

Annual efforts to collect funds and presents for children in Pennington County who are in need of gifts this Christmas have begun.

"Christmas time is soon here and we want to help each family have a Merry Christmas. We as a community, want to see that each child has a gift for Christmas. This project is being organized and administered through a community effort of several citizens and groups in Pennington County," said Wendy Mattson, organizer.

Individuals interested in assisting in this effort can either obtain tags from Christmas trees at Ben's Hallmark, Kmart, Pamida and Arctic Cat, or make a contribution by contacting Wendy Mattson at the 681-6161, or Melinda Trettline at 681-2880. "Donations will be deposited into a savings account at Northern State Bank.

Tags on the Christmas trees at local businesses have a number, age, sex of the child and Christmas wish. (Children will not be identified.) These tags may be taken from the tree and a gift purchased for that individual. Gifts should be returned to the store unwrapped.

The gifts will be picked up and brought to the Law Enforcement Center. Groups and/or individuals will then wrap the presents.

Tags left on the trees during the last days will be taken care of through the use of funds donated to the program. Volunteers are needed to "go shopping". Anyone or group interested in wrapping presents or being a shopper should contact Wendy Mattson at 681-6161.

On Friday, December 19, Santa will be in the lobby of the Law Enforcement Center beginning at 4 p.m. to hand out the gifts. Individuals may make other arrangements to pick up the gifts.

MN Residents to receive notices of Truth in Taxation

Truth in Taxation notices are being mailed to property owners between November 10 and 24. These are not property tax statements, but notices of proposed 1998 property taxes and other information.

Residents will be able to use information from Truth in Taxation notices to address spending concerns while attending Truth in Taxation hearings.

- Pennington County will hold its Truth in Taxation hearing at 5 p.m. on December 9 in the county board room in the county courthouse.
- Thief River Falls will hold its Truth in Taxation hearing at 5 p.m. on December 8 at the Heritage Community Center.
- School District 564 will hold its Truth in Taxation hearing on December 2 at 7 p.m. in the School District Service Center.

The Minnesota Department of Revenue reports that this year's notices provide more information than before. As in previous years, each notice pertains specifically to the owner's property. However, it includes not only a detailed breakdown of school district levies, state determined spending, voter approved spending, and other various levies, but also current and proposed increases and decreases due to spending decisions. It also tells property owners about increases and decreases caused by changes in property value, class rates and state aid, for example. Finally, it gives taxpayers an overall percentage of those increases or decreases.

"Truth in Taxation notices enable Minnesota taxpayers to play a more active role in local government decision-making by knowing where local government plans to spending their property tax money," said Revenue Commissioner James I. Girard. "People often mistake the property tax as a state tax and think they have little say in how much they must pay. That needn't be. Property taxes are local taxes, levied by local governments in order to provide services to the people who live in their areas."

According to Girard, approximately 45 percent of all property tax is used for schools, 28 percent for counties, 15 percent for cities, and the balance for townships and special taxing districts. Each jurisdiction determines which services it thinks taxpayers want and those required by law. The proposed budget determines the revenue needed. That is why it is important to attend local government budget meetings, understand spending decisions, and help local officials spend tax dollars wisely, with or without raising property taxes.

At the budget hearing, elected officials try to give everyone a chance to speak. If there is not enough time to cover all issues, state law requires that the hearings be adjourned and continued at a later time. The date, place, and place for reconvening are announced at that meeting. Elected officials vote and adopt final property tax collection amounts for the upcoming year unless circumstances force them to reconvene.

This year, all counties will hold their public Truth in Taxation hearings on December 9, the metropolitan special taxing district—on December 1, and cities and school districts between November 29 and December 20, as long as they do not conflict with each other, the county, or the metropolitan special taxing district, if located in the seven-county metropolitan area. In most cases, these hearings are published in local newspapers. Cities and townships with less than 500 people are not required to hold Truth in Taxation hearings, nor are Greater Minnesota special taxing districts.

Renters do not receive individual Truth in Taxation notices, but their landlords are required to post their notices where renters can see them. Mobile homeowners do not receive one either, since their property is assessed and taxed in the same year.

Once again, Truth in Taxation notices are not property tax statements and are not proof of taxes paid in 1997. Therefore, they may not be used to claim the state's one-time property tax rebate on their 1997 income tax returns. Property taxpayers who did not retain a copy of their payable 97 property tax statements must obtain one from their county treasurer's office. Renters must obtain copies of their certificates of rent paid (CRPs) from their landlords or the Minnesota Department of Revenue can help reconstruct one.

IMPORTANT HOMESTEAD PROPERTY TAX NOTICE

"If the property you now own and live in was not being used by you - or by a "qualifying relative" - or by the previous owner - as a home on January 2, 1997, you can reduce the amount of property tax you will pay on your home in 1998 by applying to have the property classified as a homestead.

If you wish to claim homestead on a property that was not receiving the homestead classification in the past, you must contact the county assessor's office and make application on or before December 15, 1997.

You–or a "qualifying relative"–must have moved into the home you now own and live in it as a principal residence, on or before December 1, 1997, to apply to have the property classified as a homestead.

A "qualifying relative" is defined as a parent, step-parent, child, stepchild, grandparent, grandchild, brother, sister, uncle, or aunt. The relationship may be by blood or by marriage.

Because of a 1993 law change, once you have been granted the homestead classification, no further applications are necessary unless they are specifically requested by the county assessor.

If you should sell, move or for any reason no longer qualify for the homestead classification, you are required to notify the county assessor's office within 30 days of the change in homestead status.

To find out how to apply for the homestead classification and receive the proper application form contact:

Karlstad man named chairman of Potato Growers

Justin Dagen

Red River Valley Potato Growers Association, with offices in East Grand Forks, named Justin Dagen of Karlstad as chairman of the board during its annual meeting in Fargo, ND, November 22. Dagen replaces Jeff Lazur, Reynolds, ND. Lazur now serves as past chairman.

Dagen began growing potatoes in 1977, and is a third generation certified seed potato grower, following his father Duane and grandfather Rueben. Justin and his wife Donna have a 1,600 acre diversified cash crop operation with a strong emphasis on natural resource conservation. Crop rotation is a management key, using seed potatoes, sugar beets, corn, soybeans, canola, alfalfa, rye, wheat and barley in their program. Dagen tried some irrigation this year, looking for the best match for rotation among crops.

"The Association has a 50 year track record of industry unity," says Dagen. "That leadership needs to be sustained and built upon as we enter the 21st century. The culture of potatoes has been a blessing to my family for nearly 100 years in the Red River Valley. It is an honor to serve as chairman of this Association."

Being on the edge of the Red River Valley, Dagen feels is the best place for growing potatoes as the land isn't as sandy as is found further east, nor is it clay like in the heart of the Valley. With primarily seed potatoes grown in the area, Dagen grows seed potatoes for the chip, fresh and process industry. He is excited about the potential of genetically engineered products, having had good experience growing them for the past three years. Dagen's certified seed potatoes are distributed from Maine to Washington to the Dominican Republic, but primarily to the Midwest states.

"Our top priority," Dagen says, "is to regain some of our funding that has been lost to inflation over the years. Funding that has revolutionized potato production across the continent through the Red River Valley's research and varietal development programs. We dare not hesitate to commit to these projects as a potato-hungry country demands the finest quality."

On a national level, Dagen is on the Board of Directors of the National Potato Council. In 1997, he was appointed co-chairman of the Legislative Leaders Program of the National Potato Council. Now chairman of that program, he coordinates all the legislative leaders in the Insights Program. Participants in the Legislative Leaders Program are from all potato growing areas of the country who learn to better understand the implications of legislation and regulation impacting the potato industry.

Dagen has served on various Association committees, advertising and promotion, research and foundation scholarship, since the 1980s. In 1984 he was elected to the Minnesota Area One Potato Council and still serves on that committee. He was elected to the Association's board of directors in 1995. In addition, Dagen is a member of the Kittson Soil and Water Conservation District board, on the coaching staff of the Heritage Christian School, is an Elder on the Resurrection Church Council and he and his wife Donna represent Kittson County in the Agassiz Leaders Program.

Justin and his wife Donna have three children, Brooks, Kendra and Sander, and reside near Karlstad.

Electrical Facts Outweigh Rhetoric

GUEST EDITORIAL
by Warren Haldson
Spokesman for Minnesota Power and Chairman of Partners for Affordable Energy

Recent news stories in Minnesota cited a report prepared by the Izaak Walton League and the Clean Water Action Fund which included this statement: "Coal-fired power plants are the largest polluters in the state and should be required to either clean up or shut down."

Here are a few key points the Izaak Walton League and Clean Water Action Fund failed to mention:

• First, all power plants in Minnesota that use coal to make electricity already meet or exceed all state and federal environmental regulations. These air standards are strict and designed to protect the health of even the most sensitive people with a margin of safety. Minnesota's standards are even more strict than federal standards.

Minnesota electricity suppliers use coal more cleanly than ever, with the latest pollution control equipment and new efficient technologies. In fact, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reports that our nation's air is cleaner today than it was in 1970. Since then, sulfur dioxide emissions have decreased 26 percent, and these and other emissions continue to decline. During this same time, use of coal to produce electricity has increased dramatically.

• Second, Minnesota gets more than two-thirds of its electricity from coal-fired power plants. Thirty percent of our state's electricity is generated by nuclear energy, and less than five percent is generated by hydropower, wind, solar and other renewable energy sources.

Looking ahead, our electricity suppliers will continue to use renewable energy sources to supplement our growing demand for electricity. But renewable energy sources simply cannot replace two-thirds of our electric generation. Experts say that's not practical or cost-effective, and the technology simply isn't yet available.

• Third, according to a 1996 Minnesota Legislative Electric Energy Task Force, trying to convert coal generation to other sources could raise the cost of electricity by 45 percent for Minnesota homes, farms and businesses. Imagine the impact on our economy: businesses and factories would move or shut down, thousands of jobs needlessly lost, farmers unable to compete in world markets and low-income households would face higher electric bills.

• Finally, Minnesota's electric rates are 20 percent below the national average in large part because the state relies on coal for two-thirds of its electricity. These low electric rates, along with the technologies that make coal a more environmentally-compatible source for generating electricity, help give Minnesota an advantage in attracting new and expanding businesses, including high-quality manufacturing jobs.

Minnesota's electric utilities are committed to supplying the most reliable energy, at the lowest cost and in compliance with all state and federal environmental regulations. We believe most Minnesotans share these goals and would also agree that our energy future must be built on facts rather than rhetoric.

Former Governor Likes One-House Legislature

"It is duplicating, it is unnecessary, it is expensive, it is wasteful, there is little or nothing to recommend it any more, and it is an anachronism of our long-gone past that should be changed now."

That assessment of the two-house Minnesota legislature is given by Elmer Andersen, former governor and now publisher of ABC Newspapers of Anoka, Blaine and Coon Rapids, in an editorial in a recent issue of the Anoka Union.

Andersen notes that the change to a single house (unicameral) legislature has been discussed for 50 years or more but the people have never had a chance to vote on it.

"When the Senate and House were chosen by different systems, there was some justification of a two-house Legislature," he writes. "When the courts decided that both should be chosen the same way, then it became unnecessary to have two houses."

The different systems to which Andersen refers were practiced a number of years ago when the House members were elected according to population and the Senators were elected on a geographical distribution without regard for population. Then the courts decided that all legislative offices should be filled on a population basis (referred to at the time as "one man, one vote") and the system changed. That change, along with party designation for legislators, decreased effectiveness of the state's governing body.

According to Andersen, "A single-house legislature would greatly reduce the size, would reduce the expense, would improve accountability, would make it easier for people to follow what's going on and, from every standpoint, would be more effective and efficient than the present system."

Andersen suggests that those who would like to know more about the proposal or would like to have an opportunity to vote on it should write to their present legislators and let them know.

While one may expect most legislators to resist the possible change which would leave a number of them without an office to fill, Sen. Dave Kleis—a St. Cloud Republican elected in 1994—is one lawmaker urging adoption of the unicameral system.

"There is nearly unanimous consensus that the Minnesota legislative process is in need of repair," Sen. Kleis writes. "As policy makers, we are constantly challenging our departments, agencies and local units of government to streamline their operations and look for more effective means of accomplishing goals. It is only right that the legislature does the same."

Sen. Kleis said he recently went to Nebraska, which has had a unicameral legislature for 60 years, and found that "not only are the people of Nebraska proud of the unicameral system, they consider it a success performing beyond expectations. Several studies have shown that Nebraska ranks among the top five legislatures in accountability."

Kleis points out that city councils, county boards, school boards, clubs, community service organizations, charities and businesses all operate with a single decision-making body.

In the two-house legislature, each piece of legislation must be passed by both houses, which requires a duplication of effort and often very different results. It is rare that both bodies produce an identical product, so the actual decision-making goes to a conference committee.

"It is in the conference committees that back-room, late-night deals are negotiated, where some of the most controversial issues are dealt with," Sen. Kleis correctly states. "While the committees may be an effective tool for reconciling the differences between legislation created in the House and in the Senate, they are a far cry from the fairness and openness that our democracy is supposed to be about. This leaves the important duties of lawmaking up to a select handful of legislators, hand-picked by the Senate Majority Leader and the Speaker of the House."

One of the most common criticisms heard when a unicameral legislature is discussed is the lack of checks and balances. That argument doesn't concern Kleis.

"The thing to keep in mind," he says, "is that the House was not created as a check on the Senate, or vice versa. The governor will still have the authority to veto legislation, and the courts will still have the authority to rule that legislation is unconstitutional. The real check, though, will be with the voters who will know exactly how their representative voted on each issue."

The arguments for change are compelling. It will interesting to see what arguments are made if and when the proposal is presented to the next legislative session.

Editorial comments from the files of Norm A. Holen

—An optimist has been defined as a woman who takes along a shopping bag when she's going to buy only $5 worth of groceries.

—You don't hear the youngsters lamenting the arrival of winter's snows.

—Some Minnesota deer hunters who didn't wear red had wives who are now wearing black.

—Random thought: Wonder how old a person has to be when he fails to get a lift out of Christmas holiday decorations.

—A car near Baudette was hit by three bullets during the recent deer season, which impels Billy Noonan to remark that some hunters will shoot at anything with a horn on it.

—Note to the back shop: Keep this as a standing headline, "Prices Hit New Peak."

—Foreign countries, already suspicious of U.S. intentions, would cry "Imperialism" louder than ever if this country should elect an army general to the presidency in 1948.

—A straight line may be the shortest distance between two points, but, we read, a good-looking girl can get there quicker with curves.

The Train Now Running Daily On This Branch.

"A daily train is now running on this branch of the Great Northern, having commenced yesterday, the first of the month. It is of course, a mixed train, but it will make good time for the reason that it will not be obliged to haul heavy loads."

In Harmony
Red Lake County Publishers Walk Hand In Hand

"The Red Lake County Publishers' Association' was organized at St. Hilaire the first of the week and the four publishers of this county have joined. A resolution was adopted to the effect that the publication of all legal notices -- mortgage sales, probate notices, land office notices, etc. -- will be made only at the full legal rates, and after this week no reduction will be given.

"The idea of forming this association originated in the fertile brain of the big-bodied editor of the ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR, J. J. Soll, and it was through his efforts that the organization was perfected. It will be a good thing for the publishers."

"Charles Alexander, better known as 'Klondike Charley' who has held the position of night clerk at the Hotel Markham since last July left Monday for the Red Lake Agency. Charley will go to Dawson City next spring and stop a few days with a friend of his that has half interest in the 'Dirty Dog' saloon before going to the front to pick up gold nuggets."

Wylie Gleanings

"Many of our young ladies have left us and gone to the city and in consequence the condition of many bachelors is sad to behold. Some wear their faces in a sling, while one explains that his mournful looks is due more to an ulcerated tooth than to heart troubles. However, be that as it may, there is no excuse for the present conditions of things. Prosperity has come to our homes and it's only selfishness for the 'old batch' to take the whole cake himself. Be generous once and try to make it pleasant for somebody else's sister and you will soon appreciate the difference."

Dave Beito of Northern State Bank is shown with Laure Brickson of St. Bernard's Catholic School as they place the lunar sample disk into the bank's vault for safe keeping.

St. Bernard's students look at lunar sample

Last Friday, St. Bernard's students in Thief River Falls experienced a lunar sample disk supplied by NASA. The students learned about the different land forms on the moon while others took a close look through a microscope.

Students had an opportunity to check out other samples from the moon. Astronaut ice cream (freeze dried), for example, was sampled, as were peaches which are eaten during high altitude flights.

Teacher Laura Brickson said now St. Bernard's students from pre-kindergarten through grade five, will have a deeper understanding of our closest neighbor — the moon.

Your Newspaper is a Living Textbook!

Teachers Deb Winjum and Laure Brickson, St. Bernard's teachers, show a lunar sample disk to third graders Brook Rundell, Jimmy Kendrick, Michalla Noreen, and Kari Anderson.

St. Bernard's fifth graders discuss various moon survival techniques. From left are Jeffrey DeMars, Justin Voacks, Tate Sorvig, Lise Watts, and Zachery Skalsky.

Strandquist

The weather in Northwest Minnesota was bright and sunny over the weekend but today the clouds came in and the forecast is for snow by the end of this week. We are thankful for the nice October days, they did shorten the winter. Roy had his snowblower ready and out on Friday and cleared the sidewalks etc. around here. He calls this longhandle weather but thinks this is the best place to be bar none, any time of the year.

The Strandquist seniors were caught in Thursday's blizzard and had to postpone their Christmas party until next Thursday when they will meet at Irene's Cafe for their dinner and go to the Center and exchange gifts. That will be their last meeting until the Spring. They have had a lot of good times this past year, gone on trips and visited other senior centers.

The Bethesda Lutheran Church had a supper for hunters on Saturday evening and also a time of worship afterwards. Many hunters have had luck getting their deer in spite of the havoc the wolves have dealt them. That is a situation that can easily get out of hand as the mountain lion population did in Western Montana. The lions now are so many they have begun hunting people.

Clarence Lindstrom and Florance Westberg of Phoenix, Arizona are house guests at Morris Lindstrom's while here visiting with their brother Lloyd and Lois at Karlstad.

Pearl Thompson accompanied some of the other Women's Ministries ladies of the Assembly of God to Thief River Falls on Tuesday evening for their annual evening out where they enjoyed dinner at the Best Western.

Claudia Berggren and Jessie Wayne and Pat Larson and family visited Judy Kleinwachter.

Supper guests at Bob and Pat Lindstrom's on Saturday evening were Clarence Lindstrom and Florance Westberg of Phoenix, Morris and Marcelyn Lindstrom, Chris Lindstrom of Sioux Falls, S. Dakota, Nathan Lindstrom and friend Jody of Minneapolis, Frank Grochowski and other hunters.

Dr. Bolar received a medical doctorate in 1983 from Wright State University School of Medicine, and is currently practicing at the Dakota Clinic, Ltd located in Thief River Falls. In 1991 Dr. Bolar received board certification from the American Board of Surgery. Dr. Bolar has a strong professional interest in general and bariatric surgery, and holds memberships in other professional societies, including the American Bariatric Society, MMA.

Dr. Randall J. Bolar

The American College of Surgeons is the largest organization of surgeons in the world. By meeting the College's stringent membership requirements, Fellows of the College have earned the distinguished right to use the designation "F.A.C.S." (Fellow, American College of Surgeons) after their names.

An applicant for Fellowship must be a graduate of an approved medical school, must have completed advanced training in one of the 13 surgical specialties recognized by the College, and must have been in practice in the same geographic location for at least two years at the time of his or her application. Before admission into Fellowship, the surgeon must further demonstrate ethical fitness and professional proficiency, and his or her acceptance as a Fellow of the College must be approved by three-fourths of its Board of Regents.

The convocation ceremony was the highlight of the five-day Congress. The Congress also featured reports on research-in-progress, postgraduate courses, panel discussions, symposia, and scientific and industrial exhibits. Total attendance at the Congress was over 16,000, including surgeons, members of various medical disciplines, and members of the scientific and consumer media.

The American College of Surgeons is a scientific and educational organization of surgeons that was founded in 1913 to raise the standards of surgical practice and to improve the care of the surgical patient. The College is dedicated to the ethical and competent practice of surgery. Its achievements have established it as an important advocate for all patients. The College has more than 59,000 members and is the largest organization of surgeons in the world.

Today my amaryllis set me to thinking about the power of life. After the [illegible] it had blossomed this year, a flower that should only do that once a year. I cut the long leaves off and set it in the basement to rest. Imagine my surprise two weeks ago when I looked at it and there was a pale green plant with two leaves and a flower stem two inches high. I brought it up to the [illegible] and watered it and in twelve days it had grown to 26 inches high and [illegible] beautiful blossoms 7 inches across on the top. All the other times it had 4 blossoms. Has old age set in or what? Hazel calls it "A Blooming Fool" and she knows her flowers.

Sewage treatment ordinance adopted by Pennington Co.

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Pennington County Commissioners approved a Sewage and Wastewater Treatment Ordinance Tuesday night.

The third revision on the septic system ordinance has been accepted by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, said Howard Person, Pennington County Solid Waste officer. When asked how he felt about the ordinance, Person said he was comfortable with it.

The passage of the ordinance comes after nearly a year of back and forth discussions with legislators, Minnesota Pollution Control Agency and landowners. At the heart of the controversy was Minnesota Rules Chapter 7080 which regulates individual sewage treatment systems. The very narrow parameters of the bill would have prevented most types of trench style sewage treatment systems, and required instead, much more expensive mound type systems. Many landowners and local officials felt the bill was too restrictive because they didn't feel evidence, especially in Greater Minnesota, supported a ban on trench style systems. In fact, local officials collected data supporting their position.

The upshot of the new ordinance approved Tuesday night is that local landowners will be able to use trench style systems as long as they meet requirements set forth in the ordinance especially regarding soil types. Person said he was required to come up with a fact sheet listing the differences. That list is not available yet, but he will make it available as soon as it is completed.

Person said most of the differences between Minnesota Rules Chapter 7080 and Pennington County's ordinance can be found in Subdivision 4 of the new ordinance. Subdivision 4 reads as follows:

Site suitability for repair, replacement or installation of a trench type ISTS. Site suitability requirements must be met if such site whenever an ISTS is installed, replaced, altered, repaired or extended. Listed below are the parameters which must be met to allow the use of a trench type ISTS.

4.10 Local Standard Provisions. The standards which allow for the continuance of or construction of trench systems within Pennington County are as follows:

4.11 Soil types: Soils which are not acceptable for use with trench type ISTS systems include [illegible] 1878, and 1882. Soils which may not use alternative standards in this ordinance includes types 208 and 245B. These two soils must use the standard chapter 7080 code. Use of the Pennington County soils map in conjunction with percolation tests

County expresses interest in housing low-risk prisoners

by David Hill
Associate Editor

Pennington County Commissioner passed a resolution last week stating its interest in a Minnesota department of corrections program, which could result in low risk prisoners being housed in Pennington county. There are a lot of questions that need to be answered before it becomes a reality, however.

Dennis Drury, Department of Corrections, Bemidji, explained a new work program to commissioners. Under this work program state prisoners housed in Pennington County and Polk County would bring in additional income to those counties, help solve some of the construction needs of flood ravaged communities, and provide prisoners with work experience and construction skills.

Drury said last year the department of corrections housed 10 low risk inmates in Thief River Falls. These inmates were hired to work in areas affected by the flood.

It worked well enough that they decided to look at a program similar to sentence to serve programs in several counties. Under the proposed program inmates would be housed in communities, and the state would contract with the local authority and pay about $50 per prisoner per day.

The low risk prisoners would be assigned to work in one or more of three different areas: renovation of homes, building panel homes and construction of stick-built homes. Drury explained that the department also experimented last year with construction of panel homes. Prisoners built a prototype, now on display in New York Mills. The home utilizes sandwich board technology. Drury anticipates that these types of homes would cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. An instructor would be hired to work with prisoners and provide instruction in the construction trade. Drury speculated that the homes could be built on tax forfeited property, financed by banks and sold. The primary market for these homes would be individuals earning $8 to $9 per hour.

The Department of Corrections is focusing on this area of Minnesota because even before the flood there was a need for new housing. Now there aren't enough contractors to complete all the work available.

Right now — within the next six months — the department of corrections is looking for a place to house a crew of 10, one in Crookston and one in Thief River Falls said Drury. In the near future they will be asking the legislature to fund the proposed program for $1.5 million.

Pennington County Sheriff Gerald Moe explained that currently only a department of corrections variance allows the county to continue to operate its overcrowded jail. Additional space is needed to address its long term needs. Moe suggested that the purchase and renovation of a nearby building could solve the county's space problem. It could also be used to house state prisoners and thereby bring additional income into the county.

Sheriff Moe said the county has been interested in the building next to the Law Enforcement Center. One way to help finance the cost of a low risk, dormitory style, jail, would be through the state program explained by Drury. But, he said, it doesn't matter whether or not the county agrees to house the prisoners. The county needs more space.

Lots of Questions

Commissioners had several questions for Drury. Drury explained that the prisoners chosen for the work program would be low risk, non-violent offenders who have passed Department of Correction guidelines. Local officials would have a say in who works in the area.

The program would end, Drury said, when they no longer have any customers. He said it's not the intent of the state to take business away from private businesses. Currently, he said, there aren't enough contractors, and many won't touch a house for less than $75,000.

Prisoners would receive $1 per hour and top out at $1.60 per hour. That money goes into their account, which is used to pay for any child support, fines or incidentals.

Initially, these prisoners would be working in the East Grand Forks area.

Sheriff Moe and the building committee were planning to meet with representatives of School District 564 Wednesday. The district owns the building next to the Law Enforcement Center. Moe said he wasn't even sure they were interested in selling the building.

Bob Carlson, county commissioner, asked that an accountant take a close look at the proposal to purchase the building and come up with some cost figures regarding purchase and renovation.

The county board approved a resolution of interest in the project.

Counties given funds for food, shelter program

Emergency Fund and Shelter National Board Program of the Federal Emergency Management Agency has awarded direct grants to a number of Minnesota counties.

Counties and amounts of the grants in this area include Marshall, $8,546, Pennington, $7,024, Polk, $13,957, Beltrami, $19,564, Clearwater, $8,305, and Roseau, $8,682.

Grief is a solitary journey

by Kathi Carlson
The Times Reporter

Buddhist legend tells of a young woman who grieved for her infant son so intensely that she would not give up the body for burial. Clutching her precious bundle, she approached the wise and compassionate Buddha and asked for his help. He agreed to help her on one condition. She must go down into the nearby village and return with a mustard seed - a common spice for that time and place - from a household that had never been touched by death. She returned to Buddha that night without the seed. And after arranging for her son's burial, she became one of Buddha's disciples. Her door-to-door quest had taught her an all-important lesson - that grief is universal.

Yes, grief is universal, but it's a subject that remains nearly taboo. Nothing we are taught prepares us for the inevitable losses that we all experience over the course of our lives.

Personal interest in the subject goes beyond reporting. Each year nearly 12 million Americans bury a parent - a statistic - a fact that bears little comfort if you, like me, are one of those 12 million.

My dad died on August 28. While his death was sudden and unexpected, I accepted the news quite matter-of-factly. The days that followed were busy. I participated in the funeral arrangements, helped greet the stream of friends and neighbors who came to my parents' house, the funeral home and the funeral. I tried to offer comfort to my mother and six younger siblings. I wrote the warm, honest and even humorous eulogy that my brother delivered at the service.

The occasional tear that slid down my cheek was quickly brushed away and the thought or memory that caused emotion was cast out of my mind.

Life went back to normal even though I attended the funeral of a childhood friend who died of cancer and acknowledged the sudden death of my aunt within three weeks of dad's funeral.

Then one day, several weeks later, reality took hold. My dad wouldn't be sitting in his favorite chair when I walked into the home I grew up in. His big hand would never again give my knee that familiar squeeze as he said, "How're you doing, gal?" We'd have no more good-natured arguments about politics, and if there's an ice storm next spring he won't call and offer to come rescue me.

Suddenly I was enveloped in profound sadness. Solitary tears turned into torrents, and little things set me off at unexpected times in unexpected places. Concentration at work became increasingly difficult, and I had no energy to do even the routine things that needed to be done at home. I thought I was losing my mind.

In search of help, I turned to the bookshelves where I found a number of books written about the grieving process.

It is generally agreed that the grieving process is a number of phases from shock and confusion to the regaining of equilibrium. It is also clear that each person makes his or her own individual and solitary journey through the process.

In her book Life is Hello, Life is Goodbye, therapist Alla Renee Bozarth, PhD describes the initial 'numbness' we feel as 'a self-protective device, an anesthetic of the heart.' It allows us to absorb the reality gradually. She described phases of profound sadness, anger, guilt, depression, helplessness, confusion and erratic or impulsive behavior. Some experience physical symptoms: appetite loss, insomnia and even more serious illnesses.

"There is no 'proper' way to grieve," says Dr. Elizabeth Harper Neeld in her book Seven Choices: Taking the Steps to a New Life after Losing Someone You Love. "If you display a lot of emotion normally, you may respond with a lot of emotion. A quiet person may respond with increased quietness. An efficient person may become more efficient. Some people become ill, some become very angry, some people act as if nothing has happened. Some people will clean the house from top to bottom, and some won't be able to get off the couch. They act that way because something profound has happened and that's their way of responding. It's ridiculous to think there is a proper way to react. The only thing that's proper is to take into account that something profound has happened that has snapped the thread of continuity in our lives."

No book offered a prescription or timetable for grieving, but all agreed that feeling the pain fully is the best way to grieve. Dr. Neeld says, "You have to tell the truth about your feelings and you have to feel them." "Pain has a stubborn habit of not going away just because we deny it exists," explains Dr. Bozarth. "Pain is an essential part of any growth process - the process of growing up, growing old, growing beyond grief. ... Ultimately, the only way to get through something is to get 'through' it - not over, under or around it. And it has to take as long as it takes."

Holidays often present difficulties for those who have lost a loved one.

Last week I attended a "Grief Through the Holidays" presentation sponsored by Hospice of the Red River Valley at the library. Certified grief counselor Cheryl Forfang spoke and offered a number of handouts that provided ideas to help those who grieve get through the season.

Cheryl confirmed much of what I'd read while explaining that the holiday season would be different this year and in the years to come. Traditions and routines cannot be the same, and one has to find a "new normal." Ideas for creating memorials were discussed, and memories were described as the 'medicine of mourning.' Writing - keeping a journal or even writing a letter to the person who died - was suggested as often being therapeutic.

For those who missed this presentation, it will be offered again on Thursday, December 4 at 7 p.m. at Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in [illegible].

Cheryl also mentioned her availability and willingness to lead a grief support group if enough people wish to participate. Interest can be expressed to Hospice of the Red River Valley at 681-6189.

Everything I read and heard helped me to understand why I feel the way I do. Nothing, however, offered any cures or even an indication of when I would feel better. There are no answers to these questions.

Dad was a big man with a big voice. Wherever he was, you knew it. He loved people and was well-known for his comical sense of humor. He grew old, but he never grew up. My dad was my friend.

Thanksgiving was the first holiday hurdle. It was impossible not to be thankful when I looked around at the large family that remains. Missing dad, I reflected on his life and was thankful for the things he taught me in the time we shared.

The days ahead will be busy. The house will be decorated, cookies will be baked and gifts will be purchased and wrapped. With the anticipation of a child, my dad loved Christmas. A candle will burn on my coffee table in his memory.

As we gather over the Christmas holiday, the biggest kid of all won't be there. We will miss him. Memories will be our medicine. Our family will be different - its dynamics and history irrevocably changed. Each family member will be changed also, and each - in his or her own time - will grow beyond grief.

Light Up A Life program was conducted by Hospice of the Red River Valley Monday evening at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls. Following a brief program in the medical center lobby, those attending gathered around a tree which was lighted outside to hear the reading of a list of names of those memorialized.

Reading the list of people memorialized at the Light Up A Life tree lighting program conducted by Hospice of the Red River Valley Monday at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls was Cheryl Forfang, family support services coordinator

Rev. Torri Cuppett presented two vocal solos as part of the Light Up A Life program presented by Hospice of the Red River Valley Monday evening at Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls. Holding the microphone is Merlnell Waterworth, program manager of the Thief River Falls office, who presided at the program.

Reflections

On Principles Of Truth

Sarah Reese
Our Saviour's Christian Academy

America is undeniably a religious country. This nation's Founding Fathers built this country on the truth of Christ. Prior to the 1960s, American history textbooks were replete with references to our country's Christian heritage. If this nation had not been founded on Christ, it would, without question, not at all be what it is today. The first paragraph of our Declaration of Independence establishes the truth of this fact.

When we eliminated prayer from our schools, we provided for the deterioration of our country's moral foundation. Since 1962, when the Supreme Court ruled for the removal of prayer in public schools, chart after chart and graph after graph has shown the rise in teenage pregnancies, divorce and crime rates that were unprecedented. Never before in the history has there been such a rapid decline in the stability of today's youth. In the years prior to the ban of religious teachings and prayer, the top three problems in public schools were talking, chewing gum and making noise, whereas today's problems are rape, murder and suicide. Never have we had such a problem with them as we do today.

"Almighty God, we acknowledge our dependence upon Thee, and we beg Thy blessings on us, our parents, our teachers, and our country," was the simple, humble prayer that the Court struck down and prohibited in 1962 throughout the schools in America. But when we allow God to be removed from the classrooms, we are limiting none other than ourselves by simply taking on the humanistic attitude of self and creating a no values society.

Since the removal of prayer, problems have sky-rocketed in the areas of rape, murder, suicide, robbery, drug use, AIDS, child abuse, divorce and the list could go on and on. Though the removal of prayer from schools may not be the only reason for the ever-declining condition in America, it is without doubt one of its major causes.

We undoubtedly need to return to God's values and re-"acknowledge our dependence upon Him", and take a stand for putting prayer back into schools. There is no denying that the absence of prayer can and has made a total and unmistakable difference in America.

And for those Americans who have bought into the lie that "Separation of Church and State" is a legitimate and legal reason for prayer and religious teaching to be removed from public education, I ask you to read Thomas Jefferson's letter to the Danbury Baptist Association, written in 1802. This letter is the source of the phrase "Separation of Church and State." In this letter, Mr. Jefferson (America's third president) was simply encouraging the Danbury Baptists that the Constitution had established and impregnable wall that kept the federal government from meddling with or controlling religious liberty.

Nowhere does he (or any of the Founding Fathers) encourage religion to be removed from public education or any aspect of public life.

George Washington, America's first president, warned that if religious principles were excluded from American life, the nation's morality and political prosperity would suffer. Need I say more? To reemphasize and complete my point, let me quote the first Supreme Court Chief Justice, John Jay: Providence has given to our people the choice of their rulers, and it is the duty... of our Christian nation to select and prefer Christians for their rulers. - 1816

LOOK WHO'S "30"!!!

As the snow begins to fall,
My heart takes a picture
The picture is that of some sad
And unforgettable moments in my life.
The moments are cold and dark
Memories of a time when I had to Face the acceptance of death.

Day by day, snow fall by snow fall, I carry this picture within my heart of memories.
It is then that I refer back to a poem I wrote a few years ago
At times, I read it over and over again and somehow
After a while I begin to believe it, and it lives within me

I want to share my poem
In hopes that it will send some encouragement out to at least one person who may be going through some difficult times in their life
It is entitled "After", and I dedicate it to the loved ones in my picture

AFTER
The sun comes up
But it must also go down
We see a child smile,
But we also see a frown.
We see the flowers bloom,
But often watch them fade
For how else are other ones made?
We see the sky so clearly blue,
But often, watch the clouds form too
We must remember there's Always the rainbow after it rains,
And there's always an answer to
All life's pains
And there's always something to Learn in everything that goes bad
There's always a time to be happy
After you've been sad

PRAIRIE RAMBLING

Gretchen Beito

These Christmas stories were written by Viola Loftness O'Dar of Moorhead who grew up on the family farm in North Township in Pennington County. For over thirty years Viola has worked on the family history of her father Andrew and has published it in a series of booklets for Loftness family reunions.

She writes: "The tales of long ago are repeated over and over, corrected by some, embellished by others. We form a link in passing them on, and all are the adhesive that holds us together.

"To try to express what Christmas was like is a colossal task. However one tries, it is almost impossible because it is unfathomable. Can a child's sense of mystery and wonder and reverence be captured and expressed with understanding?

"Of course not. Christmas is the story of love and it transcends the ordinary, illuminating the surroundings with a continual feeling of gladness, whether it is "Jeg er saa glad hver Julekveld," ("I am so glad each Christmas Eve"). Or it might be an enhanced kindred feeling toward one another.

"Such were the Loftness Christmas customs. Because all four grandparents emigrated from Norway, most of our family's customs originated in Norway.

"One of the most beautiful sounds that I remember was standing in the snow at 4 P.M. on Christmas Eve and listening for the sound of the church bell being rung somewhere to the east. We never knew from which church it came, but on a cold, clear Christmas Eve it would be rung for quite a while. Beautiful.

"The Christmas tree was put up and decorated a day or two before Christmas. I still have the clamp-on candle holders that held the five inch twisted candles. When we were very small I remember the candles being lighted and watching them burn and then we children would hold hands and march around the tree singing, "Her Komme Denne Barne Smaa" ("Thy Little Ones Dear Lord Are We"). Mother would accompany us on the parlor organ. Finally, at the end of the evening, hanging up the stockings with great expectations was most exciting. We definitely believed in Santa Claus and it was hard to get to sleep that night as we did not want to miss hearing his coming.

"Mother and Dad must have spent many many nights making toys, dolls, and doll clothes. One Christmas morning when Einar was probably five and Elvina four, we found Einar's stocking bulging and Elvina's stocking skinny. "Horrors! How could we have made such a mistake!" We found out then that Einar believed the saying that if he hadn't been good, all Santa would leave in his stocking would be a piece of coal. He had arisen in the night and adjusted the contents–to make sure he would not be disappointed in the morning.

"One Christmas, Mother made dolls for Berenice and me, bodies stuffed with cotton, heads made of celluloid. That same Chrismas, the hired man, Moe, gave Berenice and me each a beautiful doll with a glass head, real hair, a jointed body made of fine leather, and glass hands and feet.

"His gift of the beautiful dolls made us forgive him for his outburst shortly before. I guess Moe was sort of justified at that. We had churned butter and then Mother had worked the butter over and over in a large wooden bowl with a large wooden paddle to get out all the buttermilk. Then on a newspaper she rolled out the salt so there would not be any lumps. She put the remaining salt in a small bowl. Mildred, believing it was sugar, poured it into the sugar bowl. Moe liked sugar, but he wouldn't put it into his cup of coffee. He would take a heaping teaspoon and put it into his mouth. Sputter! Sputter! It was pretty awful.

"I remember putting my beautiful doll on the window sill. It fell down and the head broke! Later the head on Berenice's doll also broke. Mother sewed the celluloid heads from the dolls she had made to the Moe dolls. Those were the only dolls Berenice and I ever had. I still have mine even though a winter in the sand box did it no good and it has replacement hands and feet.

"One Christmas when our boys, Larry, 6, and Warren, 4, were looking in the toy catalogue with me I said, "I had a doll and I still have it–it is in the attic." They begged to see it and envisioned a beautiful doll like those in the catalog. When I brought it down they laughed and laughed, and finally Warren said, "That's the awfulest doll I've ever seen!"

"And I made a sad face and said "Mamma liked it. It was all she had to play with. We didn't have trucks and wagons, and games." Their faces got longer and longer and they felt ashamed for making fun of my doll.

"Finally Warren said, "I suppose all you had to do was look at television!"

"I gave up. Too much time had passed! However, my feelings were somewhat assuaged this Christmas when my old doll was almost exalted by being the "baby in the manger" at our granddaughters' program at our home Christmas Eve.

"But they chose their "Susie" instead.

Oak Park - Nazareth AAL Branch excels

Aid Association for Lutherans Branch AAL 7093 of Oak Park and Nazareth Lutheran Churches north of Oklee participated as a test model for a new branch rating system.

In the new rating system, an additional 350 points would result in a gold star plus rating. The Oak Park-Nazareth branch exceeded the 350 points by earning 2,490 points over the requirement.

Points were earned by participating in the Grand Forks Flood Relief Project, participating in three major fund-raisers for families in the Helping Hands Program, holding an educational activity, participating in Youth Serve activities and by donating more than 2,400 hours of volunteer time during the year.

Much of the work done in the test model was done by the secretary-treasurer. Anita Halvorson of the Nazareth church shouldered much of the responsibility. Vernet Arveson and Karen Peterson of Oak Park Lutheran Church are the president and vice president. Darrow and Shirley Lundeen of Oak Park serve as lamplighters for the area branches.

At the annual meeting held recently, district representative James Jantsch announced that as a result of the the branch's participation in the test model, an additional $600 was awarded to the branch treasury.

Special appreciation was extended to all members of the community who contributed to the extraordinary number of volunteer hours for the branch.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Dan Carpenter

Well, wintertime is finally here. One day it's nice outside (tolerable at least), and the next day it's like living in Siberia or Antarctica. The freezing wind and piles of snow are the sign that the long Minnesota winter is upon us.

In the wintertime there is a lot to do around here. Obviously, there is snowmobiling, as well as the numerous basketball and hockey games. But what will I be doing this winter? Neither of the above, for I will be working this winter as a carryout boy and a snow shoveler.

The first thing that most people think of when the words "carryout boy" are spoken is, "Do you want paper or plastic?" Yes, bagging and carrying out groceries is a big part of our job (obviously, since we're called "carryouts"). In the summer months it's a pleasant job to have, especially when it's busy. You get to be outside, see the sun, and get some fresh air. But in the winter it's a different story. We have to hurriedly bundle up in our coats and occasional hats and trudge out in the messy parking lot.

I can recall just a week or so ago when I was working. The store was completely filled with people, so I was constantly carrying out packages for two hours straight. That will be the last time I wear my beat up tennis shoes to work. My feet were so cold and numb that I was sure they would fall off. It took about 45 minutes for them to melt. So next time you think that our job is easy or we're stupid (or anything bad about us), consider what we have to go through.

My other job is a snow shoveler. I'm going to New York with the choir this May, and I need money, so I signed on with the Hire The Choir program. Just a couple of days ago I received a call from Mrs. Reese, our choir director. She told me that she had a snow shoveling job for me, and since I was dubbed "The Snow God," she called me first. It was a job shoveling snow out of a house that was being built. I figured that it wouldn't take more than an hour, so I said I'd do it.

I arrived at the designated place at about three o'clock. I was awestricken. This place was huge! The snow was drifted four inches high in most places. Even after viewing the place, I still held high hopes that it would only take an hour. I was wrong. The snow was stuck to the bare wood. It seemed like it took forever to scrape it off.

Two hours later with about two-thirds of the place done, I threw in the towel with a sore arm because the sun was almost completely set. I slowly trudged away from the gargantuan house, dragging my shovel behind me. Don't get me wrong - I didn't quit because I was sore. It was too dark to see, and I had to be at a choir practice. But, happy to say, someone was later found to finish up where I left off.

There are many fun things to do in the winter, and there are things that are motivated by only the jingle of coins and the waving of a green bill. I guess I'm not too bitter about the cold because I get paid, and it's something constructive to do. If you ever need your sidewalk, driveway or anything else shoveled, just call my choir director Mrs. Reese about "Hire The Choir" and "Dan The Snow God" will be happy to do it. (PS - My teacher says it's somewhat unethical to use this article for personal gain. Sorry!)

Straight Talk about teenage sexuality at Newfolden High School Dec. 10

She will discuss the consequences of sex outside of marriage in three basic categories: physical consequences, emotional consequences and the consequences incurred by innocent parties. She believes young people are capable of making good healthy decisions if they are given the facts and made aware of all the consequences of their decisions.

Pam is committed to upholding the family as the primary sex educator of children and young people. She will encourage and empower parents, speaking on instilling values, helping children make healthy decisions based on the facts and helping them understand the consequences of premature sexual involvement.

Who Passed Away Dec. 2, 1985

There was a light at the end of the tunnel
There was love awaiting me there
All my cares and troubles I left behind
As I climbed the Golden Stairs.

There was a light at the end of the tunnel
Where I met my Lord face to face
I'm in the Home that I longed for Saved by His Heavenly grace.

Yes, Heaven is my home now,
I'm here with Mom and Dad
We're in the land where Angels trod
Walking hand and hand with God.

What is a Cold Virus?

A cold can be caused by any one of 200 different tiny viruses (viruses that attack cells in the nose). Cold viruses are made up of tiny particles, and it only takes one particle to start a cold.

How Does a Cold Virus Work?

The virus usually attacks the nasopharynx—the upper part of your throat that connects to the nasal passages. Cold particles are like microscopic puzzle pieces—custom designed for the human nose. Each particle has an opening that fits exactly around the protrusion on each nose cell. Once matched up, the cold particle commandeers the cell, making it reproduce more cold particles, which in turn attach to other nose cells and repeat the process. Thus, the cold spreads. Symptoms like runny nose, sneezing, and congestion won't appear until the third day—after the virus has spread.

'It's Better To Give Than To Receive'

With only 20 or so shopping days until Christmas, it's time to get serious about shopping, especially for those people on your list who are difficult to buy for. I have a few of those – the kind who have everything or don't like anything. Or when socks, ties, turtlenecks, pet rocks and fruitcake are out of the question.

Following are some unique ideas for those friends, relatives, spouses and bosses who make Christmas shopping difficult and stressful.

The first item I recommend are ear warmers. These are not a hat and they're not ear muffs. They're covers for your ears made out of fleece that promise to keep your ears warm and not mess up your hair. In case you weren't aware, "hat hair" is not in vogue. Because these warmers come in different colors and sizes they're suitable for anyone who has ears.

If ear warmers are not appropriate I have another suggestion for those who have everything – food. Specifically a chocolate pig and seven milk chocolate piglets in a special little crate. Pigs may not fit the bill, but maybe some milk chocolate dinosaur eggs may work. The eggs are filled with 10 baby dinosaurs – five milk chocolate and five bittersweet chocolate. Ensconced in a special box, these eggs and dinosaurs will make a lasting impression. What kind of lasting impression? I can't guarantee that.

OK, maybe your second uncle (twice removed) doesn't have a sweet tooth, but he may do handstands if he receives his own shitake or oyster mushroom grower. It looks as if mushrooms grow right in your own home.

Although food is usually a sure bet, there may be a few people on your list who won't appreciate your efforts to sabotage their after-the-holidays diet. There's yet another special gift for these receivers. How about "the world's largest crossword puzzle"? It's approximately 7 feet wide by 7 feet long and contains more than 90,000 squares. A 100-page book holds thousands of clues. It looks like a gift to last more than a Sunday afternoon.

The next person on your list could hate crossword puzzles, but might love astronomy. There's a handheld instrument that's like a miniature planetarium, allowing someone to locate and identify all the major stars and constellations on any night of any day. The recipient could stargaze anywhere, even on a cloudy night.

I failed astronomy in college, so this would not work for me and others who struggled with the high-in-the-sky concepts. So maybe instead they'd like to build their own walking robot. Construction requires only basic tools and when completed the robot cruises and then stops on voice command.

Personally, few of these gifts would find me squealing with delight on Christmas morning. But I did find a couple of appropriate items for me. The first is a sweatshirt that says, "So Many Books, So Little Time." So true. The second gift suitable for me was a plaque that reads, "Martha Stewart Doesn't Live Here." Again, so true.

I actually believe there's something for everyone. You just have to be diligent and open to new ideas. For instance, how about a personal microbrewery? Or monogrammed underwear?

41 give blood during drive at Goodridge

Fifty people volunteered to donate blood and 41 were able to give during the blood drive conducted November 20 in St. Anne's Catholic church at Goodridge.

Cindi Kotrba coordinated the drive and the Lioness club served as sponsor and assisted with recruiting and registering donors, publicity and providing refreshments. Those who assisted on the day of the drive were Borothy Wayne, Colleen Hoffman, Bonna Hrachek, Marlys Brangstveit, Ruth Sanders, Audrey Rogalla and Buane Kjuner.

"Sponsoring a blood drive is a very important responsibility to ensure a safe and adequate blood supply," stated Rhonda Ellefson of United Blood Services, which did the blood drawing.

"Donations will help meet the blood needs of many patients in 46 area hospitals served by United Blood Services. Donors have truly given the gift of life."

...My Shopping List Isn't Getting Any Shorter

The traditional first day of Christmas shopping is the day after Thanksgiving when stores begin sales early in the morning and, no matter what time, shoppers come, seeking bargain gifts and ring-ding-dingling the cash registers.

I went shopping the day after Thanksgiving too, even though the roads and sidewalks were so slippery I feared for my life. It was fun and I did get a few gifts on my list. Perhaps I had a little problem, but at least I crossed some names off the list.

I do have a problem with Christmas shopping this year. There is something strange about my shopping, which I noticed first when I went to the annual craft fair the weekend before Thanksgiving. There I was wandering through the aisles, humming Christmas carols and feeling the Christmas spirit filling my heart, picking up gifts from here and there. Then I happened to glance in my shopping bag and realized something. I had three gifts nestled in my bag, but there was the problem.

Two of the gifts were for me and just one was for someone else. Whoops! I vowed to stop shopping for myself and began to search in earnest for items to fill my shopping list. At the end of my excursion, I managed to find four more gifts for other people, but also one more for myself (I just couldn't pass it up).

When I got home I made some major decisions and adjustments to my shopping list and decided to keep one of the gifts I had bought for someone else. Now I had four gifts for others and four for myself. I realized this was not the way to do Christmas shopping! I must do better! Friday I armed myself with my somewhat worn and torn and very marked up Christmas shopping list and ventured out to do some real shopping, promising myself I would stick to buying for others this time.

As I tally up the Christmas shopping count from Friday, I found a special big gift for my little granddaughter, four bags to use for wrapping some of my larger gifts (does that count as four items for others?), red beads to string along with the popcorn for my Christmas tree garlands (this must be a gift for me, right?), two Christmas magazines for myself, a gift for my new grandson, an outfit for me for Christmas (but I used a gift certificate I had gotten, so that doesn't really count, does it?), four jars of cinnamon (to make gingerbread ornaments to give as gifts, but which turned out so ugly that I won't give them to anyone, but that really was intended for someone else, wasn't it?), and quilting thread (definitely for Christmas gifts for others).

That makes seven gifts (stretching it with all four gift bags) for others, and four gifts for myself. I'm getting better, but I still have a very long shopping list and time is ticking. I am making up my mind right now that I will only buy for others and quit buying things for myself this holiday season.

Could it be that I have misplaced my holiday spirit and forgotten the real reason for the season? I wonder if all this holiday shopping spirit hasn't gone to my head. Yes, that is probably the problem.

TIMES FOR TODDLERS

ACTIVITIES

Boxes and Bows

Little ones often prefer the box and ribbon to the gift! Take advantage of this natural attraction with some of the following activities:

Built With Boxes

Use colorful gift boxes as if they were building blocks. Encourage your children to stack them, line them up or create with them in other ways.

In and Out

Cut a 5 inch slit in the lid of a large box. Collect several lids from small plastic tubs, such as those used for margarine or cream cheese. Your children can push the lids through the slits, then lift the lid and remove them.

Pop Out of a Gift Box

Wrap a large open top box with colorful holiday paper. Encourage the little ones to take turns climbing inside and pretending to be a gift. Look at the box each time and say, "I wonder what could be inside this beautiful box?" As the child pops up exclaim, "Oh, what a wonderful gift! It's just what I always wanted!"

PARENTING TIPS

Learning About Time

A child learns about time long before he/she can "tell time" and long before he/she enters school. Learning about time for the young child means knowing that certain things should happen in a certain order. It's knowing that there are rhythms and patterns, that there is a "before," a "now" and an "after."

Part of a child's learning about time occurs when he/she gets up in the morning and goes to bed at night. The child notices that first he/she gets up, then he/she gets dressed, then he/she eats breakfast, and then he/she can play. If these events always occur in the same order every day your child is not only learning about time, but is learning about order, which in turn helps to create a feeling of security.

Why is learning about time so important? Because the typical child with serious learning problems also has serious problems organizing time. By providing regular routines in your child's day you will be helping him/her to learn about time.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Help your child to understand words like "before," "after," "first," "now." For example, "After you pick up your toys, then you may go outside."

"TO THE RETIREE WHO WANTS TO PROTECT YOUR MONEY, INCOME, AND ASSETS FROM BEING WIPED OUT!"

Retirees who have not set up proper strategies can have all of their net worth wiped out when someone in the family goes into a nursing home. The government can literally take your CD's, house, Social Security, pension checks, IRA's, investments - you name it! One of the biggest myths around is that Medicare will pay for nursing home expenses. This is completely WRONG! In fact, Medicare usually pays NOTHING towards the cost of staying in a long term facility! YOU are responsible for every dime of long term care expenses! Many people think that Medicaid will pick up the costs of being in a nursing home. That's true. But, they will only pay after you've lost everything you own! You have to be broke before they kick in a dime! The laws are constantly changing. These changes add to frustration when a spouse or loved one has or is about to enter a long term care facility. Don't let this happen to you. You need the information that will teach you how to avoid being a victim of our government's awful secret. Q&A SOCIAL SECURITY

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. Is direct deposit very popular?

A. Direct deposit (electronic fund transfer) of checks is a very good idea. It is gaining in use for several reasons including the fact that virtually all new claims must use direct deposit. Direct deposit is convenient for the client, much safer and far less expensive to the government than paper checks.

Q. I have an appointment scheduled to file for widow's benefits. Should I mail my documents in before?

A. No. If your appointment is in-person at the office you should bring your documents with you. If you have a telephone appointment the representative will mail the application to you for your signature and then you would send any needed documents with the completed application. Social Security must see original documents but they are returned to you. Original means the actual document, such as your copy of a marriage certificate, or a copy which has been certified by the state or county as being a true copy of office records and bearing an official seal. A photocopy which you made yourself is not acceptable nor can Social Security accept notary copies.

A Tale Of Two Stories

A recent issue of the Grand Forks Herald carried a story on a proposal by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to purchase two private parcels of land totaling 324 acres on Garden Island in the Northwest Angle area of Lake of the Woods. Presently the state owns 402 acres on the Island which is under jurisdiction of the DNR as the Northwest Angle State Forest.

The remaining 36 acres of the island belong to the Red Lake Indian Reservation.

The story stated that regional administrator Paul Swenson of the DNR envisioned a state recreation area on the island. A day use area on the west side of the island is presently provided by the DNR, but a sheltered cove on the east end is considered a better site since it has a steeper drop off and a nice beach.

Residents of the Lake of the Woods area and other users of the island are cautiously optimistic regarding the purchase, favoring the public ownership and access but having reservations about how such access to the area might be affected following state acquisition.

They point to the DNR closing of the beach on Pine Island between Wheeler's Point and Morris Point when a nesting population of a threatened shorebird— the piping plover—was discovered there. Trees which harbored potential avian predators of the plovers were cut down as a further protection measure. A number of years later the area was reopened—sans dozens of trees—for swimming and picnicking during the day.

The article quoted Lake of the Woods County Commissioner Jeri Beckel as stating: "I'm afraid they're going to discover something on Garden Island and in five years, everything is going to change. Instead of being open to the public, big parts would be taken away."

Funny she should say that.

The same day that the Herald story ran, a story appeared in the Minneapolis Star Tribune headlined Fern find may change rec-area plans. The story announced that "A rare species of fern has been discovered on the northern Minnesota site where the first state-run recreation area for off-highway vehicles (OHVs) is planned, prompting officials to order an environmental impact study before construction can begin."

The 1,200-acre site near Gilbert was to be developed by the DNR as a state recreation area for all-terrain vehicles, motorcycles and four-wheel-drive trucks at a cost of about $2.2 million.

Discovery of several hundred specimens of the small St. Lawrence grape fern growing on iron ore tailings dumps was made by Deborah Shubat, a botanist at the University of Minnesota —Duluth, who was looking for rare plant species under contract with the DNR. The identity was confirmed by Herbert Wagner, a University of Michigan botanist considered an expert on ferns of the Botrychium genus.

Opponents of the OHV project had been calling for an environmental impact study, claiming that DNR studies had not addressed potential noise and other problems at the site. Now they will have one. DNR Commissioner Rod Sando has ordered an EIS by department personnel and outside consultants. The study is expected to take about nine months.

And who knows what else may turn up— perhaps an endangered insect which feeds only on the threatened ferns.

Census Facts For Thanksgiving....From '92

This is the technology age, right? It is the knowledge and information age, right? There are computers which operate so fast they can give you the answers almost before you can ask the questions, right? And the most willing buyer of these computers and this technology is the federal government, right?

So how come the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of the Census sends out this year—by FAX, yet—"Census Facts for Thanksgiving" with statistics for 1992? A hurried mental calculation, affirmed by desk calculator, indicates that Thanksgiving 1992 was five years ago. Shouldn't the Census Bureau have more up-to-date statistics than that!

We read just the other day that the U.S. Department of Defense had purchased a computer which was capable of handling something like 87 billion calculations per second. Assuming that even the military would have a problem inputting to the capacity of that computer, maybe the Census Bureau could buy a fraction of a second of time on that computer and update its turkey trivia for next year.

A Good Compromise Reached On Ditch 83

The decision made by the Red Lake Watershed District board last Wednesday regarding the repair of State Ditch 83 appears to be a good compromise. Everyone seemed to take a little something away from the table that made them feel better.

The board could feel it was responsive to public sentiment; the petitioners were assured that the survey on their petition would continue and that work would be done this winter to remove obstructions from the channel, and the downstream landowners and others upset with the imminent loss of trees won't face clearcutting along the right-of-way without a hearing.

We are awaiting with interest to see what the Minnesota Audubon Council has to propose with the "flowage easements" it referred to in a letter to the watershed district. Audubon Council State Director Don Arnosti expected to be in this area on Tuesday, December 2, to visit individually with landowners about the concept.

For now, however, feathers have been smoothed and a truce prevails. That's an acceptable situation.

It has been a busy and happy household out at the Dave Korsson's. Their son Tim will be home on leave from the Air Force for 21 days. Dianne says she had a fun time taking care of their two granddaughters for a while.

Irene Carlson baked a luscious pie on Thursday and tried to call her neighbors to ask them over, but when she looked out they were already standing outside her door, they could smell the pie baking and coffee cooking. Walter Samson, Effie Handy and Emma Nyland were hungry and couldn't wait. People living at the Mall are noted for their "neighborliness".

It is good to look out the window in the evening and see lights in the house where Florence Berg lived before moving to California. Now Sandy and Dave Graff are our neighbors. Sandy and David were in California, the Cities and various other places before coming to Gully. We hope they'll like the peaceful little town and stay here permanently.

Arnold and Sanna Broveld visited at the Les and Carol Torgerson home in Thief River Falls on Saturday afternoon. They were also there to wish their granddaughter Sanna Gustafson a happy birthday. Larry and Carmen Gustafson were also there and so was Sanna's husband Tony.

Shirley Carver and Ruby Ostenaa of McIntosh visited and were noon luncheon guests at the Arnold Broveld home on Tuesday.

Mopar CUSTOMER CARE

Engine Coolant has to protect your car's cooling system from three things, freeze up, over heating and corrosion/rust damage.

Most coolant (commonly referred to as antifreeze) will continue to protect your vehicle's cooling system against freeze up and over heating for quite some time. But, because of the way coolant reacts differently to the various metals in the system, after about 24 months or 24,000 miles, coolant starts to lose its anti-corrosive properties.

That loss can cause damage to those various engine parts and metals, water pumps and their seals, cylinder head gaskets, aluminum components and frost plugs. When the corrosion builds it can come loose and start flowing through the system, it can build up in the heater core and cause a loss of the system's ability to properly produce heat. In the summer it may reduce the system's ability to keep the engine cool enough to run efficiently.

At Westside Motors we welcome the opportunity to inspect your vehicle's cooling system, and advise you if it's ready for the colder weather that has unfortunately arrived.

Almost 2,000 At Policemen's Ball

"A record-breaking attendance of nearly 2,000 persons was registered in the course of the evening at the first annual policemen's ball staged in the auditorium last Wednesday evening. Members of the committee on arrangements reported this week that the affair netted approximately $800, which will be devoted to the policemen's relief fund."

Used Clothing Drive Is Success

"Local residents responded in excellent style Wednesday to the appeal for used clothing for European relief, Rev. W. M. Pedersen, county chairman of the campaign, stated this morning. Huge quantities of garments were brought to the auditorium by Boy Scouts, and were sorted there last night by a large group of women. Rev. Pedersen appealed for men volunteers to assist with packing the clothing at the auditorium this evening and Friday. Collections of foods left at grocery stores will be picked up today."

Rotarians Enjoy Television Talk By Bell Official

"A prediction that there was a good possibility that television programs will be available for local reception in from one to three years was made by Stanley T. Vaill, executive assistant, area headquarters of Northwestern Bell Telephone company at Minneapolis, speaking before the Rotary club Tuesday noon in the Evelyn hotel.

"According to Mr. Vaill, there are now 16 television transmitters in operation in 12 cities of the United States, and construction permits have been granted for transmitters in 64 other cities. It is estimated that there are about 100,000 television receivers in the country at this time and radio manufacturers expect to produce about 250,000 more in 1947 that will sell for from $250 to $1,500."

Sons Of Norway To Note 40th Anniversary With Program

"Snorre Lodge No. 70, Sons of Norway, will celebrate its 40th anniversary Thursday evening, December 11, Herman A. Kjos, president, stated today. Invitations have been mailed out to Sons of Norway lodges at Oklee, Gonvick and Halstad, as well as to the Daughters of Norway."

Open House For Mercy Hospital Annex Monday

"Residents of this community will see a modern efficient hospital unit next Monday, December 8, when they attend open house at the 20 bed Mercy hospital annex now being put into operation. While the addition is a temporary structure of the quonset type, the board of trustees stated that every feature had been provided to ensure the comfort and efficient treatment of the patients.

"The board also pointed out that all equipment is of the best type available and can be continued in use later when permanent construction is undertaken."

Jaycees To Hold Wild Game Dinner

"Members of the Thief River Falls Junior Chamber of Commerce will be hosts to their ladies at their annual wild game dinner Saturday evening at 7:30 in the Civic and Commerce association rooms. Vic Jung, appointed by President Justus Larson to take charge of arrangements, announced that the menu will include venison, bear, beaver and muskrat meat as well as a fine duck."

FROM THE NEW CITY

THE NEWS, HENRY W. LEE, EDITOR — DECEMBER 8, 1897
THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA

That Amount Can Be Earned By Country Schools

"The superintendent of public instruction has just issued circular blanks to the county superintendents of schools throughout the state for convenience in carrying out the provisions of the law passed by the last legislature, giving $50 aid to those rural school districts who come up to a certain standard of excellence. The county superintendents are to fill in the blanks, certify to the correctness of the facts and add their endorsement in the case of those who are entitled to the reward.

"The law provides that districts receiving aid shall not be located in any incorporated village or city, and must be common school districts. There must have been eight months of school and the teacher must hold a first grade certificate. Suitable building, a library and apparatus necessary to efficient work are essentials. The state superintendent recommends thoroughness in common branches rather than their neglect for high school studies.

"The first apportionment under the new law will be made in August 1898 and will be based on the work and the condition of the school for the year ending July 31, 1898.

"There is a great deal of interest in the matter among the rural teachers and many schools are expected to qualify and to receive the aid. Not more than one-fifth of the schools in any county can be aided in the same year."

Rams edge TRF in overtime

Thief River Falls came close to knocking off highly regarded Roseau Friday in the 1997-98 high school hockey season opener for both teams at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center, but close wasn't good enough for Scott Berglund, who was making his debut as the Prowlers' head coach.

Roseau won it 3-2 on a David Klema goal at 1:42 of overtime.

The two teams skated to a 1-1 first period tie on goals by the Prowlers' Wade Chiodo and the Rams' David Lundbohm that were spaced just 21 seconds apart at the start of the game.

Lundbohm scored again early in the second period and Roseau went up 3-1 on a goal by Phillip Carlson at 4:16 of the third period before the Prowlers came back for a tie on two goals in a 78-second span by Kyle Anderson.

"I thought they (Prowlers) worked hard," offered Berglund, "but we're not real happy with the results. If we would have played 45 minutes we would have won the hockey game. We didn't play as strongly as well in the second period, and that cost us the game."

Chiodo added a pair of assists to his game-opening goal for a three-point night.

"There were some positives, but there were some negatives, too," said Berglund. "You can't be satisfied with just being close."

Wapiti Snowmobile Trail route altered from TRF, Goodridge

The Wapiti Snowmobile Trail between Thief River Falls and Goodridge has been moved, effective Dec. 1.

The trail now begins at the Eighth Street boat landing area in Thief River Falls and follows Highway 1 east four miles. B/G-MR girls beat Roseau in opener

Four Badger/Greenbush-Middle River scorers hit double figures Monday as the Gators opened the 1997-98 girls high school basketball season with a 67-57 win over visiting Roseau.

Tiffany Hagen led the balanced attack for the winners with 18 points, while Stefanie Sparby had 17, Kara Kuzma 16 and Melissa Smith 12.

But it wasn't a smooth ride for the Gators, who turned the ball over 24 times and committed 28 fouls, which led to 38 Roseau free throws.

"It wasn't pretty," said Badger/Greenbush-Middle River coach Tom Nethimer. "I don't know if it was the first-game jitters, the fact I got a late start because of football (he's on the staff of the Gators' football team that reached the state playoff semifinals), or just that it was a Monday night, but we didn't play very well. We have to play a lot better than that."

Kristi Glassmann scored 17 points, Ada Anderson 15 and Tanya Ulvin 13 for the Rams.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River started with a 14-4 first quarter lead and led by as many as 15 in the second quarter before Tina Sikorski went to the bench with her third personal foul. Minus the one starter, the Gators watched the scoreboard gap shrink to three. But the Rams, who trailed 30-21 at halftime and 48-41 through three quarters, could never complete the comeback.

Wolverines collect second win, 64-58

Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke picked up its second win in as many starts Monday when the Wolverines beat Lake of the Woods 64-58 in a girls high school basketball game played at Grygla.

Kathryn Stanley, a 5-8 junior, scored 28 points and grabbed 8 rebounds for the Wolverines, who opened the 1997-98 season with a 79-39 win over Marshall County Central.

Angie Gast added a 15-point, 7-rebound performance, Dana Wiseth contributed 11 points and Annie Kimba matched Stanley for team-high rebound honors for the winners, who led at the quarter stops 13-11, 35-34 and 48-40.

"They (Bears) have four starters who are six-feet or taller," pointed out Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke coach Mike Gast. "So rebounding was a concern. But we hit the boards pretty well, and our press helped. We forced them to turn the ball over a few times, and we threw some fouls. The girls played hard the whole game."

The Wolverines were 25-for-55 from the field (45 percent). Both teams had trouble at the free throw line, were Goodridge/Grygla-Gatzke was 14-for-31 and Lake of the Woods went 12-for-25.

RLCC girls roll past Clearbrook-Gonvick

Red Lake County Central jumped out to a 22-5 first quarter lead Monday and rolled to a 62-30 girls high school basketball win over Clearbrook-Gonvick.

The visiting Mustangs had a 40-14 halftime cushion and were up 53-24 through three quarters.

"We played pretty well," said Red Lake County Central coach Rick Koivisto. "Our press was pretty effective in the first half."

That press led to 25 Clearbrook-Gonvick turnovers, and limited the host Bears to just 37 field goal attempts.

Katie O'Neill, a 5-6 senior, had a 17-point, 9-rebound game for the Mustangs, while sophomores Sylvia Hilgeman and Heather Schiefert added 12 and 11 points, respectively, to the Red Lake County Central total. It was Schiefert's varsity debut.

"Our young kids are getting a chance to play," noted Koivisto, who started three sophomores. "That should help us down the line."

Red Lake County Central was 25-for-67 from the field (37 percent) and 10-for-15 at the free throw line. Clearbrook-Gonvick made 11 of 37 field goal attempts (30 percent) and sank just 7 of 21 free throws. The Mustangs had a 35-20 rebound advantage, and turned the ball over only eight times.

It was the second outing of the 1997-98 season for the Mustangs, who lost their opener to a strong Tri-County team 80-44 last week.

Area bear hunt harvest figures posted by DNR

Hunters in northwest Minnesota registered a total of 643 black bears during the 1997 season – from Sept. 1 through Oct. 12 – it was reported by the Department of Natural Resources. This is a 60 percent increase over the 401 bears harvested from the same area in 1996, but 51 percent fewer than the northwest region's record harvest of 1,304 bears in 1995.

These figures reflect those of recent statewide harvests. The 1996 statewide harvest was only 1,874, while the record statewide harvest of 4,956 was set in 1995. The 1997 statewide harvest of 3,100 bears was the third highest on record, and only 75 behind the second highest harvest set in 1992.

According to Dave Garshelis, black bear specialist with the Minnesota DNR Forest Wildlife Population & Research Group at Grand Rapids, bear harvest results are not directly connected to population levels.

"It's almost exclusively a product of food availability," explained Garshelis. "In years when berries and other natural foods are scarce, bears are more attracted to bait stations set out by hunters.

"That's what happened in 1995, when the state record bear harvest was set," Garshelis continued. "And just the opposite occurred last year (1996); food conditions were excellent and fewer bears were drawn to bait stations."

"1995 and 1996 were two of the most extreme years we've every seen as far as food conditions across the entire bear range," said Dave Schad, DNR Forest Wildlife Program Leader in St. Paul. "1995 was one of the worst food years in recent history, and 1996 was one of the best. 1997 was a more normal year as far as food conditions, bear activity and hunter success."

DNR wildlife researchers took advantage of those normal conditions this year to update their bear census data with a tetracycline study.

Tetracycline is an antibiotic commonly used to treat a variety of infections in both humans and animals. During June and July, DNR wildlife managers set out bear bait containing tetracycline capsules all across the black bear range in central and northern Minnesota. It doesn't harm the bears, but does leave a trace of blue coloration inside their bones and teeth.

This season, the DNR required hunters to send in a rib and a tooth from the bears they harvested. By comparing the number of bone and tooth samples with blue coloration to those without, researchers can better calculate their bear population.

The last tetracycline study was done in 1991. Computer-based population modeling had estimated the 1997 Minnesota black bear population at around 23,000 – a nearly three-fold increase since 1980 when the statewide population was estimated at 8,000.

"Minnesota has a healthy bear population with good reproduction and excellent habitat conditions," explained Schad. "Much of the logging activity and forest management practices that have benefited whitetail deer populations in the forested regions of the state have also been good for the bears."

Arbor Day Foundation offers brochure on trees

National Arbor Day Foundation has published a Conservation Trees booklet which is available to the public free of charge.

"This brochure is a central part of the foundation's educational project and serves as a useful guide for people in all areas whether they live in America's largest cities or in the country," states John Rosenow, president of the foundation.

The booklet uses colorful photos and illustrations and easy-to-understand descriptions to help people plant and care for conservation trees. Contents of the guide include:

- How to use shade trees and windbreaks to save energy in the home;
- How to attract songbirds to the yard;
- How to save trees during construction;
- How to save topsoil and help farm profits with shelterbelts.
- The right way to plant trees.
- The right way to prune trees.

"The National Arbor Day Foundation's Conservation Trees program encourages Americans to plant, manage and preserve trees to conserve soil, energy, water, wildlife and the atmosphere," Rosenow said.

For a copy of the free booklet, send name and address to Conservation Trees, The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

Successful deer hunt for 86-year-old Carl Burrell of Middle River found him downing a six-point buck this fall. He didn't have a doe permit, so it took eight days before he filled his tag – an almost yearly occurrence for the lifetime hunter, despite the loss of sight in one eye, which he says it simply adds to the challenge. Past success and confidence in his 6mm, which Burrell says is the best gun he's ever used, helps overcome the odds.

The Otto Bremer Foundation is a private charitable foundation established in 1944 by Otto Bremer. Its giving is concentrated on programs that benefit communities in Minnesota, North Dakota and northwestern Wisconsin served by Bremer Financial Corporation which is owned by the Otto Bremer Foundation and employees of Bremer First American banks, agencies and trusts.

The foundation gives priority to programs which help to broaden understanding around the issues of racism. Although its commitment to the countryside and rural communities dominates the foundation's grantmaking, support is also given to programs that address the issue of poverty in the city of St. Paul.

In general, the foundation supports programs in the area of community affairs, human services, health and higher education.

RL Watershed board to attend state meeting

Six members of the board of managers of the Red Lake Watershed District and administrator Lowell Enerson will attend the annual meeting of the Minnesota Association of Watershed Districts (MAWD) December 4, 5 and 6 at the Radisson Arrowwood resort at Alexandria.

Board members attending will be Leonard Moe, Marshall county, Russell Sander, East Polk county, Vernon Johnson, Clearwater county, Wally Jorgenson, West Polk county, Richard Daugherty, Beltrami county, and Dan Schirrick, Red Lake county. Unable to attend is Greg Hilgeman, Pennington county, who chairs the board.

"We are expecting to talk to other managers from around the state, particularly about issues such as impoundments, drainage and water quality," administrator Enerson, said. "The information we get at the annual meeting helps improve the performance of our watershed district during the rest of the year."

The meeting will feature a keynote address from James Franklin, director of the Division of Emergency Management for the Minnesota Department of Public Safety, on "Lessons from the Flood of 1997." Participants will also be able to attend a variety of mini-sessions on topics such as the study of lakes, stormwater utilities, legal rulemaking and water quality monitoring.

Also included at the annual meeting will be a general business meeting, discussion of resolutions and a trade show.

Watershed districts are local units of government based on natural boundaries of watersheds. Red Lake Watershed District includes all of Red Lake county and portions of Beltrami, Clearwater, Marshall, Polk, Pennington, Itasca, Mahnomen, Roseau and Koochiching counties.

Paul Eugene Green, 20, Thief River Falls, was charged with consumption under age. Nicholas Adam Durbin, 18, Thief River Falls, was charged with consumption under age and no Minnesota driver's license.

On November 29 at 12:50 a.m. officers at a dance at Highlanding town hall observed several people around some vehicles. Upon investigation the following were charged with consumption under age: Bobby Jo Terken, 19, Thief River Falls, Tracy Lee Koivisto, 19, Thief River Falls, and Adna Lynn Olson, 19, Edmore, ND.

On November 29 at 1:30 a.m. three individuals were stopped while getting into a vehicle. A case of beer was observed in the vehicle. Tony Darwin Kiesow, 21, Goodridge, was charged with gross misdemeanor furnishing, and William Richard Stanley, 20, Grygla, was charged with consumption under age and open bottle.

On November 29 at 1:32 a.m. a sheriff's deputy driving on Arnold Avenue observed two young females carrying beer and getting into a vehicle. The following were charged with consumption under age: Aaron Herbert Holthusen, 19, Thief River Falls, Jessie Mylan Lunsetter, 18, Gatzke, two 16 year old females of Thief River Falls, and one 17 year old female of Thief River Falls.

On December 2 at 12:43 a.m. police made a traffic stop and Ross Lemonde McPipe, 19, Thief River Falls, faces a charge of consumption under age in a motor vehicle.

Firearms. On November 25 at 10 a.m. law enforcement officials executed a search warrant at a rural Sanders township residence. Robert Hinden, 36, Thief River Falls, was arrested and faces charges of felon in possession of firearms. The case remains under investigation.

Assault. On November 27 at 9:11 p.m. police arrested Kenneth Louis Grulet, Thief River Falls, on a warrant for gross misdemeanor assault. The charge stems from an incident at a local establishment on November 1. The male victim went to the hospital with a bruised jaw.

Burglary. On November 25 police charged three juvenile males in connection with a residential burglary that occurred on October 11. During that burglary a CD case and 18 CDs were taken. A 14 year old male faces a charge of burglary. Another 14 year old male faces charges of possession of stolen property and sale of stolen property. A 15 year old male faces a charge of sale of stolen property.

Accidents. On November 26 at 1:35 p.m. police received a report of an accident at Second Street and LaBree Avenue. Kathryn Lynn Christianson, Thief River Falls, was driving a car south on LaBree, when Harold Thomas Anderson of Greenbush drove his car away from the curb to go south and the vehicles collided. Police estimated damages at $700 to the Christianson vehicle and $600 to the Anderson vehicle.

On November 27 at 12:05 p.m. the sheriff's department received a report of an accident three-tenths of a mile west of County road 10 on State Aid 3 in Bray township. Steven Phillip Hess, Grand Forks, ND, was driving a 1991 BMW east on State Aid 3 when the vehicle hit a patch of ice. Hess lost control and the car went into the south ditch. He was not injured. The sheriff's department estimated damage to the vehicle at $5,000.

Driving while intoxicated. On November 27 at 10:27 a.m. State Patrol charged Christopher Carl Peterson, 23, Alexandria, with driving while intoxicated.

Thefts. On December 1 at 4:30 a.m. police received a report of a speaker and booster stolen from a vehicle parked in an alley near the 300 block of St. Paul Avenue. The theft loss was estimated at $280.

These reports include names of individuals charged, arrested or cited with various crimes and offenses by police, the sheriff's department or other law enforcement officials. Depending upon the circumstances of a case, charges can be, and sometimes are, changed or dropped by law enforcement officials or attorneys even before the case reaches court. Readers should also realize that under the American system of jurisprudence, individuals charged with crimes are innocent until proven guilty of those crimes in a court of law.

For the past two years, cross-country ski enthusiasts have attempted to maintain a cross-country ski trail on the Greenwood trail system, which is located behind Greenwood Cemetery. This year, signs have been put up in an attempt to encourage its use as a cross-country ski trail and as a caution to snowmobilers passing through the area.

Safe & Sober campaign begins fourth year

Minnesota's Safe & Sober Campaign began its fourth year on Tuesday. The campaign combines overtime traffic enforcement with public education initiatives to reduce impaired driving and increase safety belt use.

Attending the kick-off ceremony in St. Paul were U.S. Congressman Jim Ramsted, Lt. Governor Joanne Benson, Public Safety Commissioner Don Davis, Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) State Chair Cal Haworth, 175 law enforcement officers, along with the campaign's traffic safety partners from MADD, the Minnesota Trucking Association, and the Minnesota Telephone Association.

The fourth year of Safe & Sober signifies the importance of traffic enforcement as a crime and injury prevention tool. "The Safe & Sober message for 1998 is that crashes are not accidents," stated Public Safety Commissioner Don Davis. "In 1996, 36 percent of traffic crashes involved alcohol. There is nothing accidental about an impaired driver being involved in a crash. It is predictable and 100 percent preventable." Law enforcement officers, as well as MADD members will work to change the language used by Minnesotans. "If we can eliminate the word 'accident' in relation to traffic crashes, maybe we will get one step closer to changing the public's perception," remarked MADD State Chair Cal Haworth. "It may seem like a minor detail, but we think it can make a big difference in changing attitudes. After all, we don't refer to airline tragedies as plane accidents'."

During the first wave of the Safe & Sober Campaign's fourth year, law enforcement officers will work overtime to keep impaired drivers off Minnesota roadways. While MADD, with assistance from the Minnesota Trucking Association, will focus on the prevention of drunk driving with their "Tie One On For Safety" red ribbon campaign. In support of MADD's yearly campaign, Safe & Sober law enforcement will feature red ribbons on their squad cars throughout the holiday season. To assist the public education efforts of Safe & Sober, the Minnesota Telephone Association (Minnesota Wireless Technology Group) is distributing Safe Driving Tip cards to over 200,000 cellular phone users throughout the state.

The Safe & Sober campaign is a national and statewide campaign sponsored by the Minnesota Department of Public Safety and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Each agency uses four waves of enhanced enforcement combined with public education activities to reduce crash-related deaths and injuries.

REGULAR BOARD MEETING
November 10, 1997
7:00 p.m.
S.D.S.C. Conference Room A

A Regular Board Meeting of Independent School District #564 was held on Monday, November 10, 1997, at 7:00 p.m. in Conference Room A of the School District Service Center.

The following Board members were present: Carl Clark, Hank Hallstrom, Jean Larson, Cheryl Lee, Darla Twomey and Steve Young. Also present was Dr. Jerry Robicheau, Superintendent of Schools.

Chairperson Carl Clark called the meeting to order and Clerk Jean Larson established that a quorum was present.

A motion was made by J. Larson and seconded by S. Young to approve the agenda as amended. Motion carried unanimously.

The following were recognized for their recent donations to the Early Childhood Family Education Program: United Way for $1,100; Women of Today for $325, VFW for $223 to purchase helmets for Safety Town and the AAL Branch #1660 for donating matching funds of $700 for the Fred Penner Concert. The Eagles was also recognized for donating $1,200 to the district's Close-Up Program. VFW Post #2703 was thanked for presenting colors at all home football games throughout the season as was the EMT Service for providing emergency services free of charge.

Hank Hallstrom reported on behalf of the Northwest Service Coop noting that Bob Larson's contract as director was renewed for another year. Hank also reported that Jan Feil has been hired to assist districts with implementation of the grad rule.

Jean Larson reported on behalf of the "Your Community Schools" initiative noting that the purpose of this program is to improve and enhance public trust in the public school system primarily through teachers becoming more involved in their communities.

Superintendent Robicheau reviewed the request of the Minnesota School Boards Association to help fund a study of school finance. The study would take place over a two-year period. Jerry also reviewed the process to develop a profile and hire a Principal for Franklin Middle School noting that the staff at Franklin is currently gathering information about what they feel should be the attributes and characteristics of a principal. Input for the profile will also be solicited from the Board, community and other staff members. The goal is to have the position posted in January. Jerry reviewed the recommendation to establish and post for an Ag Education Teacher noting that recruitment will be necessary. A committee with community involvement will be formed to serve in an advisory capacity and provide input regarding the position and development of curriculum for the program. Jerry noted that an ad will be placed in the Times thanking the community for passage of the levy. The ad, which will be paid for by the Citizens Committee, was endorsed by the Board.

A Christmas Like Nun-Other is written for local audience

Written and directed by producer Kari Frisch, A Christmas Like Nun-Other will be presented as a holiday dinner theater December 8-11 at the American Legion club rooms in Thief River Falls.

Each night will have the same schedule of a social from 6 to 6:30 p.m., dinner of chicken roll-up or sliced prime rib served at 6:30 and the show to follow at 7:30 p.m. Some tickets at $15 each for the dinner and show remain available and may be reserved by calling 681-6683 or 681-4051.

Presenting the show written for local audiences will be That's Entertainment, a local production company which has previously presented Nunsense I and Nunsense II: The Second Coming with sell-out performances. This presentation will include lots of Christmas music and loads of laughter.

"Doing a Christmas show is something we've wanted to do for quite a while now," notes Deb Jacobson, who plays the Reverend Mother. "I'm glad it has finally become a reality." Jacobson is an instructor at Northland Community and Technical College and serves as technical director the show.

"The whole cast contributed to the final script," Frisch said. "These ladies are so talented that it was fun to watch the show grow as each actress added her own flair to the text. It's fun to work with such a talented ensemble."

Music selected for the show emphasizes the natural blend of voices in the cast, Frisch adds. "I think one of the things people will be most impressed with is the musical harmony. There are some beautiful songs in this show," she said.

"There's local humor and audience participation and, of course, a few surprises," adds Sally Erickson, who plays Sister Holly Jolly. The show combines moments of seriousness with the good-hearted humor as the Little Sisters of Thief River Falls find themselves in a predicament when the children who were supposed to perform are suddenly unable to do so. What ensues is described as "convent chaos."

Another veteran performer, Diane Haven of Newfolden, plays Sister Mary Prancer. "It's easy to be part of a cast that has such chemistry," she said. "We're like family. The chemistry shines through when we're on stage together."

Frisch praised the talents of accompanist Marilyn Wigness, who is cast as Sister Mary Melody and whose talents go far beyond following the notes written on the score.

"Marilyn learned to play piano by ear, which has been a God-send to us when we've needed to transpose music," Frisch said.

Although playing for the show requires a large time commitment, Wigness says that after six weeks of rehearsal she has "never heard such gorgeous harmony."

New to this production is Sharon Stauss, who will be running the lights. The next step, according to Frisch, will be to get her on stage.

MN farmers encouraged to cast commodity votes soon

Minnesota farmers are being encouraged by Commissioner of Agriculture Gene Hugoson to cast ballots by mail in the barley, beef, corn, soybean and wheat commodity council elections in the next several months.

"Until last year," Commissioner Hugoson said, "producers of each commodity went to the polls to vote for their promotional council members as they would in other elections. However, due to low participation, the process was switched to a mail-in vote.

"Farmers who voted last year will automatically receive ballots in the mail for this election. Those who didn't vote a year ago can still participate this year by requesting a ballot from the Minnesota Department of Agriculture."

Hugoson said the new balloting procedure for electing directors to the commodity councils was a big success last year. He hopes this year's election continues to have strong farmer participation.

"It's important for farmers to have a say in who is out there promoting their commodities," he said.

Farmers who didn't vote last year but wish to vote this year can receive a ballot by filling out a request card and mailing it to the MDA by March 17, 1998. Request cards are available at all county extension offices, commodity council offices and in several agricultural publications, or by calling MDA at 612-296-6883 and requesting a ballot.

To contact commodity council offices for request cards, call the following offices: Barley and Wheat Research and Promotion Offices, 218-253-4311 or 1-800-242-6118; Beef Research and Promotion Office, 612-851-6080; Corn Research and Promotion Office, 612-417-2676; and Soybean Research and Promotion Office, 507-388-1635.

If producers completed request cards and received 1997 elections ballots, there is no need to complete new request cards. However, if information has changed since then or if producers did not receive 1997 ballots, they should complete request cards and return them to the MDA.

Request cards may be sent to: Promotion Councils, Minnesota Department of Agriculture, 90 West Plato Boulevard, St. Paul, MN 55107-2094.

Groups study plan to reduce air pollution

Minnesota's environment will benefit from an agreement between the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA), the gas pipeline industry and a local environmental group.

Viking Gas (a subsidiary of Northern States Power) recently agreed to reduce the amount of nitrogen oxides emitted from compressor stations in Minnesota. The company was interested in adding new technology to reduce emissions as production of natural gas increases.

Leslie Davis of Earth Protectors, a Minneapolis-based environmental group, worked with the MPCA and representatives of Viking and NSP to develop the plan, which will take effect in 1998.

Currently, the company uses large engines to compress the gas, which causes it to flow through the pipeline system. By updating equipment, training operators and adding new natural-gas-fired turbine engines at some compressor stations, the company expects to greatly reduce emissions of nitrogen oxides. One new natural-gas-fired turbine emits about 25-30 tons of nitrogen oxides per year, compared to 330-700 tons per year for an existing older engine. Viking also plans to install new technology on the older engines, which will further reduce emissions.

Northern Natural Gas, which also operates gas pipelines in Minnesota, has also agreed to reduce emissions in the future.

The aim of the agreement, said Peder Larson, Commissioner of the MPCA, is to allow business to operate efficiently and in a cost-effective way, while reducing emissions by hundreds of tons per year.

Representatives of Viking Gas and NSP were pleased with the agreement and expressed satisfaction at being able to reduce air pollution while providing an increased supply of natural gas to their customers. Earth Protectors' Davis noted that the agreement will bring cleaner air to Minnesotans without reducing natural gas service.

Truckers join MADD and State in fight

Over 10,000 of Minnesota's truck drivers began flying red ribbons in support of Mothers Against Drunk Driving's (MADD) "Tie One On for Safety" campaign.

The ribbons, tied to truck antennas, door handles and mirrors, remind motorists of a simple yet important holiday safety message: Don't drink and drive.

"The trucking industry is absolutely committed to keeping drunk drivers off the road," said MTA President John Hausladen. "That is why we fought for and support random drug and alcohol testing for all of our drivers. The good news is the program is getting results."

In a random roadside government study, only two-tenths of one percent of all truck drivers tested showed even the slightest measurable amount of alcohol in their systems. When it comes to alcohol, truck drivers have a safety record that is 15 times better than other motorists. The federal government reports that of all fatal crashes involving alcohol, truck drivers were intoxicated in only 1.3 percent of the incidents compare to 19.2 percent of the car drivers.

Lakehead pipeline looks to expand

Lakehead Pipe Line has notified Pennington County Commissioners of a possible expansion. According to a letter sent to commissioners, the company is looking at expanding its crude petroleum pipeline through the area. Construction of the 36-inch pipeline is tentatively scheduled for 1999, although segments may be built in advance during 1998.

The company states in its letter that it will notify property owners describing the plans. They anticipate making personal contact with landowners and many public officials starting in early 1998. The letter states that the expansion program is a response to a continual rise in U.S. demand for crude petroleum from Western Canada, and is expected to cost $580 million.

Motorized vehicles, specifically snowmobiles, are not allowed to cross the Hertz Park bridge in Thief River Falls — yet. The Thief River Falls City Council has approved its use temporarily and under a number of conditions, which have not been met yet.

S.D. 564 begins steps to implement Grad Rule

More frequent meetings will be held by School District 564 in Thief River Falls to discuss progress toward integrating the new grad rule into the system. Tuesday night during a special board meeting, those changes were described as "monumental".

During the meeting, Glenn Chodo, coordinator of educational services, said that the grad rule standards have to be embedded in the curriculum before June. In addition, the board has to approve a number of policies for the school district, implement a plan for remedial courses, and be committed to extended staff development. Because of the amount of work that needs to be done before June, Chodo said it is vitally important that the subject be on the board's agenda much more frequently.

Board members were presented with a complete set of the standards called "Profiles of Learning" for each level. Chodo reviewed some of the definitions and said he is in the process of creating a steering committee to help teach teachers how to look at the performance packages and how to implement standards into their coursework. He said there are a lot of frustrated teachers out there, but he had to give them credit because there's a lot to do and a lot of questions.

Carl Clark, board chairman, asked how the district deals with students who do not achieve a standard.

Chodo said it was a frequently asked question. He suggested having the standards at different levels to give students a greater opportunity for achieving the standard. As he sees it, the only way a student would not pass a level, he said, was by not doing it or not wanting to do it. Even if the student does not perform the standard well, he or she still passes.

In response to a question from board member Steve Young, Chodo said there are different levels of passing. Teachers, he said, will have to make the determination of where on a scale of four a student fits. There are no models to draw from, so teachers will have to sit down and review the levels. Interest has been tested for awhile. It's not a perfect system, he said. Changes are being made almost daily, which is another reason for more frequent sessions with the school board.

He explained that, for students, what isn't accomplished between kindergarten and grade 8 will not affect an individual's chances for graduation. What counts towards graduation is how they perform in grades 9 through 12. To graduate, a student must demonstrate 24 competencies even though there are 48. The school board of School District 564 may change that requirement, but according to state requirements students must demonstrate 24 competencies.

There are a lot of things to accomplish before the system goes into effect in June, Chodo said.

Teachers have been informed of what it will take to have the program in place. The goals for this year include a preliminary map of standards in curriculum by Christmas, implementation of one standard in each teacher's plan, and training sessions. Chodo also said he is creating an assessment team specialist at each building to assist teachers.

Preparation for the June deadline goes beyond implementing the program; parents must also be aware of the changes. Chodo said his plans are to have more meetings with parents to explain the grad rule, appear on more radio shows, and prepare a number of news releases explaining the grad rule.

School Board for 564 began adding their input to the development of a list of characteristics that would like to see in a principal for Franklin Middle School. School District Superintendent [illegible] said he would like to advertise for a principal by January and have somebody on board by April.

Graduation standards in plain English

(Editor's Note: Minnesota Graduation Standards are being referred to frequently in education news. In Connections, a recent publication by the Minnesota Department of Children, Families and Learning, an article reviews the "The Grad Standards in plain English." We are reprinting the article here for its general public interest.)

What are Graduation Standards and why should I care?

Graduation Standards are consistent expectations that all Minnesota public school students are held to at all grade levels. They focus on making sure every child has the basic skills necessary to survive in a changing world but also that every child is stretched and challenged to be ready as an adult to offer the world all the best she or he has to give.

Graduation Standards are good news for your child. They mean that state law now requires that the nuts and bolts of reading, writing and mathematics must be mastered because these skills have always helped people succeed. But beyond the basics, the Graduation Standards mean that your child will learn about science and history and citizenship and the arts, as you did in your school days, and that teachers must more clearly relate that content to the everyday world that your child inhabits now and will in the future.

Most importantly, the Graduation Standards emphasize to your child

Little interest in tax hearing shown

Two people attended the Truth in Taxation hearing for School District 564 Tuesday night. After completing this legally required meeting, the district certified its levy, and adopted its 1998 budget at its next meeting. The 1997, payable 1998 levy is expected to raise $3,421,493.83.

At the Truth in Taxation hearing, it was explained that statements of proposed property taxes mailed to residents recently did not include an adjustment for the levy approved by voters last month. Harry Nelson, business manager for the district, said many people may be wondering what will be happening to their taxes as a result. When the levy is transferred to statements, he said, many residents may be surprised to discover a decrease in their taxes from the school district. Nelson said it is caused by a tax classification shift, and a new education homestead tax credit.

There are many factors that contribute to property tax in Minnesota. Those factors include local spending, market value of property, tax classification rates, tax capacity, and state aid.

However, prior to the levy referendum, the district published a tax impact chart. According to the chart for residents, homesteads, apartments and commercial-industrial properties, the dollar increase on a market value of $20,000 was $10, $12 on a market value of $25,000, $15 on a market value of $30,000, $20 on a market value of $40,000, $25 on a market value of $50,000, $30 on a market value of $60,000, $35 on a market value of $70,000, $37 on a market value of $75,000, $40 on a market value of $80,000, $44 on a market value of $90,000, $49 on a market value of $100,000, $62 on a market value of $125,000, $74 on a market value of $150,000, $99 on a market value of $200,000, $124 on a market value of $250,000, $247 on a market value of $500,000, and $491 on a market value of $1 million.

The tax impact on farmland is different. Assuming that the market value of an average farmhouse, garage and surrounding one acre of land is $51,000, the annual dollar increases for typical agricultural properties in the district are as follows: $31 on a referendum market value of $61,800, $36 on a referendum market value of $73,050, $68 on a referendum market value of $136,750, $117 on a referendum market value of $236,750, $166 on a referendum market value of $336,750, $216 on a referendum market value of $436,750, $265 on a referendum market value of $536,750, $315 on a referendum market value of $636,750 and $364 on a referendum market value of $736,750.

Property owners in the district may also be confused by a list of six different numbers on their preliminary statement of proposed taxes. Nelson said he wasn't sure why the six different numbers were listed. He said the validity of the numbers for School District 564 is not very good, but if residents add up the total it's close.

School District 564 is proposing to raise $2,498,224 by its 1998 levy for its general fund, an increase of $63,430.21 or 2.61 percent over last year. The local property tax, however, accounts for only 17 percent of revenues to the general fund. Other sources of revenue for the general fund include the state (73.3 percent), Federal government (5.4 percent), and other local or county funds (4.3 percent).

General fund revenues are spent on salaries and benefits (84.6 percent), travel (1.1 percent), payments to other districts (1.6 percent), equipment (1.3 percent), utilities (3.9 percent), instructional supplies (3.5 percent), contracted services (1.7 percent), and miscellaneous other (2.3 percent).

In the overall scheme of things, the general fund accounts for 76.4 percent of all spending in the district. Federal and state law prescribes much of how that money is spent. By fund, however, the district is proposing to spend $12,441,561 in its general fund, $688,102 on capital projects, $538,699 on food, $2,192,906 on debt, $400,318 on community education, and $6,900 on trusts.

The levy, as certified at its next board meeting following the Truth in Taxation hearing, is expected to raise $3,421,493.83.

Salvation Army rings in holiday season

by David Hill
Associate Editor

The sound of bells can be heard from churches — and stores this holiday season. Salvation Army volunteers in Pennington County are in the process of raising funds for the local organization.

Thief River Falls Police Chief Ken Froschheiser, who is also chairman of the local Salvation Army Service Unit, would like to encourage individuals or organizations to ring the bell at the kettle. He said it's very important that someone be there to remind everyone that the Salvation Army is in the community.

Last weekend, Froschheiser noted that when the local Boy Scouts were ringing the bells at the kettle at Kmart, the local service unit collected $664. When it isn't manned, the local unit is lucky to collect $100 in two days, he said.

Small kettles also can be found at numerous stores in the county, but volunteers are manning the large kettle at Kmart in Thief River Falls.

Funds raised through the kettle drive allows the local Salvation Army service unit to provide immediate emergency assistance. It is not the purpose of The Salvation Army to duplicate the work of other agencies, which is why many of the members belong to other service agencies in the community. The purpose of The Salvation Army in Thief River Falls is to fill needs not being met elsewhere.

The Salvation Army also strives to help the need in their communities resolve a crisis or emergency with practical aid, personal support and sincere compassion, such as during last spring's flood. During that emergency, local Salvation Army representatives made available to emergency officials a number of services, which included housing, clothing, food, and fuel to be given to those in need. During the recent fire at the Dohmer-Meehan building, The Salvation Army was there to provide housing and other assistance to fire victims.

The Salvation Army also provides assistance in other forms, such as Christmas presents for youngsters, summer camp, a holiday vacation program for the elderly, and a heat-share program.

The Salvation Army service unit is funded through donations, united funds, Christmas kettles and mail appeals. Funds received in the community are used within the community, but The Salvation Army has a much greater impact. Its representatives can be found providing assistance all over the world, wherever it is needed.

Representatives of several organizations, including the Ministerial Association, Thief River Falls City Council, Boy Scouts, Goodridge Lion's Club, Golden K, Kiwanis, and Lions clubs and many individual volunteers, are among those helping to make this Christmas special by volunteering to ring the Christmas Kettle bell at Kmart in Thief River Falls.

Christmas Kettle Chairperson Shannon Olson said she is very pleased with the support of the community. If anyone would like to volunteer their time to ring the bell at Kmart or help the Salvation Army, they can reach her at 681-2793.

Salvation Army awards Pat Owens with special award

On December 7, The Salvation Army will honor [illegible] of the outstanding [illegible] those who [illegible] [illegible] days of the year. The Holiday [illegible] Dinner will honor Art Berg, president of Invictus Communications, Inc., and a world class wheelchair athlete. Grand Forks Mayor Pat Owens will receive The Salvation Army "Others" award for exceptional service to her community.

On December 26, 1983 at the age of 21, Art Berg broke his neck in a serious automobile accident, leaving him quadriplegic. Ten years later Berg set a new world record by becoming the first quadriplegic to complete an ultra marathon of 325 miles.

The dinner, held at the Minneapolis Hilton Towers, will include volunteers, corporate and community leaders and donors who helped with the flood relief effort.

"These individuals — men and women of all ages and from every walk of life — rallied around The Salvation Army's Operation We Care [illegible]," said Lt. Colonel David Grindle, Northern Division Commander. "Many reached deep into their own financial resources. Others generously volunteered their time and talent. This was a remarkable reaffirmation of the American tradition of neighborly concern."

The theme for the event is rising above challenges, and according to Lt. Colonel Grindle, extends beyond the human suffering caused by natural disasters. "Each day The Salvation Army deals with the tragedy of broken homes, broken lives and broken hearts," said Grindle. "We salute the thousands of people who strengthen the Army's ability to work miracles daily."

Young flood survivor's paintings will be on display at the dinner. The children's flood murals were made during the Children's Art Workshops held this summer at the North Dakota Museum of Art and sponsored by the Grand Forks Park District. "Rising Water, Evacuation, Fire, Return and Recovery," one for each week during the five-week program, are the stories told in the murals. They collaboratively express the children's ideas about their flood ravaged homes, schools and ruined neighborhoods. The murals also convey the children's wonderment and excitement about being on national television, having helicopters fly overhead, greeting the President of the United States and being equals with grown-ups in the drama of last spring's events.

Meeting set on Lake Bronson Visitor's Center

Area citizens are invited to a public meeting concerning the visitor's center at Lake Bronson State Park.

The meeting will be held at the Lake Bronson Legion Hall at 7 p.m. on Monday, December 15.

A presentation of the final plans and timetable of the visitor's center by Matt O'Brien, project architect, Lee Markell, landscape architect and park officials.

This will be the last opportunity for comments, concerns, suggestions and questions for the planning team.

A special presentation by Artist Kinji Akagawa on his perception of art work for the project.

Copies of the visitor center plans will be on display. Refreshments will be provided.

Santa's Penny Wars at Franklin Middle School

Santa's Penny Wars – a fund raising effort for the Franklin Middle School greenhouse project – is taking place this week, December 8-12, at Franklin Middle School.

"Nice rules" are: Each fourth hour class teacher will provide a collecting bucket and keep it secure. Rules are posted in each room. Fourth hour students should bring pennies to put in their own buckets. The highest number of "penny points" counted in each of the grades will earn a pizza party during fourth hour on December 19. The room with the highest number of points in all three grades will earn pop with their pizza.

"Naughty rules" include: Other people from other classes can deposit silver coins (nickels, dimes, quarters or half dollars) in the buckets of their other classes as they go through the school day. Putting silver in another room's class bucket is "naughty" because those coins are subtracted from the number of pennies in the bucket. There is no way of keeping silver out of the buckets. Students can only keep adding pennies to offset the silver.

By the end of the week Santa will know who's been naughty and nice. The greenhouse project is in memory of long time FMS teacher Al Krause. Funds raised during Santa's Penny Wars will be matched by the FMS Student Council.

GHS Student Council holiday decorating contest

The Goodridge High School Student Council will sponsor a holiday yard decorating contest for residents of the Goodridge area.

Prizes of $25, $15 and $10 will be awarded.

Participants must register by December 19 by calling Linda at 378-4134 during the day or Tiana at 378-4321 in the evening. Winners will be announced during the week of December 21.

Women of Trinity to send gifts to children in Ada

For a number of years the Women of Trinity have been sending gifts to children at Los Milpas. This year they will be sending toys to children in Ada, and the gifts will be delivered to Karen Lutz of "Youth and Family Ministry" at Grace Lutheran Church in Ada.

Gifts should be wrapped and labeled indicating the gender and age of the child for whom the gift would be appropriate. Also, naming the item would be helpful for those distributing gifts.

Everyone is invited to take part in this event. Gifts may be brought to Trinity Lutheran Church by December 14 and placed in a box labeled "Gifts for Ada, MN."

Trinity Women to hold Christmas celebration

Trinity Women of the ELCA will hold its annual Christmas celebration this evening, Wednesday, December 10 in the church dining room.

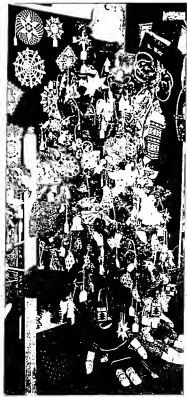
Senior Craft & Gift Shop – a TRF shopping experience

by Kathi Carlson
The Times Reporter

It all starts with a [illegible] that will [illegible] imports in a [illegible] you had best go out of town. But if you are looking for Christmas gifts handmade by area folks who know the value of a dollar, you definitely want to check out the Senior Craft & Gift Shop located at the Heritage Community Center in Thief River Falls.



Christmas ornaments of every description weigh down the branches of a tree at the Senior Craft & Gift Shop in Thief River Falls. Hand-crocheted doilies in an assortment of sizes, colors and patterns hang from a rack in front of the tree and are pinned to a board on the wall behind it. Several nostalgic monkeys made from wool socks sit beneath the tree. Open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., the shop is located in the Heritage Community Center.

The Senior Craft & Gift Shop offers gifts for every season and every reason. While the shop is small, the shelves are full of interesting, carefully crafted items made by area seniors.

Infants will be kept warm by knit sweaters, caps, mittens, scarves and blankets available in an assortment of soft pastels as well as bold primary colors. Crocheted afghans and colorful quilts serve the same purpose. A beautiful cradle would make a wonderful lifelong gift for the mother-to-be on your list.

Children of all ages would delight in the assortment of stuffed animals found at the shop. Monkeys made from gray wool socks bring back memories of days gone by and are a toy that children of every generation should own. The classic Raggedy Ann and Andy are available in different sizes and want to be hugged. In addition to some other cuddly dolls, there are clothes for Cabbage Patch Kids and Barbies. A sturdy train made in a woodcrafter's shop is ready to provide hours of entertainment for a young engineer. Every little one should have his or her own rocking chair and a stool – to reach places he or she shouldn't!

Other practical gifts include brightly pattered running board covers and rugs – loomed and braided. A braided denim rug would be as practical on the back porch as it would be attractive in front of the sofa in the family room. Practical, beautiful and not commonly found are the embroidered pillowcases with intricate crocheted edging.

"Lovely" shirred fabric jewelry boxes, available in a variety of sizes and colors, would be as appropriate for and appreciated by a teenager as they would be a grandmother. The tissue box cover that looks like an upholstered sofa could adorn the bedside table of a nursing home resident or a preteen, where it might double as a couch for Barbie and Ken.

Hand-knit and crocheted afghans of every color and pattern can be found neatly folded on the shelves of the Senior Craft & Gift Shop along with an assortment of quilts. While some are patchwork comforters made from recycled clothing and yard goods, others are pieced quilts made from new, carefully chosen coordinating fabrics. All are warm and represent many hours of craftsmanship. One can also find an assortment of decorative pillows and functional lap quilts that fold into pillows.

The selection of knit sweaters and outdoor accessories extends to adult sizes and is complemented by a collection of sweatshirts – appliqued, cross-stitched and decorated in a western motif.

The shop has a variety of decorative items – every day and seasonal – for every room of every home made from just about every medium imaginable.

Woodcrafts include ever-popular birdhouses – both decorative and functional, shelves, occasional tables that double as magazine racks, clocks, and some beautiful scroll saw pieces to name a few.

Popular trends in collectibles are not overlooked at the Senior Craft and Gift Shop. Delicate, hand-painted porcelain cups and saucers, plates and tea pots can be found on the shelves as can ceramic "Snow Babies" and whimsical snowmen. A heavenly host of angels – the most popular collectible of the day – adorn the shelves of the store. Tiny crocheted angels with stiffened skirts are said to "fly" out the door as fast as they come in! Candles are making a comeback and a number of them, decorated with dainty pressed flowers, were spotted at the shop.

One of the most impressive, yet inexpensive, collections is the assortment of crocheted doilies. The exquisite pieces are available in white and ecru in a variety of sizes, shapes and patterns.

Among the many holiday decorations is a huge variety of tree ornaments – everything from crocheted snowflakes to reindeer made of corks.

The people who make these items have at least one thing in common. They are all 55 years or older, the only requirement for eligibility to make and display items at a senior craft shop.

The Senior Craft & Gift Shop in Thief River Falls is part of a nonprofit senior program of the Inter County Community Council (ICCC) in Oklee. The council also oversees senior shops in Bagley, Erskine, Red Lake Falls, Fosston and Oklee. The ICCC takes care of the major bookkeeping and distributes checks to the hundreds of seniors whose handcrafted items provide inventory for the shops.

Housed in the Heritage Community Center, the shop pays no rent. When the City of Thief River Falls offered funding for the center, it was with the condition that the craft shop would occupy space there.

The shop in Thief River Falls is operated by Shirley Hince and Shirley Johnson. Each are paid for 20 hours a week through the program and donate many more hours because "We love it," says Hince. The pride of these two women is evident in the shop's neat appearance and careful attention to display.

There are over 700 individual crafters from Thief River Falls and the surrounding area on the roster, and no eligible crafter is turned away. The women, in fact, are always looking for new crafters and items for the shop. Both sincerely enjoy the seniors, and Hince commented how "appreciative they (the seniors) are when their items sell." They enjoy their customers, too, and are always anxious to offer assistance or just visit.

Visitors from all over the United States including Alaska have shopped at the Senior Craft & Gift Shop as have Canadians and a number from overseas – even China! Some come back year after year or every time they visit Thief River Falls. Because of the variety of merchandise, you could visit the shop every day for a week and see something different every day.

Open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, the Senior Craft & Gift Shop offers everything a busy shopper could want – a great selection of high-quality, reasonably-priced merchandise, helpful and friendly staff and convenient parking – everything the high rent mall shops with the fancy names offer but sometimes fail to deliver.

Adorable stuffed animals, Raggedy Ann and Andy and the unfinished child's rocker are among the many gift items for children available at the Senior Craft & Gift Shop located in the Heritage Community Center in Thief River Falls.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Jenna Tsuklehl
Lincoln High School

A few nights ago I was watching Dateline with my family. The topic was about a family that had decided to adopt two girls that were sisters. This is something that I am particularly sensitive to because I am adopted.

As I watched, I discovered that the family that adopted them already had three biological children. When they adopted the two sisters, the adoption agency refused to give them the full background on the two girls. The family discovered the girls' problems the hard way. The girls were disobedient, did poorly in school, caused fights and arguments in the house, one girl ate continuously no matter how full she felt. The family later learned she had been starved as a baby. The other one was so scared, she wouldn't let anyone touch her. She was raped as a child. The family had to go back to the adoption agency and order them to give the girls' background.

As I was listening to this, I discovered how lucky I am. I have two wonderful parents that have taught me so much. Luckily, the agency they went through supplied all the necessary information on my background. The adopted parents of the sisters were loving and everything, but they tried too hard to make up for what their biological parents messed up on. The girls' adoptive parents showed too much discipline, were too restricting, and in the end the girls admitted they felt like even their adoptive parents didn't love them.

My parents put a lot of restrictions on me, but they know that they have to give me some freedom. I don't always like the rules in our house, but what teenager does? I learn to live with it, although sometimes it may take longer than other times.

I always think that kids who are adopted are lucky because they have been given a second chance. It's almost, in a sense, like being reborn.

I feel like I was given a second chance. I was abandoned on the front step of the police station in Seoul, South Korea. The police found me and sent me to the adoption agency. The only thing they knew was my birth date, my given name at birth, and my weight and size. No one knows who my biological parents are. I would eventually like to find out, but I can wait a few more years.

In the sisters' case, I assume they don't want to know. Who knows. One girl ended up starting a family of her own. The other ended up being arrested numerous times on charges of prostitution and drug abuse. I am glad I never ended up that way.

It's scary though. Sometimes I get scared. I have no clue as to what's in my family tree. How do I know that a certain type of cancer doesn't run in my blood family? I don't know what kind of diseases, if any, are apparent in my family. It's scary thinking that in the future, I may end up with some incurable disease.

However, I don't want to think about that now. I just want to concentrate on my life one day at a time. I intend to go to college and enjoy my life. From there, who knows!

Nordhagen family reunion held recently

[illegible] descendants of Olaf and Anna Nordhagen gathered for a family reunion recently, including six of the seven Nordhagen children. Gatherings were held at the rural Thief River Falls home of Les and Dorothy Nordhagen and at the Lloyd and Lillian Rux home on Union Lake near Erskine. The reunion was planned and coordinated by Denise Nordhagen and Lillian Rux.

The highlight of the reunion was a bus tour of the Rosewood area where the Nordhagen family lived. The tour included stops at the church the family attended, two of the one-room schools the Nordhagen children attended and a family cemetery. The group especially enjoyed a stop at the farm where they had lived. Gerald Moldskress resides there now and graciously invited the family to explore the farm and take pictures. He even invited the family into his home where the seven Nordhagen children had grown up. The tour inspired much reminiscing and marveling at how things had changed. Many memories were shared.

The Nordhagen families attending the reunion included: Oscar Nordhagen of Glide, OR and his daughters, Janice Stone of Glide and Kathy Lugate of Valencia, CA; Mildred Nordhagen Fynskov of White City, OR; Les and Dorothy [illegible] of Thief River Falls [illegible] Morro Bay [illegible] Steve and Diane [illegible] Rick, Mary, Chad [illegible] Nordhagen and [illegible] Stanley Bergen, all of Thief River Falls; Ron Nordhagen of Portland, OR; Gerry and Vivian Nordhagen and their family, Ronald, [illegible] and Miranda Kenton [illegible] and Anna Tucker, all of White City, OR and Eric Stephens and Jessica Nordhagen of Portland, OR; and Lloyd and Lillian Nordhagen Rux of Thief River Falls and their family, Larry Dean and Sarah Ann Cooper of Renton, WA, Paul Cooper and Molly McCoy of Kent, WA, [illegible] Quill and Kimberly, Kelsey and Katie Rux, all of Minot, ND; Howard Rux of Thief River Falls; Cory, Nichole, Andrew, Autumn and Josie Merrill of Rapid City, SD; Loren Rux and Karen Rhinberger of Thief River Falls and Alison Rux of Moorhead.

Sylvia Nordhagen VanWald of Roseburg, OR was the only one of the seven Nordhagen children unable to attend due to ill health. Her daughter, Diane and Diane's husband, Mike Rutmiller of Chino Hills, CA attended the reunion.

Christmas Songs

Have your children ring jingle bells as you all sing about the meaning of the holiday season with the following songs.

Christmastime

(Tune: "Do You Know the Muffin Man")

I am glad it's Christmastime,
Christmastime, Christmastime,
I am glad it's Christmastime,
A special time of year.
It's time to give and time to share,
Time to love and show you care,
For friends and family everywhere

Five Jingle Bells

Hanging on the door
One fell off and rolled away
Now there are just four.
Four gold jingle bells
Ringing loud and free
One fell off and rolled away
Now there are just three.
Three gold jingle bells
Shiny, bright and new
One fell off and rolled away
Now there are just two.
Two gold jingle bells
Ringing in the sun
One fell off and rolled away
Now there is just one.
One gold jingle bell
Proudly jingles on
It fell off and rolled away,
And now our song is done.

Traditions Can Strengthen Families

It is the holiday season again, and here we are doing a lot of the same holiday-type things we've done for the past umpteen years, and we will keep doing them over and over and over again.

Psychologists say that there are important reasons why we do such things every year as decorate trees and light candles. These and other traditions help us define who we are. They give us a sense of belonging and therefore a sense of well-being. They link us to the past and help us transfer our spiritual, religious and cultural values, and our history to our children.

Kids especially need rituals. As they grow, rituals become symbols that give reassurance of their safety, their own self-worth and the dependability of their parents' love and protection.

So spend some time thinking about and creating traditions for your family. Traditions can be as simple as putting up a homemade decoration each year or they can be as elaborate as a family meal at Grandma's house.

SOMETHING TO TALK ABOUT

Talk about the traditions your family has.

ON MY MIND

Kim Chadwick-Quade

How Lovely Are Your Branches!

What's green and sheds and you can't wait to get it in the house? And once it's in the house, you can't wait to get it out! A Christmas tree, of course.

The Christmas tree is a holiday tradition, although I'm not well-versed on its origination. I know that our family has always had a tree. And ever since I remember, it's been a real tree. Again, I'm not sure how this came to be, I just know it's so.

Here's why I think my family chooses a live tree at Christmas:

- The family that freezes together stays together. There's something special about standing in a cold parking lot or tromping around a tree farm ruminating on a spruce, balsam or Norway pine. It's a challenge to find that "perfect" holiday specimen - tall enough (there is the ceiling to consider), wide enough and full enough (no Charlie Brown trees allowed, unless we've waited until the last minute).

I remember my dad (none too patiently, either) holding each tree at arm's length for my mother's inspection. We always cheered when the final selection came within the first five viewings.

- We like to take bets on whether or not the tree will fit in the trunk of the car and stay there until we reach our driveway. Hopefully the odds are in our favor that the tree does not end up being someone else's hood ornament. Did anyone remember to bring twine?

- Setting the tree up in the living room tests each of our attributes. Someone has to hold the door (while letting in hordes of frigid air) while another shoves the tree through the frame while everyone else screams, "Try not to get many needles on the carpet!" (They know too well whose job it is to pick up these prickly pines - one by one.)

Cheers are again heard when the trunk fits in the tree stand on the first try. Small pieces of board and nails aren't needed to compensate for a crooked trunk or an overzealous man with a saw. Setting a tree straight also evaluates our holiday cheer. The first family member to lose their patience while everyone shouts "a little to the left" or "no, no, a little more to the right" is dubbed a Christmas Scrooge. (Next year they get to pick up dropped needles.) It's also a blessing when the tree doesn't have to be wired to the wall in order for it to stand erect.

Trimming a live tree requires skill and special attention. Placement of the tree's "good" side away from the wall is a necessity. Secondly, filling gaping holes with lights and large ornaments is another must. Extra Band-Aids are usually on hand for those extra prickly jobs.

A real tree provides a conversation piece and a chance for reflection. We get to sit around afterward and say to each other, "This is the best tree we've ever had. Do you remember the year..."

A real tree also gives us something to worry about. Is it going to fall over when the cat jumps on it? Did someone remember to water it? Is it too close to the heating element? Have we used too many extension cords? Why is it losing its needles so fast? Yikes, it could start on fire!

There might be something to be said for an artificial tree. We could put it together (once) and decorate it (once). And at the end of the Christmas season we could store it in the basement (ornaments and all) covered with a big plastic bag. Then when the season arrives next year - all the work is done. Just haul it up from the basement and have a Merry Christmas!

The Duttons provide Christmas concert

The Duttons, a musical group, will provide a Holiday Christmas Concert in Thief River Falls at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, December 13, at the Lincoln High School Auditorium. This holiday event is part of the 1997-98 Entertainment Series in Thief River Falls.

The Duttons have accumulated a track record in just a little over four years of full-time professional touring that has demonstrated immense audience appeal. Their popularity with hundreds of audiences across the United States, Canada, and Europe is the result of a grass roots movement which quickly led to the early retirement of Dean, the father, from his university position as a professor of economics.

In the fall of 1991 Dean took a "one time" semester leave from the university so that the family could have the experience of touring together in what was projected as a modest schedule. The response was overwhelming; in four months the Duttons gave 111 concerts from Vancouver, British Columbia to Rome, Italy.

That fall turned out to be just the beginning. Since that time The Duttons have performed extensively throughout the United States and have toured many countries throughout the world, appearing on some of the world's largest television networks.

Their preparation for these tours, however, began much earlier. Each child began a study of the classical violin between the ages of three and five. Years of practice resulted in participation in many youth and professional orchestras and symphonies, including roles as concert masters and section leaders, soloists with symphonies, fiddle champions, and finally in the formation of the wide variety of instruments and musical styles that the Duttons exhibit.

The United Nations selected the Dutton Family to record and perform the theme song for the 1994 International Year of the Family. The Duttons have also recently experienced three other career milestones: Their first Nashville recording contract, the filming of their first television special, and the formation of the Dutton Foundation to aid children in need.

Tickets for this concert and other concerts in the Entertainment Series are available at The Times, Kezar Music, SuperValu and [illegible] or from Cindy Tsukichi at 681-[illegible].

"TO THE RETIREE WHO WANTS TO PROTECT YOUR MONEY, INCOME, AND ASSETS FROM BEING WIPED OUT!"

Retirees who have not set up proper strategies can have all of their net worth wiped out when someone in the family goes into a nursing home. The government can literally take your CD's, house, Social Security, pension checks, IRA's, investments... you name it! One of the biggest myths around is that Medicare will pay for nursing home expenses. This is completely WRONG! In fact, Medicare usually pays NOTHING towards the cost of staying in a long term facility! YOU are responsible for every dime of long term care expenses! Many people think that Medicaid will pick up the costs of being in a nursing home. That's true. But, they will only pay after you've lost everything you own! You have to be broke before they kick in a dime! The laws are constantly changing. These changes add to frustration when a spouse or loved one has or is about to enter a long term care facility. Don't let this happen to you. You need the information that will teach you how to avoid being a victim of our government's awful secret. You can learn what you need to know by getting a FREE new report called, "How To Protect Your Life's Savings From Being Taken by Medicaid!" You can get your copy by calling 1-800-688-5407, 24 hrs., for a FREE recorded message. Don't delay call NOW before it's too late.

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. My checks go directly into my bank account. I will be changing banks soon but want to keep direct deposit. How do I change where my checks go?

A. When your new account is set up, you can either complete form SF-1199, which the new bank will send to Social Security, or you can contact us directly and provide the new bank information. Warning: Do not close your old bank account until the change has taken place with a check received in the new account.

Q. Is it true that Social Security can collect incorrect payments from someone's tax refund?

A. Yes. Delinquent debts meeting program requirements can be collected by the Treasury Department and tax refund offsets are the most common method used. Procedures of this type have been in existence for several years.

- Plows travel slower than other vehicles. Reduce your speed.
- Never drive into a snow cloud.
- Be certain which lane a plow and its blade are in before attempting to pass.
- Do not take chances on winter roadways.
- Remember that snow removal employees are working to make the roads safer by plowing and sanding. Give them room to do their job.
- Keep your lights on.

For 24-hour road condition reports, call 1-800-542-0220.
